GOV. FOSS SIGNS EIGHT-HOUR AND FIFTY-FOUR-HOUR BILLS; LABOR WINS GREAT VICTORIES

Executive In Statement Explains Approval of Fifty-Four Hour Measure Was Influenced By Agreement of Employes to Make No Further Demand for Years; New Statute Protects Women and Children

ORGANIZED labor in Massachusetts yesterday saw the culmination of one of its longest and most determined fights when Governor Foss affixed his signature to the eight-hour bill for employes on public works and the fifty-four-hour bill for women and minors. Both measures were signed at 5:40 p. m.

They were the two most important measures presented to the Legislature by organized labor this year. By their passage Massachusetts takes front rank in the granting of shorter hours to men, women and children employes.

The peaceful persuasion bill, on which executive action was also expected, remained untouched. The Governor has until to-morrow night to act on it. Men who have talked with the Governor about this bill would not be surprised if he vetoes it.

That the Governor would sign the eight-hour bill was a foregone conclusion. The fifty-four-hour bill, however, was generally understood to be slated for a veto—at least up to two days ago. The Governor explains, in a statement issued last night, that the fiftyfour-hour measure becomes law as a result of an agreement by the textile union officials that "its passage means a cessation of agitation for shorter hours in Massachusetts for years to come, or until other States have come in line or gone ahead of our own."

EXPLAINS SIGNIN G OF 54-HOUR BILL.

The Governor had been given to understand that the passage of the fifty-four hour bill had been engineered through legislative trickery. An agreement had been reached, he was told, for the passage of a fifty-five hour bill. The story was that the Governor had helped to arrange this truce, and that a Republican Senator violated his part of the agreement in the hope of getting the Governor "in bad" either with the textile manufacturers or with the employes.

A shorter working day for women and children is admitted by everyone to be desirable. It is also admitted that such reduction of hours must not proceed faster than is compatible with the prosperity of the industries upon which the welfare alike of the employer and employed depends. It is desirable, further, that there should be reasonable stability in the law upon this subject, and that constant change should be avoided. The reduction of the hours of employment from fifty-six to fifty-five seemed, for various reasons, to be a fair adjustment for this year, and it was understood that such action would meet the approval of all parties concerned. MADERO'S MODEL IS THE UNITED STATES

His Devotion to Liberty Secret of the Power of Mexico's New Leader.

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

EL PASO, Texas, May 27.—Diaz called himself President, but his was the rule of a dictator. His resignation was not a resignation, but an abdication. Corral, vice-president, in France for the good of his skin, went out with Diaz. De la Barra, Diaz's secretary of state, and, per incident, friend of Madero, stepped into the presidency. De la Barra is President now, President by the wish, permission, selection of Madero.

By his manifesto of Friday, Madero laid down his provisional presidency. He remained as he phrased it, only the head of his party, as a mere captain of politics, having no official rating. Madero is simply a citizen, and yet, as every Mexican knows, Madero, not De la Barra, is the real ruler, and has collected within himself as much of power as ever rested in the unchecked hands of Diaz.

Will Obey Madero's Nod.

De la Barra will obey the merest nod of Madero. Every official under De la Barra will answer and implicitly act upon the least of Madero's signals. When a man has succeeded to the unfitted chieftainship of a great people he is worth the study of mankind.

Who is Madero? Why and how does he occur? These are questions that put themselves.

One of the first impressions of Madero is that—in the phrase of steamboat men—he is over-engined for his beam. His manner is serious, his figure slight, his air hurried. His head is big, bulging with a moving brain. The body which supports it is small and, while well formed in every pose and balance, seems but an insufficient foundation for a mind which works like a Corliss engine.

Were Madero an American I should expect him to break down, to fly to pieces, to one day reach the scrap heap with a crash.

Since he is not American, but a Mexican, I confess myself on that fly-to-flinders point without opinion. In the Mexican world, as in every world, men do nine-tenths of their thinking with the eye. This makes the mastery, the supremacy of Madero the more mysterious.

"Kindly, Animated Eyes."

There is little or less in his looks to catch and hold folk impressively. He is under five feet five in height. Any scales which will register 140 pounds should have no trouble in showing you his weight. Good forehead, the hair worn away a bit on some wheel of thought; brown, kindly, animated eyes, a Michael Angelo nose, wide mouth, and chin hidden behind a scrubby Van Dyck beard and moustache—that should be Madero's photograph.

Madero was educated in California and France. His father was edu-

PRESIDENT TAFT CONGRATULATES NEW MEXICAN EXECUTIVE

WASHINGTON, May 27.—President Taft this afternoon telegraphed his congratulations to President de la Barra of Mexico as follows:

"I extend my congratulations to your excellency upon your elevation to the chief magistracy of the Republic of Mexico, confident that your conduct of the high office will conduce to the peace and welfare of Mexico and to the happiness and prosperity of the Mexican people."

Diaz Routs Mob That Attacks His Train

MEXICO CITY, May 27.—Alighting from his special train with pistol in each hand, General Diaz, retiring President of Mexico, led the defence of his train against a rebel band of 150 strong at Tepeyahualco, on the way to Vera Cruz yesterday afternoon. The old warrier completely routed the rebels with a loss of twenty killed and thirty wounded.

Diaz is now in Vera Cruz at the home of J. B. Body, a prominent American, and will sail May 31.

Fifteen persons killed in riots at San Luis Potosi yesterday when a mob of three thousand tried to get into the penitentiary and release the political prisoners.

GATES TELLS INSIDE STEEL TRUST STORY

WASHINGTON, May 27.—John W. Gates to-day under oath laid bare before the Stanley Steel Trust investigating committee these startling facts concerning the Steel Trust and the steel industry of the United States:

The Steel Trust was born at an all night meeting at the home of J. P. Morgan in New York and had its inspiration in threats by Andrew Carnegie to go into railroad construction and steel tube manufacture. Carnegie had been a demoralizing influence in the steel industry and it was feared he would become troublesome in the railroad industry.

Carnegie was paid $323,000,000 in bonds for his controlling interest in the Carnegie Steel Company, for which he had given an option one year before for $160,000,000 Incidentally he pocketed the $1,000,000 option forfeit.

The Tennessee Coal & Iron Company was acquired by the Steel corporation after a squeeze of the syndicate controlling the majority of stock without the transfer of a dollar in cash.

Arranged by J. P. Morgan.

J. P. Morgan and his partner, George W. Perkins, arranged the shifting of securities. The majority stock holders in the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company received about $90 value in steel corporation securities for their stock which they had refused to sell to Morgan a year before for $150 per share.

Gates made it quite clear that the acquisition of Tennessee coal and iron of the steel trust was by no means an altruistic effort to prevent the spread of the panic of 1907 as has been repeatedly asserted. That was a mere blind. Morgan wanted Tennessee coal and iron, and regarded the time as propitious he applied the screws.

A year before Morgan had tried to buy stock in the concern, Gates charges, and was turned down.

The steel corporation cannot control the steel industry in the United States, according to Mr. Gates, except in special lines. Arbitrary abuse and power gained through ownership of transportation companies, however, would enable the Steel Trust to crush independent operators forced to use the Lake Superior region ore.

Favors an Open Market.

Gates, controlling stockholder in the Republic Coal & Iron Company, told the committee that he favored an open market with competition and the survival of the fittest. He told in detail the story of the formation of the Steel Trust, of Andrew Carnegie's Scotch thrift and the long midnight conference that proceeded the final agreement. He sidestepped a question as to the tangible value behind Steel common stock, and when asked as to J. P. Mor-

BATTLE OVER BULL WEALTH TRACED TO PARLIAMENT OF RELIGIONS AT WORLD'S FAIR

Widow of World-Famous Musician, Then in Agony of Great Grief, First Attracted, It Is Declared, to the Weird Teachings of the East as Expounded Before Congress of Creeds at Chicago Exposition in 1893

FOLKS who are close to the inner circle said last night that if there hadn't been a World's Fair at Chicago in the year 1893, with its long-to-be-remembered Parliament of Religions, there might not be a contest to-day in the Probate Court of York County, State of Maine, over the $500,000 estate of the widow of Ole Bull.

To the Parliament of Religions in Chicago there came, among others, the Swami Vivekanenda, who appears to have been a sort of chief priest of the Blessed Ramakrishna. Both of these holy men have since died. Vivekanenda, before he crossed over, wrote a book about Ramakrishna—"My Master," the swami, or priest, called it—in which he said:

"He was known as Paramhamsa Sprimat Ramakrishna, and is regarded by thousands of his fellow-countrymen as a divine incarnation, although he would not claim for himself any high position."

Vivekanenda made a decided impression in Chicago in '93 and he was immediately taken up by some of our best people, mainly among the intellectuals. Folks from Cambridge, Mass., fussed over Vivekanenda quite a whole lot.

The friend from India went all over the United States delivering a lecture entitled "Raja-Yoga," a study of the control of the mind.

To attain this control of the mind, as laid down by the Swami Vivekanenda, the novice has to go through some eight steps, or preparatory stages. In the end the soul, or mind, becomes detached from material things and the individual takes on the nature of a god.

Down at the base of the spine, according to Vivekanenda and other gents who have come over from India, there reposes the kundalini, a "residual energy." This is the stuff that dreams are made of. In normal persons it lies dormant, in a triangular aperture, giving rise to hallucinations, visions, dreams and other things.

In order to be a god—to rise above the things of earth—you have got to move the kundalini upwards until it touches the brain. This is done by way of the susumna canal.

HOW TO CONTROL THE COSMIC ACTIVITIES.

Some of the folks in history's pages have accomplished the feat by accident, without knowing it. Napoleon H. Bonaparte is among those mentioned. Also Alexander, Julius J. Caesar, and Sayers and Heenan.

The trick can be accomplished without accident, however, simply by putting one's mind to it. Mr. Nicolo Ruberto, ex-barber and masseur, who is over from Naples to testify in Alfred for Mrs. Bull's daughter, has explained the process, as he was given to understand it, in Eliot, Me.

According to Signor Ruberto, you sit up straight, and by a system of breathing—closing the right nostril and inhaling through the left—start the kundalini. Once you get it going it makes a genius of you. You become super-sensuous, super-conscious. Your mind roams far off in the abstract, detached from mere material things of every nature. You have achieved control of the cosmic activities, like a god.

It all reads simple enough, no doubt—or, does it?—but the problem is to go through the course of scientific breathing with such success as to start the kundalini.

After the World's Fair, Mr. Vivekanenda came East, stopping off first in New York. Among other people of note who were attentive to the Indian priest in New York was Francis H. Leggett, the millionaire grocer. Mrs. Ole Bull was a warm friend of the Leggetts.

The unfortunate Miss Sarah J. Farmer had already established the "Greenacre Conferences" in Eliot, Me., just outside of Portsmouth, and in 1894, it was said yesterday, Mrs. Ole Bull hired a house in Brattle street, Cambridge, for Vivekanenda to lecture in. In this year the "Cambridge Conferences" were established. Dr. Lewis G. Janes, who died in 1902 in Greenacre—pursued by a "malign influence," some said—was the director.

Mrs. Bull Grief-Stricken.

At this time of her life, some of her friends say, Mrs. Ole Bull was peculiarly susceptible. She had just suffered the greatest of earthly griefs, the death of gan's motives, whether the Steel Trust was formed to prevent competition, he laughingly invited the committee to "Get him here and let him tell."

GATES TELLS INSIDE STORY OF STEEL TRUST'S BIRTH

J. P. Morgan will be summoned as a witness in the investigation. To-day's revelations make this necessary.

There will be no escape for him, and the investigation will be continued if necessary through a year in order to get the big financier's testimony. Moreover, committee members say that to-day's proceedings merely scratched the surface and paved the way for the testimony of Morgan, Carnegie and Judge Gary. There is information at hand that even John D. Rockefeller will be called if there is reason to believe he can throw any light on the subjects under discussion. His name was brought into the testimony of Gates to-day.

Story of the Great Merger.

When the committee assembled this morning with all members present except Martin W. Littleton, Chairman Stanley swore Mr. Gates and without further ceremony asked him to tell of the merger of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company with the steel corporation.

This is the crux of the entire situation. The sole basis for the merger was the approval of former President Roosevelt, who refused to permit his Attorney-General to attack the merger in the courts. Mr. Gates launched forth:

"In 1904, I think a syndicate took control of the majority stock of the company. There were no bonds. rant B. Schley and Charles S. Guthrie were given authority to sell at a profit, but not at a loss without consulting the syndicate. We purchased in the open market about 200,000 shares several of U. S. Steel taking 18,000 shares each. There were fifteen men in the syndicate. On my return from Europe on November 6 I read in a newspaper that the Tennessee Company had been sold to the Steel Corporation.

"I went to the office of Mr. Schley and found that negotiations were pending between Frick, Gary and Morgan on one side, and Schley, Hanna and others representing the Tennessee Company. All were at Morgan's house. They offered in exchange for Tennessee Company stock an equal amount of United States Steel second mortgage fives. It was not enough and I finally accepted on a basis of 119¾ per cent., accepting Steel Corporation Sinking Fund fives.

"We met at the office of the Tennessee Company next morning to tender our resignations. I told Judge Gary he was simply buying a majority of the stock and taking our resignations. Judge Gary said he did not care about the minority stockholders. I insisted he must agree to pay the minority the same as he paid us and before we closed the deal he passed a resolution to that effect."

Value of the Stocks.

"Colonel Oliver H. Payne, J. B. Duke, E. J. Berwind, G. B. Schley, J. W. Gates, A. N. Brady, G. A. Kessler, Oakleigh Thorne, E. Wogleby, H. S. Black, F. D. Stout, G. W. Simpson, G. A. Topping, G. W. French and S. G. Cooper."

Mr. Stanley—Which securities were of the greater value—your stock or the steel bonds?"

Gates—Our stock would have sold from $120 to $100 per share. The steel corporation securities were quoted at $80 to $85. On the basis of transfer (the security was quoted at $80) I gave one share of Tenessess stock for $96.

"We estimated it from $300,000,000 to $700,000,000. Besides, the company's coal acreage was enormous and we had lime mines and a thirty-mile railroad with a plant unexcelled in facilities," said Gates, sadly.

Stanley: "How convenient to assembly were your ores?"

Bates: "I think in the Birmingham district we could assemble enough material to make a ton of pig iron cheaper than any where else in the world. A ton of pig iron under modern methods in the Birmingham district can be produced for less than $9. Nowhere else in the United States can it be produced for less than $11 a ton. We spent money on our plant as fast as we could intelligently."

Stanley: "Was there any other steel concern situated as favorably as the Tennessee Company with reference to material?"

The Roosevelt Letter.

Gates: "At that time, no; at present the Republic Steel and Iron Company, but it makes pig iron only."

At this point Chairman Stanley brought out the Roosevelt letter, explaining the action of himself and Attorney General Bonaparte in approving the merger, and Gates listened eagerly.

"It is stated on high authority," said Stanley, "that at the time of the Tennessee Company acquisition by the Steel Company corporation, a certain trust company would have failed if help had not been given. Among the assets of this company were stocks of the Tennessee Company, and application was made to the Steel Corporation to purchase this stock to prevent the wreck of the trust company and avert a panic.

"Who flew that signal of distress of the Tennessee Company?" asked Stanley.

"There are many underground wires in New York," commented Gates. "I am told a trust company applied to the clearing house for assistance. Examiners were sent to the trust company and ascertained several millions had been loaned on Tennessee Company stock. As a result a gentleman was invited to Morgan's house and Morgan suggested that to relieve the congestion, the steel corporation might acquire the Tennessee stock. This is hearsay. Negotiations followed.

Morgan Offered $150.

"The same high authority," continued Stanley, "states that on November 4, 1[illegible] that Judge ary and Mr. Frick informed him that, as a mere business transaction, they did not want the Tennessee stock, and little benefit would come to the steel corporation fro mits acquisition. Also would open them to charges of monopoly, although unfunded."

"Morgan," replied Gates, "offered easier $150 a share for the stock just the year before. The Tennessee property is worth many times the property of the Steel Corporation.

"It is said," insisted Stanley, "there was a combination of bankers, Morgan at its head, to stay the panic and prevent further losses. Did the bankers lose?"

Gates smiled broadly. "It is a mattear of opinion," he said. "I never heard rumors of danger that Morgan was to make an assignment."

"Was there any stress expressed among the Tennessee stockholders?" asked Stanley.

"I knew of no stress among them. Not a dollar changed. It was a shift of securities. I regarded it as a forced sale."

"Did Morgan have influence in this direction?"

"I don't know. It is hard to tell where a man's influence starts or ends in this world. I think we lost money. The trust company needed ten millions. I got it from a syndicate made up in Morgan's office. I think George W. Perkins engineered this matter. That was after the stock surrender."

"Plenty of Independents."

"If you had perfected your Tennessee Company plant could anyone have dictated to you the price of rails?" inquired Stanley.

"We would have been in the saddle in that territory," was the reply.

"What is the price of rails?"

"Open hearth, $30; Bessimer $28. Before the rail pool twelve years ago, the value of rails carried from $15 to $25 per ton."

"Are any independent concerns making rails?"

"Could any independent concern secure Michigan ore without having it carried part of the way by steel corporation carriers?"

"I do not know."

Mr. Gates then told of his interest in wire manufacturing companies since early in 1888, and his defferent purchases of concerns leading up to the organization of the American Steel & Wire Company, a subsidiary company of the Steel Corporation.

"What was the basis of exchange of holdings in the American Steel & and Wire Company with the Steel oCrporation?" asked Mr. Stanley.

Gates here enjoyed his first laugh.

"I am ashamed to say," he chuckled.

Stanley told some figures he had heard. "Where did you get that dope?" demanded Gates. "I got $46,800,000 steel preferred and $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 common."

Offered to Sell at $160,000,000.

At the request of the committee Mr. Gates gave a history of the organization of the steel corporation. He said it was a holding company formed by about twelve subsidiary companies, some of which control other companies, including railroads and steamship companies.

"In 1896," he began, "the price of steel was demoralized. Henry C. Frick and W. H. Moore conceived the idea of getting an option from Andrew Carnegie on the Carnegie Steel Company. He offered to sell at $160,000,000 and got a million forfeit on the option. Frick and Moore had to forfeit the million and they were sort men. The Steel Corporation was formed in 1901. Along about 1900 Morgan organized the National Tube Company, and it was making a good deal of money. Carnegie suddenly decided he would build a railroad from Pittsburg to Lake Erie. Morgan and James J. Hill were alarmed and had a conference. Carnegie was feared because he had demoralized the steel business and might demoralize the railroad business and the tube business."

Carnegie is a very shrewd man, I want to tell you," said Gates, reflectingly. Then he continued: "They sent for me and asked how to stop Carnegie. I suggested sending for Charlie Schwab. Morgan suggested Frick, but I knew Frick had not the influence needed. I got Schwab to consent to a conference. When we left, a tentative plan had been drawn up to get the steel concerns together in a holding corporation."

Carnegie Doubled His Price.

"We had to accept Carnegie's price," he resumed, "but Judge Moore got in good. The juge had not forgotten the million forfeit. He hurried to Carnegie and convinced him his bonds would be safer if the bonds should cover the National Steel Company. This made the National Steel Company plant worth $50,000,000 more. Our plans were accomplished in forty to sixty days. The Carnegie plant cost $500,000,000, of which Carnegie got $[illegible]20,000,000 for what he had agreed to sell one year before for $160,000,000."

"In what way had Carnegie demoralized the steel business?" asked Representative Beal.

"Well, you see," drawled Bates, "We had some understandings at times, and Andie kicked them over when he pleased. We made them with Carnegie and partner. Carnegie controlled every one under him, and no one could manage Carnegie. He was a bull in a china shop. The things he did might reduce or advance prices and stability was desired."

"Are there any conditions preventing independent concerns from getting large business of one class?" asked Stanley.

"Dull times," said Gates.

"Has there ever been any agreement between your company and the steel corporation looking to the fixing of prices or output?" asked Congressman Young.

"I asked the president of the Republic Company before coming here and he said he never had anything to do with any such agreement. I never had."

McGillicuddy—"What was your perpose in helping to organize the Steel Corporation?"

Gates—"To convert certain assets into cash, which I succeeded in doing." Then he was excused.

FOSS SIGNS EIGHT AND 54-HOUR BILLS

Labor Wins Two Big Victories After Years of Fighting in the Legislature.

fifty-six to fifty-five seemed, for variduction to fifty-four hours at this time, except for the fact that the representatives of the employes have agreed that such action would be accepted as a satisfactory adjustment, for a period of years, of the question of the length of the working day. Since stability of the laws is more important than a difference of a single hour in the length of a week's work, I have signed this bill, relying upon the assurance given me that it will remove occasion of controversy and create stable business conditions in some of the most important industries of this State.

Agreement By Labor.

We beseech you in behalf of our over-worked women and children of the State and in the name of humanity to sign this bill, assuring you with all the emphasis at our command that its passage means a cessation of agitation for shorter hours in Massachusetts for years to come, or until other States have come in line, or gone ahead of our own. (Signed)

Peter Cairns, president New Bedford Textile Council and president of C. L. U.; Matthew Hart, treasurer, and John Hobin, secretary, New Bedford Textile Council; John Moriarty, Carders Union, New Bedford.

Joy In Labor Camp.

There was jubilation in organized labor's camp last night over the signing of the two measures, particularly over the signing of the fifty-four hour bill, as the eight-hour bill was considered certain to become law. Here are some of the statements issued by labor leaders:

Henry Abrahams, secretary of the Boston Central Labor Union and one of the best informed labor leaders in the country:

"Governor Foss has fulfilled the expectations of his friends, and by signing the 54-hour bill assisted in placing Massachusetts in the front rank of the sisterhood of States. By taking a like lead in this country, Massachusetts will demonstrate that a reduction in the hours of labor does not necessarily mean a reduction in the output of its manufacturing establishments. The life of our men workers has been materially lengthened, by conserving their strength through a reduction of the hours of labor. In signing the 54-hour bill Governor Foss guarantees a like benefit to the women wage workers of the Commonwealth."

William H. O'Brien, president of the Boston Central Labor Union and for three years representative from Ward 16:

"I never for a minute doubted that appeal from the working women and chil- Governor Foss would make good in this dren for a few more minutes daily of God's sunshine and the home. The great industrial structure of the nation has been built only through infinite sacrifice and labor. Much as we regret it, the work of women and children has been an important factor in that upbuilding."

Mrs. Sara A. Conboy, business agent of the Roxbury Textile Workers' Union and general organizer for the United Textile Workers' Union: "The 54-hour law, in my opinion, will prove to be a blessing to the entire community. It eventually will benefit employers as well as employees. Governor Foss has lightened the burden placed upon the shoulders of our wage-working women and children by signing this bill."

U. S. NOW MODEL FOR THE MEXICANS

cated in Switzerland. The Maderos believe in education and cannot have too much. Also they obey the scriptural injunction and increase and multiply. Madero was one of fifteen children. His father was one of nineteen.

From my talk with him I got a bookish notion of Madero. He has read and burned midnight oil. His business is that of a cotton planter. But he has studied government and believes in liberty, in democracy in the right of the people to rule. A Mexican Jefferson—that is Madero. And because to his innate and book studied democracy Madero added honesty and a swerveless courage, he, for the good of the people and to emancipate them from Diaz, took the field.

Madero a Spiritualist.

There is nothing of the demagogue, nothing of the Jack Cade about Madero. He holds the people by his willingness to risk death, risk fortune for their sakes. They believe in him.

The people, nine in ten, are Catholics. Madero is a Spiritualist. They are eaters of flesh. He is a vegetarian. Their instruction is military; they thirst for glory that may be won on a field of battle. He will tell you that he is not a soldier and does not care for war-won distinction.

The Church condemns Free Masonry, and yet Madero is a Mason. His father, after whom he was named, has taken the thirty-third degree of Masonry.

In the face of all this, which might teach the herd to distrust or turn its back upon Madero, there lives no one in whom the herd more believes. The people will remember that when no other dared, his voice was raised in protest against tyranny, Madero spoke boldly out. He was locked in prison; it did not cool his courage; did not daunt his soul. He went from protest to political opposition and from the latter to open war. The others followed, but Madero showed and led the way. The people remember this and trust him.

Madero was but thirty-four years old when he began fighting Diaz. He is thirty-eight now. He has been married ten years and he and his wife are lovers. He was rich to the tune of millions. And yet he would give up ease, riches, home for a principle. It speaks well.

United States His Model.

In politics Madero's model is the United States. His issue, remembering the Diaz dictatorship, is "no-re-election." A president must not succeed himself. Madero believes in the people. Madero is an opponent of huge wealth in the hands of few while the hands of many are empty.

Free speech, free press, clean elections and unhampered vote—those are Madero's articles of faith. He is for schools, libraries, and the moral and mental uplift of the people.

You cannot consider Madero without considering his family. Their aggregated wealth runs into hundreds of millions. They give him a united support.

There are scores of Maderos, solvent, sober, industrious. There is not a black sheep among them. Also clannish as Scotch. Touch Madero, you touch every Madero. The team work of Maderos is great.

Speaking of the relations of the United States and Mexico, Madero said:

"Now that the war is ended, you that appreciate the benefits of liberty can reap the benefits of it in your relations with Mexico. One of the fruits of the revolution will be the strengthening of the relations between the United States and Mexico. Mexicans will forget any anti-American feeling they may have had, for we who know will show them that the United States is indeed a true friend.

"Many people saw in the revolution great danger internally. They would not sympathize with us because they were given to understand that the revolution meant American intervention. But by arms alone could we accomplish the liberation of the Mexican people, and my countrymen have seen the friendly feeling that has come from American sympathy with our cause. The American people have shown us strong sympathy. They knew better than others what we were fighting for. It aided us in getting the sympathy of public opinion throughout the whole world. We will not forget."

DOUBLE LEGAL STAMPS MORNINGS

NEW WAR DECLARED ON MACHINE TRUST

War has been declared between the Western shoe manufacturers and the United Shoe Machinery Company, and the Sherman anti-trust law is to be invoked by the Westerners against the great machinery corporation.

Three conferences were held in Boston during the past week between the shoe men and the officials of the United. At the last conference great excitement prevailed and the Westerners threatened Government action.

President Winslow of the Shoe Machinery Company is reported to have replied that he welcomed investigation of the methods of the company, and could not offer the Westerners better terms than they have at present.

The delegation which came to Boston represented concerns doing $20,000,000 worth of business every year and turn out 20 per cent. of the shoes manufactured in the United States. They came to protest against the royalty system in use by the Shoe Machinery Company in leasing its machines and to demand the right to buy from outside machinery companies.

Leaders Come To Boston.

The heads of the firms concerned in almost every case came to Boston. They were W. F. McElwain of McElwain & Company, St. Louis, Jackson Johnson and Frank Rand of Roberts Johnson and Rand of St. Louis, A. D. Brown of the Brown Shoe Company, St. Louis, S. W. Peters and H. W. Peters of the Peters Shoe Company, St. Louis, E. P. Reed of Rochester, N. Y., Emanuel Selz of Selz Schwab & Company, Chicago, Morton Florsheim of the Florsheim Shoe Company, Chicago, George Selby and Pearl Selby of the Portsmouth Shoe Company, Portsmouth, O.

They were reported to have come to Boston as guests of the United Shoe Machinery Company but it is stated on good authority that their visit was unsolicited and undesired and came as a result of the attack on the Shoe Machinery Company in Congress two weeks ago.

The party stopped at the Hotel Touraine and on Monday were taken down to Beverly to visit the Shoe Machinery plant. On Tuesday they conferred with President Winslow at the Summer street offices of the concern and on Thursday they had another conference.

So heated were the relations between the two parties that several St. Louis men met Winslow on Tremont street Thursday evening and engaged in angry conversation with him.

The demands of the Westerners were these:

Demand Separate Leases.

A separate lease for each machine, that is, an open market on shoe machinery. They want to buy machines where they like, to lease other American or foreign machines, to enjoy as perfect a freedom in the selection of shoe machinery as of leather and other materials. They want lower royalties than they now have to pay.

At present the shoe manufacturer must lease all his machinery from the United Shoe or he can't have any, and there are certain essential machines owned by the trust which a shoe manufacturer cannot get along without.

The use of fifty-four machines are necessary to turn out a single pair of shoes, and under the present system the entire plant must come from the United Shoe Machinery Company.

The trust officials told the Westerners that the royalty system was perfectly legal, that ordinary economy demanded that an entire plant should be furnished by the one-machine manufacturer as different makes would confuse and increase cost of production.

President Winslow yesterday refused to discuss the visit of the Western men. The shoe manufacturers were equally reticent, but it was evident that they were disappointed at the result of the conference.

Most of those who were in Boston this week came here a year ago with funds to back up Thomas G. Plant and his Wonder Machine Company in its fight against the Trust. The day before they reached town Plant sold out to the United and the Westerners lost their chance to get a complete shoe manufacturing plant which would do work that compared with the Trust machinery.

NEW STEEL TRAIL TO PACIFIC NORTHWEST

St. Paul Railroad Inaugurates To-day Through Passenger Service in Connection with Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway.

To-day is destined to be an epochal one in the history of railroading in the West. It is the day when the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad inaugurates its through train service to the Pacific coast over its new extension—the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railroad—the fifth and, probably for many years to come, the last great transcontinental railway system.

The construction of this new line has cost the St. Paul Railroad approximately $100,000,000.

The through train service which is inaugurated to-day to the Pacific Northwest also sets a new mark for luxuriousness in train service in a country which is noted for the most magnificent trains in the world. This service will consist of two trains, one, the morning train, being known as "The Columbian," making Seattle and Tacoma on a seventy-five hour schedule, while "The Olympian," a "limited" train, will leave Chicago in the evening and run on a seventy-two hour schedule.

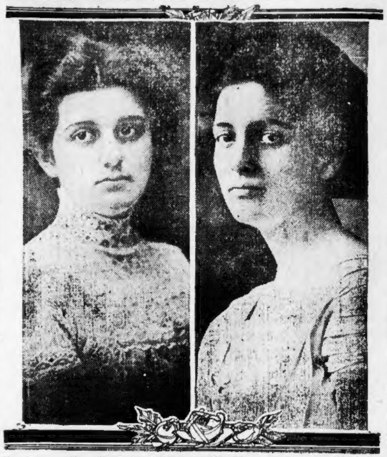
The equipment of these new trains consists of all steel drawing-room and compartment cars, standard and tourist sleeping cars, observation cars, dining cars, coaches, baggage cars, mail cars and express cars. The St. Paul road always has been noted for the excellence of its cuisine, and in these magnificent dining cars, which are fitted with all the elegance and luxuriousness of a high class hotel or club, the traditions of the road for the palatableness and superiority of its menu will be observed. This new road opens up a country that is immensely rich in its agricultural possibilities, and that in its scenic beauties is not surpassed by any other section of the country.

It has been figured that the Puget Sound Railway has opened up to the uses and for the habitations of men something like fifty thousand square miles of territory, and that it has taken into its country since construction over 100,000 settlers. ***

Radcliffe Girls to Be Brides

Harvard Men Win Sisters

MISSES FRANCES AND MARGARET BLACK



Miss Frances Mary Black (at right) and Miss Margaret Manning Black (at left), Cambridge sisters and students at Radcliffe, have become engaged respectively to Robert Ralph Lockwood, of Oklahoma City, and Rolland Mooney Edmonds, of Columbus, Ohio. The two young men were chums at Yale and at Harvard Law School.

Yale Also Figures in Intercollegiate Romance of Misses Black of Cambridge.

A PARTICULARLY charming romance that Little Dan Cupid has been working hard at for several months within the classic shades of Harvard University and Radcliffe College has reached an interesting climax and the god of love quivered his arrows last night and smiled himself into peaceful and well earned slumber.

Two sister, beautiful and gifted, students at Radcliffe, it became known yesterday, have become engaged to two former Harvard students of law who were devoted chums during their Yale college days and their Harvard law school days.

The happy sisters are Miss Frances Mary Black and Miss Margaret Manning Black. They are the daughters of Mrs. Frances M. Black of No. 12 Kirkland street, Appian Way, Cambridge.

Oklahoma and Ohio Win.

Robert Ralph Lockwood of Oklahoma City won the heart of Miss Frances and intends to carry her off to the beautiful new city of that great new State in the Southwest, where he is carving out a career in the law. Their marriage takes place this Fall.

The fiance of Miss Margaret is Rolland Mooney Edmond of Columbia, Ohio. Being the younger sister and only a Freshman, Miss Margaret has enjoined her lawyer sweetheart against taking her to his Buckeye home until she is through college.

The two Benedicts-to-be graduated from Yale in the class of '07. Then they came to Harvard and finished the Law School last year. In the meantime they had become acquainted with the attractive Black sisters and Cupid did the rest.

Secret Filters Through.

When a reporter of the Sunday AMERICAN asked the young women yesterday about their romance they demurely declined to discuss it in detail.

"We are sorry," said one of the sisters, "that the news got out. We were trying to keep it a secret until after June, anyhow."

But how could two girls, and sisters at that, keep a double engagement secret in a college full of girls? They couldn't, that's the answer!

Guild Year Book.

It is the intention of the Guild of St. Cecelia, an organization composed of the organists of the archdiocese, to issue a "Year Book," in the early Fall. The book will contain the names of the members and the churches with which they are connected. It will furnish a directory for the use of pastors who desire the services of an organist. The Rev. M. J. Scanlan is secretary of the Guild. He will be pleased to assist in furnishing organists to pastors desiring their services.

NEW BATTLE ON OVER TEACHERS' SALARIES

House May Reconsider Its Failure to Pass Bill Over Veto of Governor Foss.

Barring a previous settlement of differences between the Boston School Committee and the elementary teachers, the House of Representatives will vote again next Thursday on the Governor's veto of the teachers' salary bill. The question will be on reconsidering the failure of the House to over-ride the veto last week. A majority vote is sufficient to reconsider. A two-thirds vote is necessary to override the veto. The veto would have been over-ridden last week by a change of one vote from "nay" to "yea."

Another veto, that on the bill to extend Boylston street across the Back Fens, will be voted on next Wednesday. The advocates of the measure said last night they are not over hopeful of rounding up the two-thirds majority necessary to carry the bill over the Governor's veto.

Teachers Insist On Raise.

The Legislative Committee on Cities will meet to-morrow to consider provisions for a larger appropriation for the School Committee, so that teachers besides those in the elementary grades may receive increased salaries.

Miss Annie W. Leonard, chairman of the Salary Committee of the Boston Elementary School Teachers, declared yesterday that but for the interference of high salaried pedagogues and the appearance before Governor Foss of certain members of the School Board, the bill for an increase in the teachers' salaries would not have been vetoed.

Miss Leonard said, however, that the elementary school teachers would get what they wanted despite the veto or they would take nothing at all.

Petition for Teachers.

Miss Leonard presided yesterday at a meeting of the committee held in the Public Library. Official notification was sent to the teachers in the seventy elementary schools of the action taken by the Governor, and also that the bill will come up again in another form, perhaps on next Thursday. A letter of sympathy from the High School Association of New York was read. The independent Woman's Club of Boston as well as the Women Masters of Boston Schools, seven in number, also sent letters assuring their support.

A petition, to which 1,500 names of school teachers have already been attached, will be presented to the Legislature during the week.

The members of the committee who will visit the Governor on Thursday include: Miss Leonard, Miss Florence Goodfellow, Miss Teresa A. Dacey, Miss Julia M. Fitzpatrick, Miss Katherine A. Reagan, Miss Helen C. Laughlin, Miss Cora A. Bigelow and Miss Marguerite J. Martin.

FRENCH CRUISER IN PORT.

D'Estrees Drops Into Boston Harbor to Stay a Week.

The French cruiser D'Estrees, under command of Captain Prouhet, dropped her anchors in the upper harbor yesterday for a week's stay in Boston. At the end of her stay here she will proceed to New Foundland for her Summer cruise.

Junior Lieutenant Le Bigot, representing Captain Prouhet, made a formal call upon J. C. J. Flamand, consular agent of France at this port, remaining about an hour. Following his call Consul Flamand made his official visit to Captain Prouhet aboard the D'Estrees.

"The visit of the D'Estrees at this time does not mean anything," said Consul Flamand, "for the cruisers usually call in at Boston either in going into Northern waters for the Summer or on going South in the Fall. While they are here I shall entertain the officers to the best of my ability."

150 GUESTS INVITED.

Mr. and Mrs. Kraby Will Observe Silver Wedding To-morrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Niles G. Kraby of no. 25 Maryland street, Dorchester, will celebrate their silver wedding anniversary tomorrow night at their home. Over a hundred and fifty guests have been invited. The children of the couple will have charge of the reception and supper. They are George 5, Esther 16, Nellie 20, Thurston 22 and Goldie 23, all at home. Mr. and Mrs. Kraby were married May 29, 1886, in Boston and have lived in Roxbury for twenty years.

RUMOR MRS. DREXEL WILL SEEK DIVORCE

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—Though there have been rumors for several years past that the marital relations between Colonel Anthony J. Drexel and Mrs. Drexel have been strained, society in London, Newport, Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Baltimore, will be surprised to learn that it is stated that Mrs. Drexel may bring action for divorce.

Mrs. Drexel arrived from Europe alone a few weeks ago and has endeavored to keep her movements as quiet as possible since she came to Philadelphia.

Her intention to bring an action for divorce preceded her, however, in cablegrams to the Drexel family. No sooner had she set foot on shore at New York than the Drexels began to persuade her to reconsider the absolute resolve she had made in London to separate herself from her husband.

Mrs. Drexel, it is reported, sought the counsel of John G. Johnson, and Mr. Johnson will say nothing.

Lacking any private fortune, and so far as is known, not asking any great settlement from her enormously rich husband, Mrs. Drexel, with her maid, is living in the Morris apartments on Thirteenth street below Spruce. She engaged these apartments for six months because of "important business" with the privilege of an extension for six months longer.

JUBILEE DAY FOR 'FIGHTING NINTH'

Encouraged by the reports of the subcommittees in charge of the celebration to be held in Boston, Sunday, June 11, in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the "Fighting Ninth" Regiment's departure for the front in 1861, the general citizens' committee, comprising 600 of Boston's leading business and professional men, feel assured the affair will be a memorable occasion.

James J. Phelan of the banking firm of Hornblower & Weeks, heads the general committee of which former Congressman Joseph H. O'Neil is treasurer.

On the morning of June 11 the active regiment, Colonel John J. Sullivan commanding, escorting the veterans of the regiment, and the citizens' committee, headed by James J. Phelan, will gather at the East Armory on East Newton street. They will march to the Cathedral of the Holy Cross for a solemn high military mass. The Rev. Thomas L. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College, will preach the sermon. At noon luncheon will be served in the armory. A campfire will follow until 2 o'clock, when the street parade will take place.

The banquet will be held at the Armory in the evening. Plates will be laid for 2,000.

BROCKTON BEAUTY BRIDE ON JUNE 20

BROCKTON, May 27.—Miss Grace Isabelle Hall, one of the city's beauties, will become the bride of Howard Severn Regar of Norristown, Pa., on June 20.

The wedding will take place at the South Congregational Church and a reception will follow at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hall, No. 22 Arlington street. Rev. Dr. J. Stanley Durkee will perform the ceremony.

The maid of honor will be Miss Blanche Daniels of Jenkintown, Pa., and the bridesmaids will be the Misses Beulah Johnson, Mildred Livingston, Clara Keith, Mabel Packard, Alice Swift and Inez Copeland, all of Brockton. Little Miss Dorothy Howes of Providence, a cousin of Miss Hall, will be the flower girl, and Fred A. Simmons, Jr., of this city will be flower boy. The best man will be Edward Legg of Bala, Pa.

The night of June 19 a dinner and dance will be tendered the bridal party at the Brockton Country Club. After a short honeymoon the young couple will reside in Norristown.

MOTHER SEES GIRL KILLED BY CART

Margerita Poleuo, four years old, was run over and killed by a heavy wagon on Fleet street about 8 o'clock last night. She was the daughter of Joseph Poleuo, who lives at No. 28 Clark street. The mother went out to buy the little one some cakes and the youngster toddled after her without the mother's knowledge. As Mrs. Poleuo was crossing Fleet street the little girl called to her and the mother turned around in time to see a wagon strike the girl and pass over her body.

The grief of the mother was awful and she was joined by a great crowd of sympathizers. The little girl was carried to the Relief Hospital, where she died. The driver of the wagon was Joseph Camello of No. 10 Lewis street. He was arrested and released on his own recognizance.

GOV. FOSS TALKS ON O'MEARA CHARGES

Says He Will Consider Mayor Fitzgerald's Accusations if Formally Presented.

Relative to the charges made by Mayor Fitzgerald against Police Commissioner O'Meara in an editorial in the Republic, to the effect that leading police officials associated with crooks; that crossing policemen were a joke; that O'Meara used his office to help Senator Lodge politically and that the Commissioner had been remiss in his duties in other ways, Governor Foss said yesterday that he had not read what the Mayor had had to say.

"If charges are made against Commissioner O'Meara formally," said the Governor, "and backed up by evidence, I shall consider them. But otherwise I shall not. No charges of any kind against the police have been preferred that I know anything about."

Mayor Fitzgerald said last night that he did not believe the Governor would reappoint Commissioner O'Meara and added that he, himself, had no candidate.

Foss an Aid to Party.

"No, I do not believe that Governor Foss will reappoint Commissioner O'Meara," said the Mayor. "Governor Foss has made a good executive. He is strengthening the party and benefitting his State by the administration he is giving it.

"He does this by keeping his party pledges and heeding the fundamental principles of the party. A man who has been so faithful in this respect is not at all likely to turn about face and violate a principle of home rule which the Democratic party has cherished for years.

Aware of the Friction.

"Governor Foss knows that friction between the Mayor and the head of the police is not in the interest of the city. The Governor believes that the Mayor ought to have the power to appoint the police commissioner. How then could anyone believe that he could reappoint Mr. O'Meara? All this talk that he intends to do so is made to create trouble in a party which its enemies feel is growing too strong and working too harmoniously."

Asked directly if he had a candidate for police commissioner the Mayor said:

"No. Any good man who will be decently friendly and will treat me as if I were not a public enemy will be acceptable to me."

CAN EAT MOST ANYTHING

Mrs. Wilson Robinson, 704 Nessle St., Toledo, Ohio, writes:

"I feel like a new person. I have no more heavy feelings, no more pain, don't belch up gas, can eat most anything without it hurting me. I want to be working all the time. I have gained twenty-four pounds.

"People that see me now and saw me two months ago seem astonished. I tell them Peruna did it. I will say it is the only remedy for spring and all other ailments."

Mrs. Wilson Robinson.

Dyspepsia and Constipation.

Helen A. Maxfield, M. D., Lyman, Utah, writes:

"As to the merits of Peruna, too much cannot be said.

"I am sixty years old and have just found out a medicine that is a great improvement to my health. I have suffered for years with dyspepsia and constipation. The use of Peruna two weeks only has given me great relief."

'CHRISTY' TOBIN, THE 'SPITBALL' WIZARD OF ROCKLAND BALL TEAM

MISS MARION J. TOBIN

GIRL 'SOUTHPAW' IS TERROR TO BATTERS

ROCKLAND, May 27.—Who is the cleverest south-paw "spitball" artist in this section?

Answer—"Christy" Tobin.

Everyone in Rockland allows that she is.

"She?"

Certainly. "Christy" is only her nickname, taken, of course, from the great Christy Mathewson. Her right name is Miss Marion J. Tobin. And, by the same token, Maid Marion is a bright, attractive girl with an ability to play ball, pitching especially, that is almost uncanny.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Tobin of No. 49 Arlington street. She is twenty-three years old and can pitch two curves, a fast-breaking drop and a "spit-ball" that has shattered the batting reputations of some of the best masculine hitters that this town knows.

Miss Marion's left arm is highly developed from pitching ball. She has speed and strength, combined with an easy, graceful delivery. She pitches a ball with the full-arm masculine throw, not with the awkward, fore-arm cast common to girls.

Fans 'Em Just As Easy.

She has pitched for men's teams time and again with great success. It is the particular joy of her friends to see some out-of-town batter step to the plate with a pitying smile on his face, thinking to "let the girl pitcher down easy" by batting out a single. When the visitor fans the air for "three and out" he has learned something new about girl pitchers. The next time he comes to bat he swats viciously at the pill and usually fans again. For Miss Marion has "ins," "outs," a "drop" and, above all, the elusive spitball that seldom fails.

During her spare time Miss Marion plays baseball every chance she gets. If there is no game open she will "play pass" with two or three players. She follows the big leagues, of course, and knows the game from the rules up. She is particularly keen for the Red Sox in the American League and for the Brocktons in the New England League. She predicts a finish for each in the first division of their respective leagues.

She thinks girls ought to play baseball more, saying:

"I think it very strange that more girls don't indulge in the sport. It is the best outdoor sport there is, I think; it's got it all over tennis, golf, and even automobiling. I can do justice to every position I play, and I find it very easy to play every position except that of catcher. I can hit the ball well, but cannot hit hard enough to make over two bases. That's what I must improve on, and then I will be willing to go into the game for keeps.

Seeks Clever Girls' Team.

"I would like to get a chance to play with some clever girls' team in this section. I think I could help it along a lot.

"Next to baseball I like ice skating. That's all right for the Winter. I believe the reason more girls don't play ball is because they think they'll soil their hands or get hurt. It isn't any more boyish than golf or tennis or rowing, and it's time the girls got busy and limbered up a bit on the diamond.

"That Boston Red Sox team is some ball team. When it gets back East you can bet they'll go after that pennant and get it. I hope the Boston boys win the pennant this year."

MACLEOD IS PUSHED FOR A JUDGESHIP

Gentlemen in politics who are always prompt about filling vacancies took steps yesterday to plug the hole in the Superior Court by bringing forward the name of Fred J. Macleod of Cambridge, former State Senator and recent Chairman of the Democratic State Committee.

Senator Macleod was mentioned so frequently and in so many quarters as the man most likely to fill the vacancy caused by the elevation of Judge William Schofield to the United States District Court that the Cambridge man seemed to be taking the place by general consent. There was, however, some talk of Chief Justice Bolster of the Boston Municipal Court.

Both names, Senator Macleod's and Justice Bolster's, have been mentioned at other times since Governor Foss went to the State House. On a previous occasion it was understood Chief Justice Bolster had politely but firmly declined, and that Senator Macleod was considered quite impossible, at that time, because of his recent connection with things political and his prominence in the affairs of Governor Foss.

GREAT UNIVERSITY HARRIMAN MEMORIAL

NEW YORK, May 27.—Mrs. Edward H. Harriman, America's richest woman, is to be the founder of a great university, a glorious monument to the memory of her husband in the West. Some of the millions bequeathed to her by the master railroad builder, and increased by her wise investments, are to be devoted to the cause of higher education, after the manner of her husband's predecessor in the Southern Pacific presidency, who founded the Leland Stanford, Jr., University in California.

It became known to-day that Mrs. Harriman, casting about for some means of disbursing her great fortune in a way that would be of benefit to the people of the country, had decided upon the establishment of an institution of learning as affording the best medium for such disbursement.

Her plans are not fully developed, but in a tentative way she has decided to found a university that will be second to none in the country in point of curriculum and endowment. The equal of Harvard, Yale and all other great universities of the land, it will be lacking in nothing that money can supply.

AUTOIST IS RUNAWAY HERO IN THE FENWAY

A runaway horse, a pursuing automobile, two terrified women, and a rescuing chauffeur were some of the incidents in a melodrama which took place in full view of Mrs. Jack Gardner's front windows in the Fenway yesterday afternoon.

A spirited horse, drawing a light carriage containing a Mrs. Carter and Miss May Kelly of Newtonville, took fright and bolted in the Fenway drive shortly after 3 p. m. The women screamed as the carriage swayed to and fro.

Robert Stanley of Francis street, Roxbury, was driving an automobile some distance in the rear when the runaway started. The high power car quickly overhauled the galloping horse, but Stanley couldn't quite plan a way to stop the horse without a collision.

He finally ran the machine ahead, turned it until it almost blocked the road and stopped. Then he leaped out. The runaway dashed at the narrow opening and Stanley threw himself at his head. He was dragged about twenty feet before the horse stopped. Then the ladies thanked him and after resting until the horse had calmed and they had recovered their composure returned home.

COOK IS CONVICTED OF WHITE MURDER

Man Found Guilty in First Degree After Plea of Liberty or Death to Jurors.

SPRINGFIELD, May 27.—Edwin F. Cook was to-night found guilty of murder in the first degree by the jury which had been trying him for the murder of Herbert E. White.

The verdict was given at 6:45, after the jury had been out for three hours. White received the verdict calmly and his mother, Mrs. May Cook, and his brother, Charles J. Cook, who were in the courtroom, betrayed no emotion.

Attorney Wallace B. Heady for the defence took exceptions to several of the rulings of Judge Crosby, and there is the possibility of another trial.

District Attorney Callahan conducted the case for the State. The trial was very rapid. It commenced on Monday. The evidence was all in Friday night and to-day was occupied by the closing arguments. The defence was accidental shooting.

The tragedy took place on Sunday, February 18, 1910, at Ludlow. One of the features of the trial was the bringing into the courtroom of a skeleton to show the jury the course of the bullet.

Cook is only twenty-two years old. He fell in love with Lydia Amey, a thirteen-year-old girl, and brought her to Springfield, where he passed her off as his sister. Agent Cash of the Hampden County Children's Aid Society heard of the case and got possession of the girl. He confided her to the care of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. White of Ludlow. Cook followed her to the White's and demanded that White give her up. He refused and Cook drew a revolver and shot him.

Cook caused a dramatic tension in court when he addressed the jury, asking them to convict him in the first degree or free him.

STARK TAKES APPEAL.

Real Estate Dealer Goes to Supreme Court with Grievance.

James H. Stark, real estate dealer and author, and James E. Robinson have appealed to the Supreme Court from a decision of the Superior Court and of the Land Court that Stark made fraudulent representation in the matter of a land title.

A Superior Court jury found that Stark had induced Mrs. Agnes Richards of Brookline to deed a lot of land at Savin Hill, Dorchester, to Robinson in consideration of $10, withholding from Mrs. Richards that there was money due her at City Hall from sale of the land for taxes. The appeal of Stark and Robinson is now pending.

MRS. STEVENS OBJECTS.

Files Objections to Master's Report in Bowler Case.

Mrs. Angelina G. Stevens, who seeks to recover $270,000 for loans to George Pendleton Bowler, takes many exceptions to the report of the master in the case. She objects particularly to the master's finding that, prior to January 7, 1905, she was aware of improper relations between Bowler and her daughter, Mrs. Edith Stevens Reynolds. Mrs. Stevens has filed her objections to the master's report in the Supreme Court. She objects to every finding of the master in relation to the divoices of the Bowlers and Reynoldses.

Katherine Andrews Is a Bride

Brilliant Wedding in Brookline

MR. AND MRS. CLARENCE C. LITTLE

MR AND MRS. CLARENCE C. LITTLE

ONE of the most brilliant of all the weddings of May was that yesterday noon in St. Paul's Church, Brookline, of Miss Katherine Day Andrews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Day Andrews of Fisher avenue, Brookline, and Clarence C. Little, recently appointed private secretary to President Lowell of Harvard University, and now taking a course in applied biology in the graduate school.

Sisters Were Bridesmaids.

The bride, a petite brunette, wore a gown of white satin with long court train; a tulle veil fastened with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of valley lilies. She was given in marriage by her father, and her two debutante sisters, Miss Ellen and Miss Elizabeth Andrews, served as bridesmaids.

They are decidedly attractive girls, and were gowned alike in white chiffon with girdles of pale blue satin, slippers of pale blue and hats of the same shade trimmed with white plumes. Each carried a basket of pink Killarney roses.

Leon Little of Newburyport, a classmate of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were J. Lovell Little, Jr., a brother of the bridegroom; Richard W. Hall of Malden, Albert Calder James of Jamaica Plain, F. M. deSelding of Summit, N. J.; Philip Heald of Jamaica Plain, T. Gardner Apinwald of Brookline and Goodwin Warner of Jamaica Plain.

Mr. Little, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Little of Brookline, graduated from Harvard last June. He is a member of the Institute, Dickey and Pudding Clubs.

Reception After Ceremony.

A large reception and breakfast followed the ceremony, taking place at the home of the bride's parents. After a short honeymoon tour Mr. and Mrs. Little are to make their home in Brookline.

Among the guests at the church were the bride's mother, wearing a handsome gown of pale gray satin trimmed with black lace and a black hat trimmed with white plumes.

Mrs. Little, the mother of the bridegroom, was in black net over white and a large black hat. Mrs. Franz Zerrahn was in black and white satin trimmed with black lace, and Miss Zerrahn was attractive in pale blue satin veiled in black chiffon and a large black hat trimmed with green.

Miss Margaret DeFord, who is to be a bride of the coming month, was in lavender chiffon trimmed with white lace and lavender satin, with which she wore a large black hat trimmed with black plumes.

Miss Ruth Flint, who was among the latest of the arrivals, was in natural colored pongee with a black hat trimmed with a wreath of rosebuds.

FIGHTS FOR SUNDAY BASEBALL AT FORT

Benjamin F. Sullivan to Carry Monster Petition to War Department.

Benjamin F. Sullivan, the sponsor for Sunday baseball for the United States soldiers at Fort Banks, last night announced that he would carry the fight to the War Department in Washington this week, with a petition of over 5,000 names. Last week the War Department ordered that Sunday baseball at the army post in Winthrop be stopped, owing to the pressure against the national sport on Sunday, brought to bear by the ministers and citizens.

Last night Mr. Sullivan received a telegram from Senator Crane, to the effect that Mr. Murphy's appeal for the reestablishment of Sunday baseball was presented to the War Department yesterday. The text of the telegram was:

"Washington, D. C., May 27, 1911.
"Mr. Benjamin F. Sullivan,
"East Boston, Mass.

"Your telegram of the 26th is received and presented to the War Department. Yesterday morning a petition from the ministers and citizens against Sunday baseball at Fort Banks, but have not received any other petitions.

(Signed) "W. M. CRANE."

"I shall go to Washington with a petition for Sunday baseball at Fort Banks," said Mr. Sullivan to the SUNDAY AMERICAN last night. "More than 5,000 people will sign the petition to permit the soldiers to play ball on Sundays. I shall carry the fight to the Secretary of War. Colonel Patterson, in command of the forts in Boston Harbor, was obliged to order Sunday baseball stopped at Fort Banks. The colonel is a great lover of baseball and disliked to put a stop to the game.

"I have already obtained 1,500 names of people who want to have Sunday ball at the fort. By Wednesday, when I leave for Washington, I shall have 3,000 more. I shall see Senator Crane, Congressman Keillher and the Secretary of War."

The society intends to make the event a feature in the parish social affairs and have under advisement many plans towards the success of the affair.

COMMUNION FOR KNIGHTS.

The annual communion of the members of Bunker Hill Council, Knights of Columbus, Charlestown, will be held this morning at St. Francis de Sales Church. The Rev. James N. [illegible], spiritual director, will officiate.

NO DELAY IN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TOUR

Loss of Ivernia Will Only Necessitate Party Sailing From New York.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce tour of Europe is positively going to occur, although the steamer Ivernia, which was to have conveyed the Bostonians to Liverpool, is reposing on the bottom of the ocean in Queenstown harbor.

The loss of the Ivernia has necessitated changes in the plans and will make a big difference in the send-off being arranged for the Chamber tourists. The sailing of the Ivernia on June 12 was to have been the occasion of a big demonstration by the 4,000 odd members of the Chamber to their one hundred representatives.

The tour party will now be obliged to sail from New York, and the demonstration will have to take place at the South Station, where the facilities for demonstrations are not so good as at the steamship piers.

Will Boom Boston.

The Carmania, which sails on June 17, will probably carry out the Boston party and as she will reach Liverpool four days later than the Ivernia would have done, changes in the plans for receptions at Liverpool and Manchester will be necessary.

The Chamber of Commerce party are all Boston boomers. They are going across to tell Europe what a fine harbor we have and what great steamers should be in service here. Naturally a Boston party wished to sail from Boston and it is a big disappointment that it is not possible. At any other season the steamship line would send an extra boat to take the Ivernia's passengers but this is the crowded period and every available steamer is booked full up from various ports.

However everybody hopes that the initial set-back will be the only thing to mar the success of the trip.

The most pleasing feature of the incident is that the delay in sailing will enable the party to meet the Chicago Association of Commerce, whose visit to Boston takes place June 14, 15 and 16. It seemed almost impolite for the Boston party, which includes many of the most influential and best known Boston business men, to sail for Europe the day before the Chicago crowd arrived, but it was necessary, because of booking made long ahead.

Liverpool Stay Cut.

Secretary James McKibben of the Chamber is quite sure that the loss of the Ivernia and the changing of the date of departure will not cause any members to cancel the trip. It will be necessary to inform each of the Western representatives of the change before this can be definitely known.

The Mayor of Denver will accompany the party and representatives of the business organizations of New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, San Francisco, Indianapolis, Buffalo, Louisville, Denver, Harrisburg, Baltimore, Seattle, Spokane, New Haven, Bridgeport and Lowell will go along.

The principal change as a result of the delay in sailing will be the reduction of the time in Liverpool to one day instead of two, Manchester, a few hours instead of a day, and the saving of two days by going direct to London, instead of stopping at Shakespeare's birthplace and the college cities of England.

The chamber is in receipt of assurances from the business organizations of Liverpool, Manchester, London, Paris, Vienna and erlin of elaborate preparations to entertain the party and to inform them of the commercial advantages of each city.

ADMIRAL KNIGHT WINS.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight has been commissioned, it was announced at the Navy Department to-day. His commission begins from January 29 last, the date on which he would have been promoted had it not been for his court martial for alleged responsibility for the sinking of the monitor Puritan at Newport News last November.

First came the competitive company drill for the annual Lasell banner. This was won by Company C, of which Miss Gladys Lawton of Sheffield, Ill., is captain.

1,400 SUNDAY SCHOOL CHILDREN ON PARADE

Church Youngsters of Cambridge Hold Pretty May Day Exercises.

Fourteen hundred boys and girls, ranging in age from three to fifteen years, took part in the first annual May Day parade of Cambridge Sunday school children yesterday afternoon.

With banners and streamers flying, gay in May costume and dressed in their "Sunday best," the children marched a half mile around on Cambridge Common and were reviewed by a delegation representing the city of Cambridge, the churches and the Cantabrigia Club. The latter organization originated the idea of this May Day parade, which is now planned as an annual event.

On their march around the Common the children were charming. They marched eight abreast, keeping wonderfully good step for such little people. The youngest ones especially were greatly admired. Applause came again from the proud parents, Sunday school teachers and other spectators who lined the oval of the route.

Sang Patriotic Songs.

The route was necessarily short on account of the tender youth of many of the little folks in line. After marching once around the Common and by the reviewing stand they passed out from the Common to Harvard square and to the First Parish Church, where they sang patriotic songs and listened to a few words from Professor Norman E. Richardson of Boston University, who was chief of staff for the parade. Then they dispersed to their various churches where refreshments were served.

Those on the reviewing stand included the Rev. Dr. Frederick W. Hamilton, president of Tufts College; Rev. Dr. Richard Wright, Alderman James T. Barrett, Alderman Robert O'Neil, Rev. Dr. William H. Macnair, Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Crothers, Rev. E. C. Simpson, Mrs. C. H. Bonney, past president of the Cantabrigia Club; Mrs. John Amee, Mrs. A. E. Whitman and Mrs. Ellen Freeman Talmadge of Saginaw, Mich, the latter a guest of Mrs. Whitman.

The children assembled on Cambridge Common at 2 o'clock and formed in five divisions. The parade was headed by the Cambridge Salvation Army band, 40 pieces, under Adjutant Sawer. A detail of police under Sergeant John M. Winslow came next. Chief Marshal George H. Cutler and Chief of Staff Professor Richardson were followed by the Cambridge Boy Scouts, sixty strong, with drum and bugle corps.

Children in Five Divisions.

Then came the five Sunday school divisions, with their division commanders, as follows:

FIRST DIVISION.

H. M. Gerry, commander-Immanuel, North Avenue, First, Massachusetts Avenue and Swedish Baptist and St. Stephen's Episcopal.

SECOND DIVISION.

Frank E. Sands, commander-Swedish, First, North Avenue, Prospect Street, Wood Memorial-Hope and Pilgrim Congregational and Riverside Alliance.

THIRD DIVISION.

Joseph Shinn, commander—Harvard Street, Grace, Epworth, Trinity and Rush Zion Methodists.

FOURTH DIVISION.

H. A. Ruth, commander—Christ Church, St. Philip's, St. John's Episcopal, First Church and Second Church (Unitarian), First Church and Second Church (Universalist), and East End Union.

FIFITH DIVISION.

Adjutant Sawer, commander—Free, Baptist, Reformed and United Presbyterian, Swedish Lutheran, Salvation Army and Evangelical Pentecostal.

LOVE AND MYSTIC RELIGION ARE BLENDED IN BULL WILL CONTEST

Former Barber who became Student of the Swamis in Mrs. Bull's home, tells in Court how to attain Sublime Control of the mind by Raja-Yoga process, thus putting aside the mere material things of every nature.

her mother. The change in Mrs. Ole Bull, if there was a change, may have begun about this time. Two years later, her father died, in Cambridge.

Mrs. Ole Bull would have been sixty years old last Thursday. She died in January. Her maiden name was Sarah Chapman Thorp. She left a daughter, Olea Bull Vaughan—divorced since her mother's death—and one brother, Joseph G. Thorp, who has law offices at No. 131 State street and a house at No. 115 Brattle street, Cambridge. Nobody needs to be told that Brattle street is almost the last word in Cambridge exclusiveness. At No. 168 was the home of Mrs. Sarah Chapman Thorp Bull.

There seems to be an impression abroad that the fortune they are fighting for in Alfred, Maine, came down from Ole Bull. As a matter of fact it comes from the other side of the house.

Mrs. Bull's father, when he died, left a million dollars. He was Joseph G. Thorp the first, and he made his money out of northwestern lumber. A couple of generations ago the Thorps resided in Oxford, N. Y. Here the children were born. Later they moved to Eau Clair; still later to Madison, Wis.

Sarah Chapman Thorp wasn't quite twenty years old when, along about 1870, she married Ole Bull. The great violinist—the world's greatest probably—was then a man of sixty. He had married before, at the age of twenty-six, and his first wife had been dead eight years when he stood before a Norwegian clergyman with the little girl from Wisconsin.

The Love of Ole Bull.

She was only eighteen when she fell in love. In "Ole Bull, a Memoir," published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co. in 1883, Mrs. Bull has briefly told the story:

> A still closer tie was soon to bind him to the United States, the country which already seemed his by adoption. In Madison, Wis., in the Winter of 1868, Ole Bull first made the acquaintance which resulted in his second marriage. He took a kindly interest in the musical studies of his friend there, and later in New York. To others this delightful relation of teacher, adviser and friend seemed the only one permissible; but he wrote: "Other than human powers have decided my fate. . . . The sunbeams I shut out, but the sun itself I could not annihilate."
> The marriage was delayed in deference to the wishes of others for some months, but without resulting in a modification of their fears concerning the disparity of years and other conditions. It was later decided to have a private marriage. This was consummated in Norway, and publicly announced and confirmed on the return to the United States, three months later, in the Autumn of 1870.

The great Ole Bull, who had made his first Boston appearance nearly thirty years before, and who had already toured the United States a number of times, had a recognized social position among the Harvard cult. There was little surprise, therefore, when he moved to Cambridge with his girl-wife and established a beautiful home near Longfellow house.

Other members of the Thorp family came East afterward, and when Joseph G. Thorp, the younger—the attorney of to-day and one of the central figures in the will case—married one of the Longfellow girls, the social position of the Westerners was assured.

The violinist died after ten years of happiness. Sara Chapman Thorp had been a widow thirty years when she passed away last January.

Cut Out Of the Will.

There had grown up in the Thorp household—on one side they say "almost as a member of the family," and on the other as a "trusted servant"—a young woman named Abby Bartlett, now Mrs. Abby Shapleigh of West Lebanon, Me. Mrs. Shapleigh's name has already been heard from time to time during the progress of the case in Alfred. It will be heard a lot more after the hearings are resumed next Wednesday. The strictest kind of an injunction is placed upon Olea Bull Vaughan by her mother's will not to give a penny to Mrs. Abby Shapleigh or to Miss Amelia Shapleigh. Miss Amelia is about Olea's age; that is, thirty-nine.

Abby Bartlett, Abby Shapleigh of to-day, was taken into the Thorp family when she was sixteen. Sara Thorp, Mrs. Ole Bull, was a baby two years old. Abby Bartlett was fourteen years older than the baby and fourteen years younger than the baby's mother.

Those who seek to break the will in Alfred say that Abby Bartlett remained in the Thorp family in the capacity of an older sister. These relations remained in effect, it will be held, as late as 1896 or '97—some say until 1902. Mrs. Bull frequently wrote to Mrs. Shapleigh, calling her "My precious Abby," and expressing "love and gratitude for all you have done for "Olea."

Olea Bull was born in the house of Mrs. Shapleigh, at West Lebanon, ten miles southwest of the little Court House where the battle is on.

Olea Bull's baby, that little Edwina Vaughan who, according to some of the testimony, appeared to Mrs. Ole Bull in a "pink radiance," was born and died in this same house at West Lebanon.

Fighting Evil Influences.

Some time after Mrs. Ole Bull began to take up with the Indian swamis, and the cult of Ramakrishna she is said to have conceived the idea that Mrs. Shapleigh, the "older sister" of other days, was exercising a malign psychical influence over her, and seeking to destroy her. Mrs. Bull appears to have thought that she was continually fighting against this "influence."

Mrs. Bull is said to have felt, further, that Olea, her daughter, coming to visit her from the Shapleigh home, brought with her malign germs of thought. They always burned incense, and did other helpful things in the Bull house as soon as Olea had gone away.

The will of Mrs. Bull gives away about $150,000 before it comes down to the provisions which have set Olea and her uncle, Joseph G. Thorp of Brattle street, in opposition to each other in the courts of Maine.

There is $30,000 for "Sister Nivedita," the Miss Margaret E. Noble who was with Mrs. Bull at the last, and who is now supposed to be in Calcutta, India.

There is $2,000 a year for several years for Jagadis Chunder Bose of No. 93 Upper Circle road, Calcutta.

There is $5,000 for the Swami Saradananda of the Ramakrishna Math, Belur, Howrah, Bengal, India.

There is $500 to Mohini Mohun Chatterji, a lawyer of Calcutta, "in remembrance of his readings from the "Bhagavad Gita."

Many Provisos in Paper.

There are more provisions of this sort—the lawyers say they amount to $150,000—and then the balance goes to Olea Bull Vaughan, with certain "ifs" and "ands," and other restrictions and eventualities that have chafed the young woman so much that the fight is on.

The daughter is to have only the income of the money, not to exceed $3,500 a year, in the discretion of Joseph G. Thorp of Cambridge.

If Olea leaves a child, that child is to have half the fortune. The other half goes to the Thorps.

If Olea leaves two children—she is thirty-nine now and unmarried—her children get the money. But in no event is Olea to be permitted to give anything to the Shapleighs, mother or daughter.

The fight over the will is notable for many other things besides the talk of swamis of Vivekananda and Ramakrishna, of Rajah Yoga and Yama Yama.

In the first place, they are having it out before Nathaniel Hobbs of North Berwick, who will be eighty-seven years old next September, and who is said to be the oldest probate judge in all the United States of America, which looks reasonable.

Looks Like "Uncle Joe."

The Hobbses are one of the oldest families in York County—history records that they moved over to North Berwick from Dover Neck as early as 1735—and his honor the judge, who used to combine farming with his court work, looks like a Maine edition of "Uncle Joe." Where Mr. Cannon favors the cigar, however, Judge Hobbs smokes a pipe.

His Honor follows every word of the testimony as closely as the official stenographer. He wants to know all about this Rajah Yoga stuff—which is new to the State of Maine outside of the Summer folks at Eliot—and he's going to find out. Up to date he has let them put in about everything they have offered, but if he doesn't like it after it gets in, he turns to the stenographer and says "strike that out."

Miss Edith Swananda, for instance, who teaches school in Brooklyn, and whose mother conducts some sort of a rest cure there, was telling about Mrs. Bull's two visits to the place in the last year of her life.

"When she came back the second time," Miss Swananda said, "she was much weaker, physically and mentally."

"Strike out 'and mentally,'" said the court. How could a school teacher know what it takes three doctors to prove?

On the job all the time, is Judge Nathaniel Hobbs of North Berwick. Probate judge since '72, the year of Olea Bull's birth, they say up in York County that his decisions have been overruled or set aside only twice. They rather expect, up there, that the final bang of the Bull case will be whatever Mr. Hobbs makes it.

There are more lawyers in the case than you could shake a stick at, with more coming. Joseph G. Thorp of Cam-

FULL TEXT OF MRS. BULL'S REMARKABLE WILL

The full text of the will of Mrs. Sarah C. Bull of Cambridge, widow of the noted Norwegian violinist, Ole Bull, which has caused the sensational contest in the Maine court, following the efforts of her daughter, Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughan, to break the document, is as follows:

BE IT KNOWN, That I, SARA C. BULL, widow, of Eliot in the County of York and State of Maine, being of full age and of sound mind, do make this my last Will and Testament, hereby revoking all wills and codicils heretofore made.

I direct that my body be cremated and that its ashes be sent by express to the City of Bergen, Norway, and strewn upon the grave of Ole Bull.

My reasons for some of the following provisions, will, I hope, be sufficiently explained in a memorandum and a note to be found herewith, which, however, are not meant as a part hereof, or to establish any trust, or to be published and recorded herewith, but are to be communicated, the memorandum to those receiving legacies and to the executors and trustees hereunder and the note to my brother.

ARTICLE I: I give and bequeath to my Trustees hereinafter named, and upon the trusts set forth in the Twenty-First Article of this Will, the sum of Fifty Thousand Dollars, which bequest shall take priority of all other bequests and devises given by this Will and which sum I request my Trustees to invest in State or Municipal bonds, if any, free of tax, or in the stocks of leased railroads free of such tax.

ARTICLE II: I give and bequeath the service of silver which belonged to my dear mother, Amelia Chapman Thorp, to her namesake and my dear niece, Amelia Chapman Thorp. It comprises salver, tea-kettle, coffee and tea pots, sugar and cream jug. (My mother's Indian Shawl has already been given her dear granddaughter Alice Thorp).

ARTICLE III: I give and bequeath to my dear daughter, Olea Bull Vaughan, all household furniture and stores, books, musical instruments, busts, pictures, silver, china, glass, linen, rugs and articles of personal use and ornament which I may own at the time of my death, except those bequeathed otherwise in this Will.

ARTICLE IV. I give to my dear brother, Joseph Gilbert Thorp, the old family portrait of my mother, and two pieces of Norwegian silver, namely, two filigree sugar bowls, and also such articles as he may select from my carved pieces of furniture, the rose wood set and my mother's bedroom set, formerly in the house 168 Brattle street, Cambridge, in the State of Massachusetts.

ARTICLE V.: I give and bequeath to my dear brother, Joseph Gilbert Thorp, in memory of Ole Bull's love for him, the following jewels: One solitaire diamond ring, the gift of Queen Louise of Sweden to Ole Bull, one ring with four diamonds from a snuff box given to Ole Bull by King Frederick of Denmark, one scarf ring, now a brooch, in diamonds, given to Ole Bull by the old King William of Prussia, the grand-father of the present Kaiser, and I also give and bequeath to my dear brother, the gold locket bearing the word ROMA, and its chain, which belonged to my mother, the fleur de lys brooch in pearls and brilliants which my mother had made for me, and the two stick pins, pearls and hair, souvenirs of our brother and sister, Charlie and Louise.

It is my expectation that such of the jewelry bequeathed to my dear brother by this Article of my Will as he may not desire to retain for his personal use will be by him distributed among his wife and daughters, and therefore, in case, he should not survive me, I give and bequeath the same to his wife, Annie Longfellow Thorp, and should she also pre-decease me, I give the same to such of their children as survive me.

ARTICLE VI.: I also give, devise and bequeath to my said brother my house and land, or of such estate as I Maine, together with the house furnishings, and to the end that the maintenance and upkeep of said house and land, or of such estate as I may devise to my brother in lieu thereof, be not a charge upon him or his estate, I give and bequeath to my Trustees hereinafter named, the sum of Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars, to be held and managed by them as a trust fund; with all powers and exemptions hereinafter conferred regarding the fund to be held in trust under the Twenty-First Article of this Will; and the net income thereof, during the term of twenty years next after my decease, shall be paid to my said brother or to such person or persons as he by instrument under his hand and seal duly acknowledged before a Notary Public or by his last will, may direct and appoint.

At the expiration of said term of twenty years the trust hereby created shall cease and determine and the fund held in trust hereunder shall become part of the residue of my estate.

ARTICLE VII: I further give and bequeath to my said brother, my lease of the Studio House so called in said Cambridge, together with the contents of said house, and I authorize and empower my Executors, if requested by my said brother, to pay, in addition to the rent thereof, during the term of said lease, the necessary cost of the maintenance and upkeep of said house and its contents, together with food and service, as a home for whomever my dear brother may wish to have occupy the same, my hope being that pending the establishment of the Edwina Bungalow, which I have in mind to construct and endow, the Studio House may, in my brother's hands, serve similar ends.

ARTICLE VIII. I give and bequeath to my dear friend, Margaret E. Noble (Sister Nivedita, Calcutta, India, care of Grindlay and Co., Bankers,) the sum of Thirty Thousand Dollars. This sum I give her for her own use, in remembrance of her love to me, as faithful as if she were my own daughter. If the said Margaret E. Noble shall die before she has received said sum of Thirty Thousand Dollars without having specifically disposed of it by her will, then I give and bequeath said sum of Thirty Thousand Dollars to my honoured friend, Jagadis Chunder Bose, now of the Presidency College of Calcutta, for his own use. And herewith a memorandum expressing my wishes regarding the same, but which are not to be deemed obligatory. (His present address is 93 Upper Circular Road, Calcutta, India.) Should the said Jagadis C. Bose decline said bequest or die before he has received said sum, and without having specifically disposed of it by his will as the monies or fund bequeathed to him by me, or under other description of like import, I then give and bequeath said sum of Thirty Thousand Dollars, with said memorandum, to him who may at the time of my disease, be the Abbot of the Ramakrishna Math, Belur, Howrah, Bengal, India, for his own use. My executors having paid the sum of Thirty Thousand Dollars as above given and bequeathed, shall not be held responsible for its use or disposal.

ARTICLE IX: I authorize and empower my Executors to pay to said Jagadis Chunder Bose for the term of ten years after my decease, the sum of Two Thousand Dollars annually, and if at any time during said term, my Executor shall learn that his laboratory is regularly installed and in actual operation, I authorize and empower them to pay to him such further sum as, when added to the amount of said annual payments which may previously have been made to him, shall equal the sum of Twenty Thousand Dollars, or in the event of his decease, to so pay or apply such further sum, in their discretion, that it shall be employed for the support of that laboratory on a permanent basis; but my Executors, after payment of said further sum to said Jagadis Chunder Bose or to such other person or persons as they may, in the exercise of their discretion, determine, shall be under no obligation to see to the application of the money so paid.

After the payment of said further sum as above provided, the annual payments of Two Thousand Dollars above mentioned shall cease, it being my intention that the total amount payable under this Article, shall not exceed the sum of Twenty Thousand Dollars.

ARTICLE X: I give and bequeath to my dear friend, the Swami Saradananda, for his own use, the sum of Five Thousand Dollars. (His present address is, care of Ramakrishna Math (Monastery) Belur, Howrah, Bengal, India). In case of the death of the said Swami Saradananda before having received said sum of Five Thousand Dollars, and without having specifically disposed of it by his will as the monies or fund bequeathed to him by me, or under other description of like import, I give and bequeath the said sum of Five Thousand Dollars to him who may, at the time of my decease, be the Abbot of the said Ramakrishna Math, with my great regard and best wishes.

ARTICLE XI: I give and bequeath to my dear friend, Mohini Mohun Chatterji, lawyer of Calcutta, India, in remembrance of his readings from the Bhagavad Gita and his published translation of the same, Five Hundred Dollars for his own use, with my faithful regard. (His present address is, care of Ramakrishna, Math, above mentioned).

ARTICLE XII: I give to my dear friend, Marion Daniels Briggs of Massachusetts, the sum of One Thousand Dollars for her own use, and I also give and bequeath to her my private papers, for which she will care according to the directions I have given her.

ARTICLE XIII.: I give to Nicola Ruberto of Italy, now temporarily residing in Cambridge in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the sum of Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars, and to Charles F. Odams of Somerville in said Commonwealth, or to his widow in case he should die before me, the like sum of Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars.

ARTICLE XIV.: I authorize and empower my executors to expend from time to time, sums of money not exceeding in all the amount of two thousand dollars for the education of Howell Stevens, son of my late friend, Alberta Stevens, so far as in their judgment such expenditure may seem advisable.

ARTICLE XV.: I give to my friends, Margaret E. Noble and Christina Greensteidel, my miniature of Vivekananda.

ARTICLE XVI.: I give and bequeath to my said trustees the further sum of five thousand dollars upon the following trusts, namely, to hold and invest the same, with the same powers of sale and management as are set forth in article twenty-one of this will and to pay over the income thereof to my friend, Jane Hay of St. Abbs, Warwickshire, Scotland, during her natural life for her use free from interference or control by any creditor of hers and subject to no liability for her debts and without power on her part to alienate or anticipate the same.

And upon her decease, I authorize my Trustees in their absolute discretion, either to allow said sum to fall into the residue of my estate or in case in their judgment the continuance of the Children's Home at St. Abbs and in the way in which Miss Hay has been carrying it on is reasonably assured, to pay over said sum as a memorial to my beloved grandchild Edwina, to those persons who they may determine are at the time of payment the Trustees of said Home or to such corporation as they may determine, is entitled to the ownership or management thereof, to be held and managed as a permanent fund and the income applied to the purposes of said Home, but without liability on the part of my Executors for its being so managed or applied.

ARTICLE XVII.: I give and bequeath to my dear brother, Joseph Gilbert Thorp of said Cambridge, the sum of Fifty Thousand Dollars with my love and thanks for my use of this sum, at his request, from the time of our mother's decease.

Should my dear brother die before me, I give said sum in equal shares to those of his children who survive me, the issue of any child of his who may have died before me to take hereunder by right of representation the share such child would have taken had she survived me.

ARTICLE XVIII.: I give and bequeath in equal shares to those of my dear nieces, the daughters of my brother, said Joseph Gilbert Thorp, who survive me, the note for Ten Thousand Dollars given to me by my said brother, the issue of any of my said nieces who may have died before me to take hereunder by right of representation, the share such niece would have taken had she survived me.

ARTICLE XIX: To each servant who has been in my employ six months prior to my decease, I desire and empower my Executors to give the sum of Fifty Dollars and to Con Cusack or his widow I desire and empower my Executors to give the sum of One Hundred and Fifty Dollars, and to Annie Murray, in case she should survive me, I give the like sum of One Hundred and Fifty Dollars.

ARTICLE XX. I direct that all transfer, legacy and succession taxes be paid out of my general estate, and that all pecuniary legacies given by this will, including the funds given in trust by the First, Sixth and Sixteenth Articles of this Will, bear interest at the rate of five per centum per annum from my decease until paid, except as herein otherwise stated.

ARTICLE XXI.: I give, devise and bequeath the residue of the property, real and personal, belonging to me at the time of my death, and including herein the sum bequeathed by the First Article of this Will and also any lapsed legacies, to the Trustees hereinafter named, with full powers of investment, sale and reinvestment, at public or private sale, from time to time, as a trust fund, requesting said Trustees to make all investments with special reference to the safety and preservation of the principal of the trust fund intact and unimpaired as a sure source of a moderate income for my daughter during her life, and empowering my said Trustees in their discretion to pay brokers' charges out of the principal or income and insurance premiums out of the income or principal of said fund, and to purchase bonds at a premium and pay over the whole face value of the coupons thereof as the same may become due as and for the income on such bonds, and to lease any real estate for a term exceeding the duration of said trust, and no purchaser from any Trustee hereunder shall be bound to see to the application of the purchase money.

From the income of said fund shall be paid all the expenses of management, including the compensation of the Trustees, both of said fund and of those established by the Sixth and Sixteenth Articles of this Will and the net income thereafter remaining shall during the lifetime of my said daughter, Olea Bull Vaughan, be paid to her or in the discretion of my said Trustees, applied for her benefit, in such manner as may best conduce to her comfort and happiness and in either case shall be free from interference or control by any husband or creditors of hers, and subject to no liability fo her debts, and without power on her part in any way to alienate or anticipate the same; provided, however, that if in any year that portion of the income of said fund which is payable to or for the benefit of my daughter, Olea Bull Vaughan, should exceed the sum of Thirty-five Hundred Dollars, I authorize and empower my Trustees in their absolute discretion, to add in each or every such year and above said sum of Thirty-five Hundred Dollars, to the principal of the fund held in trust under this Article, into which it shall then merge and thereafter form a part.

On the expiration of the term of ten years after my decease, I direct my said Trustees to pay my said daughter Olea, if she be then living, the sum of Sixty-five Thousand Dollars from the principal of said fund, and after payment of said sum, to pay to my said daughter Olea, during her lifetime, subject to the restrictions above set forth, the net income of the remainder of said fund after payment of the expenses of management above mentioned, or in the absolute discretion of my said Trustees to add in each or any year, said net income so remaining to the principal of said remainder into which it shall then merge and thereafter form a part.

I also empower by Trustees whenever at any time during the lifetime of my said daughter, the net income of the fund held in trust under this article of my Will or of the remainder thereof, is in their opinion insufficient for my daughter's proper maintenance according to her station in life, or to enable her to meet extraordinary expenses, to pay in their absolute discretion from the principal of said fund such sum or sums as shall in their opinion be needful and sufficient for such maintenance or expenses.

At the decease of my said daughter Olea, in case the trust fund now held by my said brother Joseph for her benefit should not have been given or appointed by her to a memorial to her father, Ole Bull, I direct my Trustees to pay from the principal of the fund established by this article the sum of Thirty Thousand Dollars to the Ole Bull Fund, Bergen, Norway, in the name of and as a memorial to Ole Bull, but if my said daughter shall have so given or appointed the fund now held in trust for her by my said brother, said sum of Thirty Thousand Dollars shall not be so paid, but shall fall into the residue of the trust fund established by this Article, and in that event, I direct my Trustees to pay therefrom the sum of Fifteen Thousand Dollars in equal shares to those of my dear nieces, the daughters of my brother, said Joseph Gilbert Thorp, who may be living at the death of my said daughter Olea, the issue of any of my said nieces who may have died before my said daughter Olea, to take hereunder, by right of representation, the share such niece would have taken had she survived my said daughter.

The residue of said trust fund, including both principal and any interest accrued or received and not paid over to my said daughter, shall, upon her death, or upon my death, should she die before me, be paid to her natural issue then living, in equal shares according to right of representation, and in default of such issue, to my said brother, Joseph Gilbert Thorp, and if he be not then living, to his issue in equal shares by right of representation; provided, however, that if, at the death of my said daughter, or in case she should die before me, at my death the natural issue of my said daughter should be only one child, or the issue of a single child of hers, in such event, one-half of said residue shall be paid to such issue of my said daughter, and the other half shall be paid to my said brother, Joseph Gilbert Thorpe, or, if he should not then be living, to his issue then living in equal shares by right of representation. In case my said daughter shall die before me, leaving no natural issue her surviving, I give, devise and bequeath said residue to my said brother, Joseph Gilbert Thorp, and if he be not living at the time of my death, I give, devise and bequeath said residue to his issue then living in equal shares by right of representation.

ARTICLE XXII.: I authorise my Trustees to retain as an investment for any trust under this Will, unless otherwise herein directed, any investments by me made, and the determination of my Trustees as to what portion of the receipts from any investment, whether a wasting investment or not, shall be considered income and what capital shall be final.

ARTICLE XXIII.: In view of the amount of pecuniary legacies given by this Will and having in mind possible fluctuations in the value of securities, I authorize and empower my Executors to postpone payment of the principal of any such legacy beyond the legal period for such payment, if they deem such postponement in the interest of the residue of my estate.

ARTICLE XXIV.: I appoint my said brother, Joseph Gilbert Thorp, and Edmund M. Parker, both of Cambridge, in the County of Middlesex and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Executors of this Will and direct that each of said Executors and any Administrator with the Will annexed be exempt from furnishing any sureties on their official bonds.

I appoint my said brother, Joseph Gilbert Thorp, and said Edmund M. Parker, Trustees under this my Will and I direct that they and their successors be exempt from furnishing sureties on their official bonds, and on the death, resignation or removal of any person at any time Trustee hereunder I direct that a new Trustee be appointed, to the end that there may always be two Trustees under my said Will.

If either my said brother or said Edmund M. Parker should die before me, decline or be unable to act as Executor or Trustee hereunder, I appoint in his place, as Executor or Trustee or both, as the case may be, my friend, Edwin A. Grozier of said Cambridge, and in case of his death, declination or inability to act, I so appoint his wife, Alice G. Grozier, and exempt each of them from furnishing any sureties on his or her official bond, either as Executor or as Trustee hereunder.

I also direct that my Executors and Trustees above-named shall each be answerable only for his own personal wilful acts or defaults and not for those of another, or for mere errors of judgment, and that all persons at any time Trustees under said Will shall have and exercise all powers and discretion herein or ARTICLE XXIV.: I appoint my said Trustees.

CODICIL.

BE IT KNOWN

That I, SARA C. BULUL, widow, of Eliot in the County of York and State of Maine, being age of full and sound mind, do make this Codicil to my last Will and Testament of the fourteenth day of July in the year nineteen hundred and ten.

ARTICLE I: I revoke the said Fourteenth Article of my said Will, being satisfied that provision has already been made for the object which it was intended to accomplish.

ARTICLE II: I revoke the Fifteenth Article of my said Will, and in lieu thereof I give my miniature of Vivekananda to my honored friend, Jagadis Chunder Bose, mentioned in my said will.

ARTICLE III: I modify the trust created by the Twenty-First Article of my said Will, as follows: I revoke so much thereof as directs my trustees to pay my daughter, Olea Bull Vaughn, on the expiration of the term of ten years after my decease, if she be then living, the sum of Sixty-Five Thousand Dollars from the principal of the trust fundt hereby established, and in lieu thereof, I direct and empower my said Trustees to pay said sum of Sixty-Five Thousand Dollars on the decease of my said daughter Olea to such person or persons other than those hereinafter specified, and in such shares and proportions as my said daughter Olea shall oy her last Will direct and appoint, but no portion of said sum of Sixty-Five Thousand Dollars shall be appointed to or for the benefit of Mrs. Abbie E. B. Shapleigh of West Lebanon in said State of Maine, or of any descendant of hers, or to or for the benefit of the present husband of my said daughter or of any of his family, and any attempted appointment of said sum or any part thereof, in favor of any of said persons shall be void.

ARTICLE IV: The provisions which I have made in my said Will for my daughter Olea, and which will enable her to maintain her Norwegian home in more than ample comfort are intended not only as a recognition of what she owes her father, but especially of his and my love for my parents and in appreciation of what he and I owe to them both.

ARTICLE V: In addition to the bequests given in my said Will, I give and bequeath to Dr. Charles Hanford Henderson of Marlenfeld, near Chesham in the State of New Hampshire, as a memorial of my dear grand-daughter Edwina, the sum of Twenty Thousand Dollars to be by him applied to charitable uses, as he may deem best, and should he die before me, I give said sum to his brother, Stewart Montgomery Henderson, to be so applied.

My purpose in making this bequest to Dr. Henderson is to further the cause of education and social science to which his work has so much contributed. Should neither Dr. Henderson nor his brother survive me, I authorize and empower my executors to expend and apply said sum of Twenty Thousand Dollars to said uses as such memorial, leaving the selection of the particular methods of so employing it to their uncontrolled discretion.

ARTICLE VI. Except as herein provided, I confirm my said Will.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF I hereto set my hand and seal and publish and declare this Codicil to my said Will of the fourteenth day of July in the year nineteen hundred and ten, in the presence of the witnesses named below, on this thirteenth day of December in the year nineteen hundred and ten.

bridge is himself a lawyer. He has with him his former law partner, Edmund M. Parker, also of Cambridge; Lawyer Talbot of Portland and Charles K. Cobb of Congress street. Over on the side lines sits Arthur K. Brooks of Cambridge and State street. Mr. Brooks isn't in very far, yet. He represents certain parties who may have to put him in later. Up to date Mr. Brooks is merely looking on—rather intently, if you want to know—and enjoying all the delights of Alfred, Maine, in the best season of the year. There are two hotels in town. Mr. Brooks puts up at the County House, with Thorp, Parker, Talbot and Cobb.

For Olea Bull Vaughan, there appears the distinguished Sherman L. Whipple, Esq., and the promising and capable Ralph E. Bartlett, also of Boston. Young Mr. Bartlett, who comes from up Eliot way and who talks about transatlantic liners as you might discuss the Elevated, is said to be a relative of Mrs. Abby Bartlett Chapleigh.

Whipple and Bartlett are asking Judge Hobbs to set the will aside on the grounds of (1) unsound mind and (2) undue influence. They do not appear to be charging that Mr. Joseph G. Thorp used influence on his sister and against his niece. Up to this time they seem to have inferred no more than that Mr. Thorp ought to have known what the mystics were doing, in and around the Bull household and to the mistress thereof. Knowing it, they appear to be about to argue that Brother Joseph should have stepped in and cried "Stop!" or words to that effect.

Hint of a Conspiracy.

They say—Messrs. Whipple and Bartlett—that Mrs. Bull was the object of a "psychic conspiracy," and they have put on, among others, Signor Nicola Ruberto, a fine looking young Italian from Cairano, Avellino parish, near Naples, besides the Edith Swananda already mentioned.

It is Nicola Ruberto, slender and dark and black moustached, with brilliant black eyes, who has told about what Maine might call the "goings-on" in the Bull household. Nicola took a course in the religion. He says it left him physically and mentally weak. He had to go back to Italy to recuperate. Mrs. Bull's house in Brattle street was the "House of Light." The place at Eliot, Me., was "Lyslevin," which is Norwegian for the same thing. The Swami Vivekananda had "inoculated the soul and the mind of Mrs. Bull with a soul-soaring, love-ravishing germ," whatever that is.

Whatever may be said about others, the Swami Vivekananda practiced the religion so hard that he went home to India in 1902 and died there. Ramakrishna had been dead then for some years.

In the Cambridge house was a "Raja Yoga" room for meditations. They gave all the rooms the incense treatment now and then for the evil influence of this one and that one. Mrs. Sewall is mentioned.

And through all the excitement—for two weeks the fight has been on—Alfred, Me., refuses to sit up and take notice. The Bull will contest at Alfred has developed as much local interest as they show in the suburbs of Venezuela over the Canadian reciprocity you read about in the newspapers.

Regular Spotless Town.

Alfred is a dream village. It looks like the original Spotless Town. Those Dutch villages where the women scrub everything every day until it cries out for mercy, have nothing on Alfred. The houses are the whitest, and the blinds and grass the greenest, in all New England. Everybody seems to have money. Nobody seems to be doing anything. There are two general stores, a post office, a regular hotel, an occasional hotel, and a first-class lawyer. There is also a first-class jail, a first-class Shaker settlement, a pond so full of trout that you have to shovel them away to make room for a bath, and the finest air in New England.

Brandon, Vt.—just above Rutland—may be almost as pretty as Alfred Me. No other town is in the running.

And with a first-class will fight on, and no end of extra added attractions, Alfred, Me., won't turn out and fill the spectators' benches. Maybe it's because of the population, which has dropped off like this:

1860	1,255
1870	1,224
1880	1,101
1890	1,030
1900	937

Alfred Remains Serene.

There are chairs in the handsome little courtroom for 150 spectators, besides witnesses, attorneys, officials and reporters. The high-water mark for local attendance was reached last Friday. Eleven women came in, mostly from the two hotels—wanted to make the guests feel, possibly, that they were getting a run for their money.

The lawyers have brought clerks and stenographers with them. The newspapers have sent reporters and photographers. The telegraph company has sent along the pick of its operators. Alfred doesn't turn its head.

When the "Rajah Yoga" stuff is hottest in the court room, indeed, the Methodist choir meets next door for evening rehearsal; and it sounds homey and good, kind of, to hear such old-fashioned stuff as "Hold the Fort," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name." The Rev. Ernest F. Doughty is pastor of the Methodist Church and the Rev. Ernest F. Stoughton has just come to town to take charge of the Congregational Church.

Neither has dropped in for "Rajah-Yoga." Their churches are 80 and 130 years old.

Other Queer Religions.

Alfred had some queer religions of its own, more than 130 years ago, however, and maybe its because of what Dr. Usher Parsons wrote about them, in the Town History, that Alfred isn't investigating anything so commonplace as the doctrines of Ramkrishna. Says the Parsons history:

> Simeon Coffin, the oldest of three brothers, who settled first in Alfred and who moved from near Ivory Hall's on the west side of Massabesic Pond to near Nathaniel Farnum's tan-yard, moved again to the top of Shaker Hill to an Indian wigwam, standing near the site of the present house of worship.
>
> Soon after, Valentine Straw settled near the site of the present Shakers' sawmill, and then came Ebenezer and Thomas Buzzell, brothers, who settled at the other or south extremity of the hill; afterwards there came and settled near the Shakers' Church Charles Sargent and John Cotton, and soon after Daniel Hibbard and family and Benjamin Barnes and family, five sons, wife and daughters.
>
> About the same time several families settled at Mast Corner. These became Merry Dancers and joined those on the hill. They became very disorderly and interrupted the religious meetings that were held at Mast Corner by Congregationalists, and also at Alfred Corner in the barn of John Knight.

Hooting the Devil.

> They disturbed the meetings to such a degree that it became necessary to take them out and fasten them with ropes to a tree. John Barnes and John Cotton were the most disorderly, not only at such meetings, but also on week days. One of their practices was to hoot the devil, as they called it, in which they would march around Shaker Pond, raving like maniacs.
>
> Barnes would wear a baize jacket over his clothes, a wig upon his head, with a cow's tail attached to it, and an untanned cowhide, and in these garbs would scream: "Woe! Woe! ! Woe! ! !" audible in the stillness of the evening nearly the distance of one mile.
>
> After this they all took to intoxicating drinks and for months were hardly ever sober, and in their midnight revels were guilty of revolting practices.

This kind of thing had to be stopped, however, and along about 1781, or 82 appeared Ebenezer Cooley and James Jewett, pewter-button and spoon makers from New York State. Cooley and Jewett were missionaries from Anna Lee, founder of the Shakers. They preached the doctrine of total abstinence, made the men separate from their wives and in 1793 organized as a society.

"Ever since Anna Lee's order to abstain from drink," writes the historian, "the Shakers have been a most orderly, quiet, industrious and in every way as exemplary a people as can be found anywhere."

To-day the Shaker Community at Alfred—presided over by Elder Henry G. Green and Elderess Mary Ann Walker, and numbering forty people—owns 1500 acres, some of it the finest farming land in Maine. Shaker Hill is a mile and a half out of town. It is a splendid piece of property, but, like most other Shaker houses, the community is dwindling in numbers. There are [illegible] women and only three men.

Elder Green, known all over the country as a first class business man, came from New Brunswick more than [illegible] years ago. He knew Mrs. Bull, but he hasn't been near the courthouse and he isn't likely to go.

Ignored by the Banker.

Even Richard H. Ingersoll, the veteran cashier, convicted of misusing the funds of a Biddeford bank and serving a term at Alfred Jail, passes the court house without looking in. Brother Ingersoll is at work in the jail kitchen, but Sheriff Charles O. Emery of Sanford, in charge of that institution—spotless and clean like the rest of the town—looks upon the veteran banker as a "trusty" and lets him go and come as he chooses. That's why you see Brother Ingersoll down town with no special mark of his present address beyond one brown trousers leg and one black trousers leg.

The revelations in the Bull case, particularly about the Hindu cults and so on, has annoyed nobody more than those who have the Greenacre conferences in Eliot at heart. The unfortunate Sarah J. Farmer, now in the asylum, who founded Greenacre, was the daughter of Moses Farmer of Eliot, an eminent electrician, part of whose inventions were used in the trans-Atlantic cable.

Greenacre has for years stretched forth its arms to call in those leaders who discuss philosophy, religion and the sciences. Through Miss Farmer and her school many thinkers came to pass their summers in Eliot. The place drew many of the cranks and most of the "isms," but it also drew the elect. The poet Whittier was a visitor there, and Edward Everett Hale, and Joe Jefferson, and Hezekiah Bartlett and Professir Dolbear. Edwin D. Mead, the peace man, and Frank B. Sanborn of Concord have also been prominent at Greenacre.

Defended by Sanborn.

Mr. Sanborn, writing yesterday in the Springfield Republican, came to the defence of Mrs. Sewall. Says the Concord man:

> The case is causing the publication of all sorts of gossip and falsity about persons no way concerned in the dispute over the property, but associated with Miss Farmer in her Greenacre conferences. One of these is Mrs. May Wright Sewall, formerly of Indianapolis, and lately president of the Women's International Union. A certain Mrs. Briggs seems to have poisoned Mrs. Bull's mind toward Mrs. Sewall, accusing her of all sorts of impossible things. Subsequently, perhaps through Mrs. Bull, Miss Farmer's mind became poisoned in the same manner, and she turned against her, after having invited her to Greenacre, and caused her to be chosen one of the Fellowship trustees. Mme. de Bielski's letter to Mrs. Briggs gives a true account of Mrs. Sewall. All this will probably have no effect on the court's decision in this scandalous case.

Nothing will have any effect on the court's decision in this remarkable case except the facts. Nathaniel Hobbs will get at the facts in this case. His verdict will be based upon these facts.

Whether Mrs. Sewall painted pictures through Yogi powers, as somebody has testified or written, has nothing to do with the allegation that Mrs. Bull was of unsound mind when she signed her last will and testament or was unduly influenced by those about her, to the gross injury of her only child.

They will take it up again at Alfred next Wednesday, and before the case is over—it seems likely to take all of next week, at least—Mr. Whipple may summon Olea Bull Vaughan from West Lebanon, ten miles to the southwest.

MRS. SEWALL TELLS OF HER VISIT TO THE HOME OF MRS. BULL

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., May 27.—Mrs. May Wright Sewall, one of America's most prominent club women and educators, who is here to lecture, denies that she ever had any connection with the Cambridge Hindu cult.

"If it were not for the fact that the names of dead persons are involved in the affair I should feel inclined to laugh," said Mrs. Sewall, who is lecturing for the National League of Medical Freedom. "Any person endowed with the least bit of common sense knows that the supposed acts of mysticism are impossible. Any person who knows me will assure himself or herself that I would have nothing to do with such a movement.

"In fact, one might sum up the entire affair by stating that Mrs. Briggs is ill. She has been ill since I first met her."

Then Mrs. Sewall told of her stay at the home of Mrs. Ole Bull. She declared she remained at the home of Mrs. Bull from October 8, 1907, to February 1, the following year.

"Mrs. Bull left for London in November," said Mrs. Sewall. "I heard from her only a few times, and her letters contained nothing of any Hindu religion. They were mere personal missives such as one would expect from a very dear friend.

"I met Mrs. Briggs twice, at the home of Mrs. Bull. On the first occasion she told me she was greatly interested in the work of Kavanda, the Indian student, who appeared at the Columbian exposition at Chicago in 1893. I discussed this topic only from the standpoint of one who has studied it as any student would. I am interested in India and its people only with the object of aiding in educating the Hindu student. On the second meeting—well, imagine what we discussed."

"The Raja Yoga," was suggested

"No," observed Mrs. Sewall, "Mrs. Briggs was telling me what nice preserves she could make. She devoted herself exclusively to that subject. "This person Roberto, who appears to be giving testimony relating to the Yoga, was a sort of hired man, in so far as I could judge. I met him only as I would meet any person who works about the home as a servant, one might say. Mrs. Alberta Stevens has died. I will say nothing about her.

"The letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Briggs in which my name is mentioned caused me to wonder if malice is behind the entire affair. In these letters, I have heard, it is said that I have demoniacal powers. Do I look, do I talk as though I have such powers? I know nothing abut undergoing surgical operations without pain. It is of no use for me to go into the details of each one of these ridiculous statements.

"I wish to cast off the entire matter by stating that it is false—utterly false, in every respect. I met Mrs. Briggs. I lived at Mrs. Bull's house. Other than that I know nothing about this Hindu cult or any of its connections."

While at the Bull home, Mrs. Sewall declared she wrote the History of the International Council of Women, which has since been published. During her stay, she says her secretary was with her at all times. The record of Mrs. Sewall as a club woman and educator is an enviable one. For five years she was president of the International Council of Women. She founded the Girls' Classic School of Indianapolis. She was a delegate to the World's exposition at Paris, and was also a representative to the Peace conference at The Hague.

As an author, magazine writer and publisher she is also known. Mrs. Sewall delivered a lecture in Grand Rapids last night before the Ladies' Literary Club, one of the exclusive women's clubs of this city. She is the guest of her brother, Dr. John Mill Wright, who owns a beautiful suburban home south of the city.

Recipe for the "Raja Yoga"

To attain "Raja Yoga," or the control of the mind, as laid down by the Swami Vivekananda, the novice has to go through some eight steps. In the end the soul, or mind, becomes detached from material things and the individual takes on the nature of a god. Down at the base of the spine there reposes the kundalini, a "residual energy." In normal persons it lies dormant, in a triangular aperture, giving rise to hallucinations, visions, dreams and other things. In order to be a god—to rise above the things of earth—you have got to move the kundalini upwards until it touches the brain. This is done by way of the sussuma canal.

FIREMEN FIGHT AS OLD MANSION BURNS

Methuen Department Resents Arrival of Lawrence Men to Save Breen Home.

METHUEN, May 27.—A three-alarm fire to-night in the famous Breen mansion in Prospect street caused a loss of $20,000, and a fight between the Lawrence and Methuen firemen. For twenty minutes while the flames were raging, the Methuen firemen had it out with the Lawrence men, who responded to an alarm in that city. Methuen refused to permit Lawrence to take a hand in the fire fighting, declaring that Lawrence had nothing to do with the blaze and was simply out to "take away the glory."

Ex-Aderman John Breen of Lawrence, who came here with the Lawrence firemen, scored the Methuen men for their obstinacy. While the argument lasted not a line of hose was turned on the fire. The Lawrence firemen were finally allowed to attach their lines to the water plugs.

The mansion was owned by the widow of Mayor John Breen, Mrs. Nancy J. Breen. She was in the house alone with her daughter. The fire is supposed to have been started by defective wiring in the kitchen. Valuable family heirlooms and personal effects were destroyed.

WALTON STRIKERS FIRM.

Girls and Men in Chelsea Insist on Victory or Arbitration.

The 400 operatives on strike at the Heard-street plant of the A. G. Walton Shoe Company in Chelsea since April 1 are unanimously opposed to returning to work unless the firm settles with their union or agrees to arbitrate. Official announcement to this effect was made following a largely attended meeting of the union at No. 206 Broadway. A number of the strikers, 125 of whom are girls, have obtained temporary employment. The others are being cared for out of a strike fund raised by popular subscriptions, lectures and dances. Salem, Fall River, Lynn, Worcester, Providence, and New York, have contributed to this fund. Several Chelsea merchants also have contributed, and a well-known physician in that city has given free medical treatment and free medicine.

Four pretty and accomplished Conservatory of Music students who demonstrated on the courts yesterday afternoon that they are as proficient with the racquet as they are on the piano or 'cello.

GARDINER HALL yesterday took revenge on Frost Hall in the New England Conservatory of Music tennis tournament for the defeat in the singles of Friday, by taking two straight sets in the doubles, winning 6-3 and 6-4 in the preliminaries yesterday afternoon. On Friday Miss Helen Fair of Saltsburg, Pa., representing Frost Hall, defeated Miss Cornelia Kelley of Germantown, Pa., representing Gardiner Hall, in the singles preliminary 6-4, 6-3. The finals of both singles and doubles will be played tomorrow, the singles at 10 o'clock and the doubles at 4 o'clock.

Gardiner Hall was represented in the doubles by Miss Kelley and Miss Olive Summerlen, of Tampa, Fla., Frost being represented by Miss Fair and Miss Addie Helms, of Port Henry, N. Y. Miss Leslie Le Beaume of St. Louis, representing Hall, the third conservatory domitory, will play Miss Fair in the singles for the championship of the conservatory on Monday, and Miss Le Beaume and Miss Bertha Graves, of Gloversville, N. Y., will represent Dana Hall in the doubles on Monday afternoon.

This is the fourth annual tennis tournament of the N. E. C. Tennis Association, which comprises almost all of the 200 members of the school. Silver cups are presented to the winners of the tournaments, individual cup for the winner of the singles, and a large cup to be kept in the dormitory of the team winning in the doubles. The cup in the doubles tournament remains in the domitory during the year until won by some other domitory. It does not become the property of the domitory until won three successive times. Each of the domitories have had it for one year thus far, it being in Frost in Frost Hal lat present.

The officers of the association are Miss Louise Gilbert, of Seattle, Washington, president; Miss Charlotte Maxson, of Westerly, R. I., secretary, and Miss Aileen of Portland, Ore., treasurer.

URGES $50,000 CITY BOAT.

Engineer Says Health Craft, Vigilant, Is Nearly a Wreck.

That the health department boat is a dilapidated old tub and liable to go to pieces if pounded by a rough sea will be the substance of a report of Division Engineer Fay of the Public Works Department to Mayor Fitzgerald to-morrow.

An examination of the boat, which is twenty-five years old, disclosed that nearly every one of the hull timbers of the Vigilant is rotten. The purchase of a new steel boat to cost $50,000 will be recommended by Engineer Fay. To repair the present boat would cost over $10,000 and and that would only put it in a sea-worthy condition for about five years.

It is declared that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has served notice on the other trans-Atlantic companies that it will not be a party to the new agreement to be entered upon at the expiration of the present agreement.

WOMAN AIDS IN DEFENCE OF 'FORT'

Evicted Occupants Camp Out on Site of Building and Will Replace Structure.

"A man's home should be his castle and no man should dare to chop it down," said Harry H. Hendrick late yesterday afternoon as he surveyed a hole in the ground where a few hours before had stood the restaurant he and his wife had run for several seasons. There was something of sadness in his eye, for the couple had prospered with their little business in the one-story building that was once upon a time numbered 837 Sixth street, South Boston.

"It's pretty hard lines when men can hew a house down over the owner's head," Hendricks went on. He could well say this, for yesterday that was his experience. The house had literally been unroofed over his head. Then, a little later when the razing crew had got through with the roof, they offended more when they cut away the flooring beneath Hendrick's feet.

Occupants Were Game.

But Hendrick was game. So was his wife. They fought long and hard. True, they weren't successful. But still, it was a great battle. The couple surrendered, but only after a gruelling contest, in which the husband had defied the enemy by flourishing his shot gun from the roof, while his wife doughtily stood on the threshold and dared any man to approach "to lay foul hand on her property."

While it lasted, it was exciting. Policemen, lawyers and a big throng of spectators looked on with keen interest. It all came about as the result of the determination of Hugh H. McInnis, said to be sixty years old and a former lessee of the property, to demolish the restaurant.

McInnis led the attack. He marshalled three razers in his rear. If he had been possessed of a sabre, he might have cried, "On, boys, on, and capture the redoubt." But sword or no sword, the "boys" came on at their leader's word. Hendrick quickly manoeuvred his forces into position. Gun in hand, he climbed to the roof. His wife defended the portal.

Defence Outgeneralled.

The battle was on. There were threats and counter threats. If the enemy flanked, the defenders outgeneraled them. Mrs. Hendrick boldly defied eviction.

Finally came a short truce. Arbitration was suggested. Lawyers were secured by both sides. Hendrick gave up his gun, but firmly stood on the pinnacle. Then the enemy sprung a broadside from their axe-artillery. The chopping started. It didn't stop until the building was hewed from roof to cellar, hacked hip and thigh like the army of Agag.

The defenders retreated into the newly built annex to the restaurant, and still contested every inch of the ground. The annex was saved. Patrolmen from the South Boston Station stood by and looked calmly on. They didn't even play the role of peacemakers.

It was a great day for South Boston. Everybody said the defence had put up a great fight. Last night, Mr. Hendrick declared he would stand by his ground literally, as he means to stick to his restaurant. He said he had received a permit from Bernard L. Tarbox, to retain possession until next year when Mr. Tarbox will build an addition to the Peninsular Hotel, which he has recently bought.

All in the Limelight.

Tarbox himself came into the limelight some months ago by eloping with Miss Devine, his stenographer, when he was married to another woman.

McInnis in his own behalf claimed he had a right to raze the Hendrick restaurant, through an agreement he had made with the Hinkey estate from which he had leased the property. This property has since passed into the hands of Tarbox.

"As for my wife and myself," declared Hendrick last night, "we are going to build up the restaurant again and nobody is going to tear it down, let me tell you."

MRS. SHAW GIVES BOYS A BALL FIELD

Barney Willander "King of Cypress Street" for Daring to Ask Her Permission.

"Barney" Willander is "King of Cypress Street" in Brookline, by virtue of his spokesmanship in securing permission from Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw for the lads to play ball on part of the Shaw estate.

"Barney" and others of a committee from the Brookline Boys' Club won the playground after waiting vainly for the Park Commission to get one for them.

The club was only recently formed. It consists of fifteen boys, ranging in age from ten to fifteen years. These boys wanted a playground. The present Cypress street playgrounds in front of the high school building is practically forbidden ground to them, for the big boys have pre-empted it.

The boys knew, in a general way, that the Park Commission was looking for a site. "But, oh shucks, it'll take them forever," was the way they felt about it. So they began to consider the project of a playground for themselves.

"Gee, Missus Shaw's place would make a dandy playground," said one of them.

"Gee, you bet," was the enthusiastic chorus.

Go To See The Missus.

"What yer say if we go up and see Missus Shaw and ask her to let us use part of it?" said the first speaker.

This time his suggestion was received in absolute silence.

"Gee," said one finally, "we'd get thrown out."

"Gee, I ain't afraid," finally said the boy most responsible.

Others promptly said they weren't either. That was enough. The club found itself pledged to wait upon Mrs. Shaw. A committee of six was appointed, and they went to the Shaw mansion. They had already rehearsed their speech to Mrs. Shaw.

When they had finally been admitted to the stately and rather awe inspiring precincts of the Shaw mansion by the maid, who almost lost her impassivity of countenance when she saw who Mrs. Shaw's "callers" were. They were met by Miss Starr, Mrs. Shaw's secretary.

That necessitated a different method of address, but "Barney" Willander rose to the occasion. He had to with the others all nudging him.

"Please, Miss Starr," he stammered, "will you ask Missus Shaw if we can't have the use of some of her land here to play ball on, 'cause we have no other place to play except the big playgrounds, and there are too many big fellers there and they chase us away."

Secure Another Hearing.

"Well, now, wait a moment, boys, and I will have a talk with Mrs. Shaw and see what she thinks of it," said Miss Starr.

Anxiously waiting for the answer the boys moved from one position to another. When Miss Starr returned the boys listened with interest to the answer to their appeal.

"Boys, Mrs. Shaw is not just now prepared to give you an answer, but suggests that all of you boys come up here next Saturday and we'll talk it over once more," said Miss Starr.

"Thank you, ma'am, we will be here at 9 o'clock next Saturday morning, and I do hope that she will say that we can use the ground, for I promise you that we won't make a bit of trouble and I will take good care to see that you won't be bothered," said the little spokesman to Miss Starr, and with the other boys left the house.

The boys were on hand the following Saturday and calling at the house again saw Miss Starr and a short talk was held, after which she told the boys that they might have the section of the estate on the Chestnut street side, providing that there was no cursing, no Sunday playing and loud noise. Jumping to their feet, the boys extended their hands to Miss Starr and offered all sorts of thanks to Mrs. Shaw and to herself.

Now Barney Is King.

The boys, while at the house, were asked to appoint a committee of three to call at the Shaw house every Saturday morning and report to Miss Starr and tell her of any trouble, if there was any, between the boys on the grounds. The committee appointed were Lester Dalzell, Bernard Willander and James Rogers, who are held responsible for all the boys that play on the grounds, and must report each week. The boys left the house, having of course, the best of feeling for Mrs. Shaw, and ran and told the other members of the club the good news, and they lost no time in getting into baseball practice on their new grounds.

Later "Barney" secured permission from Mrs. Shaw for some of the older Cypress street boys to play on one side of the Shaw gounds. Now "Barney" is the "King of Cypress Street" and the boys can't do enough for him.

England to Keep Bunyan's Book.

LONDON, May 27.—In fear that another of England's priceless relics might go to America, the government intervened in the auction sale at Sothby's, where John Bunyan's copy of Fox's "Book of Martyrs" was to have been put up, and the sale was stopped on order of the Attorney-General. The book was the property of the Bedford Institute.

LABOR TO UNVEIL A TRIBUTE TO LEADER

Handsome Memorial Tablet to Philip H. Sweet Dedicated Today at Forest Hills.

THE memorial tablet placed over the grave of Philip H. Sweet by the trade unionists of the State will be unveiled and dedicated in Forest Hills cemetery at 2:30 this afternoon.

Frank H. McCarthy, New England organizer of the American Federation of Labor, and one of the dead labor leader's most intimate friends, will call the gathering together at the grave site.

Rev. Mr. Rourmaniere of St. Paul's Episcopal church, will lead with prayer, and Thomas J. Durnin, of Holyoke, president of the Massachusetts State Branch of the A. F. of L., of which organization Mr. Sweet was a past president, will make the opening address.

This will be followed by brief addresses from James Duncan of Quincy, first vice-president of the A. F. of L.; Dennis D. Driscoll, secretary-treasurer of the State branch; William H. O'Brien, the president; Henry Abrahams, secretary of the Boston Central Labor Union; and Frederick W. Mansfield, attorney for the State branch.

Nephew to Unveil Tablet.

The oration of the day will be by Andrew C. Hughes of Newton, international president of the Coopers' Union, of which organization Mr. Sweet was a member at the time of his death, and which had honored him with numerous offices during his long service in the trade union movement.

Master Frank T. Seigel, a nephew of Mr. Sweet, will unveil the tablet, which is of finely carved light-grained granite and sets on a grey-granite pedestal, the face of the tablet bearing the following inscription:

"Philip H. Sweet, born Oct. 19—1860. Died Oct. 24—1910. A tribute from organized labor."

The seal of the State Branch, a miniature globe with clasped hands stretching across the sea, is carved in strong bas-relief of the upper portion of the tablet itself, encircled by this inscription:

Organized 1887.
"Massachusetts Federation of Labor. Labor Omnia Vincit."

Labor's Seal on Memorial.

On the back of the tablet there is carved the clasped hands and seal of the Boston Central Labor Union, of which organization Mr. Sweet had been treasurer for many years at the time of his death.

This seal is fashioned after the familiar arm-and-hammer insignia of labor, bearing this motto:

The memorial as a whole is somewhat unassuming, because of the small size of the cemetery lot. But its very simplicity is said to be characteristic of Philip H. Sweet, to whose memory organized labor will pay its tribute of respect this afternoon.

An invitation is extended to all trade unionists, and to Mr. Sweet's personal friends, to attend the dedicatory exercises to-day. The lot is in the Beulah Field section of Forest Hills Cemetery, and is numbered 1,575-1,576.

TALKS ON CITY PLANNING.

Prof. Pray to Open Series of Six To-morrow Afternoon.

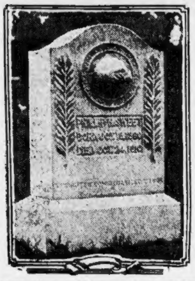
MEMORIAL TABLET TO PHILIP H. SWEET DEDICATED TODAY



$2,000 DOLLHOUSE IS GIFT TO QUINCY GIRL

Luxurious "Toy" Is Finished in Mahogany and Handsomely Furnished Throughout.

What is probably the most luxurious doll house ever constructed has been completed by Timothy Moriarty, of No. 41 Germain avenue, Quincy Point. The cost of the doll house is estimated at $2,000. Moriarty, who is an expert cabinet-maker, has been working for two years on the house. It was built for his sixteen-year-old daughter Mary, a student in the Quincy high school. This is the second doll house Mary's father built for her. The first one was constructed about nine years ago. It cost $900. She uses it now as a storehouse for the furniture of the new house.

The house contains nine rooms and is five feet high and three and a half feet wide, exclusive of the front and rear reception room, parlor, dining room, kitchen, library, bath and three chambers.

Finished in Mahogany.

The interior of the house is finished in mahogany. The latest panel work adorns the walls of the reception parlor. Every room is lighted by electricity and heated by steam. Leaded glass panes of different designs are used as windows.

The front door has three panels with French plate glass. Electric bells are on the front and rear entrance doors. Every room is furnished appropriately. Each piece of furniture is hand made. There are thirty pieces of furniture. The kitchen contains a cooking and gas range, two set tubs and hot water boiler. The bathroom contains a tub, water closet and wash bowl. The windows in the bath room are glazed. There are closets, shelves and mantelpieces in every room. The dining room has the latest model china closet.

The best of white pine clapboards have been used. The roof is shingled with real red cedar shingles. The body of the house has been painted with five coats of yellow paint. The roof is green and the trimmings white. The blinds are painted the regulation green.

Bathrooms and Hot Water.

The front piazza is constructed of paneled mahogany. Three beautiful columns support the roof of the piazza. The cellar is constructed of imitation brick. The chimney is constructed of wood, painted brick color.

The first and second floors are connected by a beautiful stairway. Both the kitchen and bath rooms have hot and cold water pipes.

Miss Moriarty takes great pleasure in showing her "toy" to her girl friends in school. She has passed the age to appreciate dolls, but is proud of her doll house. The house is an exact reproduction of a house recently constructed in Quincy at a cost of $4,500, but is more luxuriously finished and furnished.

Adams Blameless for Crash.

REDLANDS, Cal., May 27.—The coroner's inquest on the death of Gerald Purvis, last Friday evening, when he drove his motor cycle into a cement culvert to avoid a collision with an automobile operated by Porter H. Adams of Boston, has rendered the decision: "Unavoidable accident." Young Adams is absolved from any blame. The evidence showed that he did everything possible to prevent a collision, even wrecking his machine and risking his own life.

COUNTRY OUTING FOR TENEMENT CHILDREN

Two weeks' vacations out in the real country, for all the two hundred members of the Hawthorne Club, will be the result this Summer of Mrs. Samuel Cabot's generous loan of a large country house to the club. The house which will accommodate from twenty to twenty-five children at a time, is on the old Chandler estate, in Weymouth, within a stone's throw of the Fore River ship building yards. The place is ideally situated for a Summer home, surrounded by beautiful trees, down near the water's edge, and within a ten-cent car fare of Boston.

The club already has two houses on Garland street in the South End, and the membership of the club is chiefly children of the district. Only children between five and ten years old are eligible, but once a member always a member, and as the club is twelve years old now, it has some quite sizable members.

Existing conditions in this mighty strife,
Cut into action the bones of our life.

But eagerly and labor will conquer all.

June will also soon appear.
Soon the Summer breezes 'll blow,
And Winter's clouds will shed their snow.
Now is the time to make your choice;
We've got the goods—
Hark to our voice.
Our Bargain Basement—scarce two weeks old—

FINAL DETAILS FOR TRIP TO MONTREAL

Canadian City Planning Hearty Welcome to Visiting New England Business Men.

Final plans for the trip of Boston business men to Montreal on June 6, under the auspices of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, will be arranged at a meeting of the Exchange at the City Club at 1 p. m. Wednesday. Edward P. Shaw, former State Treasurer, who is chairman of the committee of arrangements, will make his report. Following lunch and other business, George Smith, president of the Chamber of Commerce, will speak on Boston's harbor development. The merchants of Montreal are planning a hearty welcome to the visitors.

President Martin of the Exchange will head the delegation which is to inspect the harbor and dock development in the Canadian city and invites the Grand Trunk Railroad to come to Boston

It was originally planned to have about 300 go on the trip but present indications, according to President Martin, point to a much larger party. Charles E. Lewis is receiving the applications for reservations at the rooms of the Exchange, No 13 Exchange street.

Leave Boston June 6.

It has been definitely decided that the party will leave Boston by special train on Tuesday morning, June 6, at 9 o'clock, going via the Boston & Maine to White River Junction and thence via Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk roads. Montreal will be reached between 6 and 7 that evening and the party will be the guests at supper at the Place Viger Hotel of the Montreal Real Estate Exchange. At 8.15 the same evening the party will visit Dominion Park, an amusement resort, as the guests of the city of Montreal

At 9 45 the next morning the party will inspect the harbor and docks as guests of the Harbor Commissioners of Montreal. At noon the party will visit and take lunch at Mount Royal as guests of the city. The afternoon will be devoted to further inspection of municipal improvements and at 6 o clock the visitors will sit down to a banquet at the Place Viger Hotel as guests of the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk railway officials.

Several distinguished Canadians will speak. Mayor Fitzgerald, who will go to Montreal Tuesday evening, arriving in time to be with the party all day Wednesday; Governor Foss, who may also take the same train, and President John J. Matrin of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange will be the chief Boston speakers.

Good List of Speakers.

Among the Canadian officials who will speak will be Mayor J. J. Guerin of Montreal, Hon. Raoul Dandurand, speaker of the Canadian Senate; Robert W. Reford, vice-president of the Montreal Board of Trade; G. T. Bell, assistant passenger traffic manager of the Grand Trunk. C. E. E. Ussher, pasenger traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific road; John T. P. Knight, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Bankers' Association and manager of the Montreal clearing house; L. E. Geoffrion and C. C. Ballantyne, harbor commissioners of Montreal; Fitz-James E. Browne, real estate broker, George H Ham of the Canadian Pacific road, Alderman U. H Dandurand, David Sneath, secretary of the Monteral Harbor Commission, and his assistant, M. P. Fennell, Jr

These arrangements have been completed by Charles M. Conant, one of the directors of the Massachusetts Exchange, who visited Montreal

Included in the Boston party as guests of the Massachusetts Exchange will be all the members of the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs.

President George Smith of the Chamber of Commerce and a delegation of members of that organization, probably two or three Governors of New England States, the Mayors of several cities outside Boston, and a number of the boards of trades in Massachusetts cities will also be included in the party.

YACHT CLUB CANNON BOOM AT MARBLEHEAD

Two of the biggest yacht clubs in the country, the Corinthian and the Eastern, went into commission at noon yesterday for the Marblehead season.

Without any formality other than the boom of the big brass saluting pieces on the lawn of each club and the raising of the club burgee, the clubhouses were opened.

With the placing of the club colors at the masthead, every yacht that happened to be in commission and there were a few, broke out the colors of the club to which they belonged.

It was a jolly gathering of yachtsmen that assembled last evening at both clubhouses for a "first night" Dinner was served to many who had motored down to Marblehead Neck Commodore C. H. Wheelock of the Corinthian Club, the new flag officer of that hustling organization, was surrounded by a crowd of yachting men and the schedule of the season was talked over.

The midsummer series coming in August was the principal topic. From the reports given last night by the regatta committee the record of last season will be broken and that was the best ever for the Corinthian Club or any other along the Massachusetts shore

PARK SQUARE RULING TO COST CITY $30,000

It will cost the city $30,000 unless some plan is found to offset the Supreme Court decision that the transfer of the old station property in Park square from the New Haven road to the Park Square Trust was illegal

This situation was uncovered at City Hall yesterday. Before the Supreme Court decision the Mayor and Street Commissioners had approved awards for damages amounting to more than $11,000 in addition to filing with the registry of deeds plans of the proposed improvements together with takings by eminent domain of property in Berkeley and Stanhope streets and St. James avenue.

For all the improvements and damages aggregating $30,000 the Park Square Trust through Laurence Minot, agreed to pay one-half. Unless that amount is forthcoming the city is committed to pay the entire cost.

For land damages alone the Street Commissioners, with the Mayor's approval, made the following awards: Baptist Social Union, land in Berkeley street, $2,000, and in Stanhope street, $300; George A. Gardner, land in St. James avenue, $2,100, land in Berkeley street, $500; Academy of Notre Dame, land in Berkeley street, $1,500, land in St. James avenue, $1,000; Trustees of the Church street Methodist Episcopal church, land in Berkeley street, $500; Maria L. Russell, land in St. James avenue, $850; B. Helen Richardson, trustee, land in St. James avenue, $850; Linus Childs, heirs or devisees, land in St. James avenue, $400, and Miles Standish, land in St. James avenue, $400. There were also several smaller takings.

WIN WORKHORSE PRIZE.

Here's Chance to Display Fine Animals.

If any old work horse gets on your nerves to-morrow, seems to be as nervous and high-strung and prankish as one of those four-legged aristocrats of the Back Bay which go down to the North Shore for the Summer, here's hoping you won't get out of patience with him. The ninth annual parade of the Boston Work Horse Parade Association takes place early in the morning of Memorial Day—that's Tuesday—and naturally the old horses are more or less agitated about gold and silver medals and such

Tuesday's parade will be "without exaggeration, the finest, most artistic display of horseflesh ever seen in this country or any other." This was said yesterday in a statement signed by Henry C. Merwin, president; Lewis A. Armistead, secretary and Joshua Atwood, 3d., treasurer of the association.

The association, which is in need of money—not for Tuesday's big show of 1 400 horses, but for stable inspection and so on—calls particular attention to the fact that the poor man's horse has been particularly successful in the annual exhibit. Says the statement:

PUGILIST IS AN ELOPER.

"James Donovan," a welterweight pugilist whose real name is Delle Donnevincenzo, and Ceila Fronduto, an eighteen-year-old girl living at No. 84 Prince street, North End, eloped yesterday, were married and left the city "for parts unknown"

The girl left her home to go as usual, it was supposed, to the Foss Candy Factory, where she is employed Instead, she met Donnevincenzo at the City Hall and they were married. They went to the South Station, where the bridegroom stopped long enough to write a letter to his bride's parents, and then they took a train out of the city. The girl's father appealed to the police of Station 1 to find the girl, but as she is over age they could take no action

OPPOSES NEWSBOYS LICENSING SCHEME

Mitchell Freiman, chief justice of the Boston Newsboys Trial Board, in a letter to the City Council yesterday, expressed his disapproval of the plan to give the control of the licensing of newsboys to the School Committee. The plan proposed provides that the committee shall control licensed newsboys between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years. The statement follows:

Boston, May 27, 1911.

Dear Sirs:

I write to express my personal disapproval of the plan advocated to transfer the control of licensed newsboys from fourteen to sixteen years of age, to the Boston School Committee. Whatever the merits of the present supervision of these boys may be, I do not believe that the Boston School Committee should have any control whatsoever over a boy who is not attending school. It would not be proper for this department to assume control, nor have they machinery for it. Furthermore, it would leave the issuance of the license in one place and the supervision and power of suspension and revocation in another and totally different place. This would make for bad administration.

I am satisfied that the great majority of the older newsboys themselves would object, as has been evidenced by the resolutions already passed by the Boston Newsboys Union

I am expressing only my personal and not my official opinion as Chief Justice of the Newsboys Trial Board. The Board has formulated no views on the matter, and probably will not do so, but I believe I am correct in saying that the individual members of the board are in accord with the views above expressed.

Very truly yours,
MITCHELL FREIMAN.

B. & M. AND TOWN CLASH.

Grade Crossing Problem Comes Up Before Commission.

Representatives of the Boston & Maine Railroad and of Waverley clashed at several points yesterday when the question of the abolishment of grade crossings in Waverley was argued before a commission appointed by the Superior Court. The railroad wants the town to close Lexington street, so far as crossing the railroad tracks is concerned, curve it around into Trapelo street and then allow traffic over a bridge to accommodate both streets.

As both of these streets are county roads the people of Waverley are opposed to closing one of them. One railroad engineer estimated that the total cost of the improvement contemplated would be $207,000, while the town engineer put it at $160,000. The railroad is to pay 65 per cent of the cost, the State 25 and the town 10.

Three Days' Campaign Aids Soldiers' Memorial Building.

The third day of the Melrose campaign to raise $20,000 for a Soldiers' Memorial building closed last night with a total of $14,893.26 pledged or already paid. The total gain Saturday was $3,066.24 The new building planned will cost, with the land, $84 000. Of this amount Melrose has appropriated $45,000, John C. F. Slayton has given $17,500, $1,500 came from the treasury of the G. A. R., and the remaining $20,000 is to be raised by this campaign. The work is being pushed by teams who canvas the town The team headed by Miss Margaret W. Carney is in the lead with a total of about $1,200.

The building when completed will contain permanent quarters for the G. A. R., and will also have a large auditorium, belonging to the city and seating 1,050, to replace the present city auditorium, which has been declared to be a fire trap.

GET NEW TIME TABLES.

Otherwise You'll Be Late for New Haven Road Trains.

Wild Beasts Dash From Arena Among Panic-Stricken Crowds as Flames Rage Almost Unchecked

NEW YORK, May 27.—A shift in the wind early to-day saved the greater part of Coney Island from destruction in the most disastrous fire of its history.

As it was, Dreamland, the largest amusement park on the island, was razed to a flat waste of ashes and twisted steel.

The fire spread on both sides of Dreamland along Surf avenue and through to the ocean front until an area of fifteen acres once occupied by hotels, concert halls and other amusement places was a blackened, smoking field of embers.

Failure of the high pressure system rendered the firemen almost helpless to check the progress of the flames and Deputy Chief Lally was ready to resort to dynamiting to save the west end of the island when the friendly shift in the wind came.

The property loss will probably be more than $4,000,000 and 2,000 persons are thrown out of employment just at the beginning of the season. Only a very small percentage of the loss is covered by insurance.

Wild Animals Cow Crowd.

The fire was the greatest and most thrilling spectacle ever staged at Coney Island, with a wild animal climax, when a lion and two panthers escaped from the burning arena and ran into the crowded streets, making even the boldest of the spectators go white under the red glare of the flames.

All three of the beasts were hunted down and shot to death by foot and mounted police.

There were many notable rescues, including the removal of the "incubator babies" from the flame-swept grounds of Dreamland

The burned district extends from West Tenth street to West Fifth street. Every structure in this district on the ocean front was destroyed

Ocean Wind Fans Flames.

Starting at 2:20 a. m. in "Hell Gate," Dreamland Park, the fire spread quickly, fanned by a wind which swept in from the ocean. At 3.30 the fire had burned through the west wall of the park and had spread to adjoining buildings. In quick succession the flames ate into "The Trip to the Clouds," "Loop the Loop," the incubator baby show, Bostock's animal show, Thompson's scenic railway, and many smaller amusement places, restaurants and saloons

From Dreamland the fire spread westward for five blocks with the firemen fighting to keep it from Luna Park and Steeplechase, the two other big establishments on the Island. These were saved.

The fire boats Zephar, Mills, New Yorker and Seth Low steamed to a point off the beach nearest Dreamland and turned streams on the blaze from their high pressure apparatus.

Miss Agnes Thorp, a reader in the "Creation," was asleep in her room on Dreamland pier when she was aroused by the cries of her pet parrot. Dropping from the window, she fell twenty-five feet and was badly bruised, but managed to save herself and her parrot.

During the height of the fire a cub bear escaped from a cage in the Bostock animal show and ran howling into Surf avenue. A chauffeur persuaded the bear to get into his taxicab and drove off with it. A leopard also got loose and was shot in Surf avenue. Only ten of the 100 animals in the Bostock show were saved

Battalion Chief Dooley had a narrow escape from death He was standing in the middle of the street directing the fight when a fire engine, drawn by three horses, bore down upon him. In attempting to escape Dooley slipped upon a line of hose and fell. The horses were upon him, but the chief had the presence of mind to grasp the ring in the end of the tongue attached to the engine caisson and held on. He was dragged a block before the horses were stopped Miss Edith Green, secretary to Manager Max [illegible] of the Dreamland Company with Miss Virginia West a friend, was in the administration building checking up the receipts of the day, when the fire broke out

Commenting on his impressions of business on the other side Mr Douglas said that business conditions in Europe are generally good. In order that the new Filene Building in every detail shall be the Ideal American Store, it is our aim to include every improvement that American and European experience has found to be worth while. In addition, it is expected that the New Filene Store will be the first to introduce late inventions together with original innovations, and for some time to come be the permanent exposition of the country of modern retail methods and equipment.

We are working and consulting with experts and specialists. But one of the fundamentals in the conduct of our business is to consult with those most to be affected by our plans. This gives those who are to carry out the work a chance to help in making the plans, and so shape their own work.

The public of New England is to be most affected by the new Filene Building. In a large sense it is to be their building. Upon its arrangement, equipment, service and merchandise will depend the convenience of those who will shop here. It seems only right that those who have had to put up with many inconveniences in stores in the past should have a chance to get the kind of a store they'd like to have. To invite and receive valuable suggestions would also be selfishly a good thing for us.

Indeed, upon the announcement that there was to be a new Filene Building, suggestions began to come in from many quarters through sheer interest and good will.

And, so, finding a general disposition to send us suggestions, we decided to send out a country-wide invitation and to add the zest of a prize.

CONDITIONS

1—Contest closes September 1, 1911.

Where two or more suggestions are received for the same idea, other things being equal, the first received will be awarded the prize, unless, in the opinion of the judges, the prize should be divided

2—Prizes will be awarded and announced on or about October 1, 1911.

3—All suggestions shall be the property of Wm. Filene's Sons Co.

4—The decisions of the judges shall be final

5—It is considered unnecessary to submit suggestions under nom de plume. Each suggestion should be signed by the sender and the address should be written carefully. Experience shows many people forget to give the address.

6—Suggestions already received will be considered for a prize.

7—Doubtless many suggestions will be received for ideas which the architects or we have already planned. Such suggestions obviously will not be considered for a prize. Contestants in this respect must depend on our good faith.

8—Mail all suggestions to Wm. Filene's Sons Co. (Publicity Dept.), 453 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

SUNDAY, MAY 28, 1911. SUNDAY, MAY 28, 1911.

THE LAST GRAND ARMY MAN

On next Tuesday, which is Memorial Day, the living soldiers who fought in America's great Civil War, will reverently observe the occasion with a fitting remembrance of the heroes who lie

> "Under the sod and the dew, > Waiting the judgment day."

This year there will be more graves to decorate than there were last—many more. And there will be fewer of the aged boys in blue to do it. In some cemeteries those who heard the bugle call that summoned thene to their farewell battle outnumbered those who are listening for the signal, five and six to one.

How the trembling, bowed and grizzled ranks of the heroes of the battle field are thinning!

The town of Avon, south of Boston, sent ninety-six soldiers to the Civil War. But nine of them are living. They constitute the smallest Grand Army Post in New England. Four only of them will be able to walk in the parade on Memorial Day. Maybe next year only one will be strong enough to take part in the ceremonies and then the next year—there may be none of the company able to drop a flower and a tear in memory of the comrades who have answered "Taps."

So that WITHIN A VERY FEW YEARS AT MOST the imaginary picture painted by Darius Cobb may be the photograph of a fact. The LAST living soldier will be paying his FINAL tribute to the heroic dead.

It would hardly seem necessary to remind the patriotic people of this country that this should be the greatest Memorial Day in all American history. Liberty and law loving citizens should show to the crumbling Grand Army forces that their brave deeds on battlefield, on the march, in hospital and in camp, have not been forgotten.

Let every grave in this broad land in which a soldier rests be decked with flowers as a Nation's tribute to patriotic valor!

It is peculiarly fitting that extraordinary efforts should be put forth in this direction this year, because it is the semi-centennial of the beginning of that great strife in which were enlisted thousands and thousands of the bravest boys who ever gave their lives for their country.

Seven years ago this Fall Boston saw what was then left of the Grand Army of the Republic march through her streets as a feature of the national reunion. Those who looked upon the picture of the old heroes, staggering from infirmity, stumbling from weakness, yet keeping on in the martial ranks as though the life of their country depended upon it, will never forget the scene.

Fewer by hundreds will be those who march in the parade at this year's reunion. Soon there will be none at all!

It is for that reason that the Sunday AMERICAN earnestly begs that next Tuesday's remembrance of our heroic dead surpass in every way anything that has ever been seen in America.

We owe it to our dead soldiers. It is the due of their living comrades.

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC VETERAN

NO badge of gold or jeweled decoration of honor worn in this country stands higher in the esteem of the American people than the simple little bronze button worn in the lapel of his coat by the veteran of the Civil War. Back of this modest insignia is a flood of sentiment that has been swelling as the years recede from the memorable struggle that rent the country into two angry factions.

As is regarded in those countries the Iron Cross of France and the Victoria Cross of England, so is the bronze Grand Army button held in this country—a country that has no longer a North or South, but stands united, all working together for a higher destiny.

VETERANS UNITE IN MEMORIAL TRIBUTE TO THEIR COMRADES IN GREAT WAR OF 50 YEARS AGO

Gray Soldiers Gather in Churches To-day to Pay Tribute to "Silent Army;" On Memorial Day They Will March to Graves to Lay Wreaths and Flags on Mounds Where Rest the Ashes of Nation's Defenders

CIVIL War veterans are to-day observing Memorial Sunday. Tuesday the nation will lay aside business to pay tribute to the soldiers and sailors who preserved the nation at the call of Abraham Lincoln in '61.

Grand Army men gather to-day at their headquarters and march in a body to churches where special memorial exercises are arranged. They will listen to the tribute paid to the gallant men who have gone beyond and look with tear-stained eyes to the thinning of the ranks that has now left but a meagre semblance of the gallant regiments that started for the war fifty years ago. But the same spirit of patriotism still lives in the breasts of those who have survived, and there is no cessation of interest and devotion to the exercises which have characterized Memorial Day exercises for so many years.

Tuesday the Grand Army posts will carry out their carefully planned exercises. It will be an assembling of the veterans who stood side by side in the days of the war and who now march to decorate the graves of dead comrades. In nearly every instance the posts assemble at their headquarters and march to the graveyards. Then they return to headquarters to have lunch and listen to special speakers of the day.

A pathetic spectable is offered by some of the posts where the ranks have been so thinned by death that there are but a dozen or more men to respond to the call. In many instances these veterans have to ride in carriages to the graves, as they are no longer able to respond to marching orders.

HOW THE SURVIVORS OBSERVE THE DAY.

Edward W. Kinsley Post, No. 112, attends services to-day at Tremont Temple. The comrades gather at Gilbert Hall, Tremont Temple, at 10:15 a. m., in full post uniform and march to the temple. A special sermon will be preached by the Rev. Courtland Myers.

Members of the post, associates and guests will assemble at Kingsley Hall on Memorial Day at 8:45 o'clock. Comrades will appear in full post uniforms. The column will be formed on Ashburton place, left resting on Somerset street, in the following order: Detail of police, Coast Artillery Corps Band, the military escort, Seventh Company Coast Artillery Corps; honorary escort to the post commander, the "Kinsley Associates;" the post commander and staff, an honorary staff consisting of invited guests and past post commanders; Senior Vice-Commander William E. Murdock, first company, with colors and color guard; second company, Junior Vice-Commander Newman W. Storer.

At Soldiers' Monument.

The line will proceed to the soldiers' monument on the Common, which will be decorated. At the conclusion of the exercises the column will march to Tremont Temple, where the following exercises will

"Make Memorial Day Sacred Soldiers' Sabbath," Is Plea of Commander-in-Chief John E. Gilman

A HALF century has passed since the outbreak of the Civil War. The boys who heard the call of Lincoln then and responded to it are now aged men. Their ranks are thinning faster and faster as the years go on. Soon the presence of a Grand Army comrade will be a rarity.

Then the general public will look upon him with awe and veneration. Why not anticipate the future and render him that reverence now, especially on that one day in all the year, the "Soldiers' Sabbath Day," when he wends his way to the cemetery and lays his tribute of love on the grave of his departed comrade.

Memorial Day is observed all over the country by the true lovers of the Republic; by those who realize the great benefits of citizenship in these United States, and who are consequently grateful to the men who preserved that citizenship and conferred those benefits.

Render unto him all that he is entitled to of your love, your gratitude and your devotion. Help him to make Memorial Day what it should be, sacred to the memory of the men, who, living, offered their lives on the altar of liberty.

Refrain from all unnecessary business and sport and make it what it should be, a holy, sacred, Soldiers' Sabbath Day.

(Signed) J. E. GILMAN,
Commander-in-Chief.

THAT silent sentinel who stands out in the public square at Avon, forever and ever looking up North Main street in the general direction of Boston, will [illegible] paraded on Tuesday [illegible], looking down upon all that is left of Packard Post, Grand Army of the Republic [illegible] all down his granite cheeks.

Nine out of thirty-two.

The brave little village of Avon, seventeen miles south of Boston, which sent ninety-six boys to the Civil War, which made up an entire company, is left in 1911 with the smallest Grand Army Post.

"There are only nine of us," Quartermaster Oliver said last night, "and to-night it looks as if two of the fellows will be too weak to get out, but we'll keep up the post as long as there are two left to hold a meeting."

Three of the boys who were out and about on Memorial Day a year ago have been laid at rest within the twelvemonth. When the veterans and their friends go around to the Catholic cemetery on Tuesday they will [illegible] the new made graves of Jeremiah Callahan and Michael Coney. At [illegible] cemetery they will remember Orrin Whitten.

"Orrin," Charley Oliver says, "was last year the youngest and the smartest man among us. One Sunday in July he took a trolley ride as far as Jamaica Plain, left the car there and was struck by an automobile and killed."

HERE ARE THE VETERANS OF PACKARD POST.

William F. Oliver, Commander
Ira McLaughlin
Charles B. Oliver
Henry Hayward
John Sweet
Michael J. Walsh
S. Frank Oliver
Henry L. Bunker
Joseph W. Bryant

Not one of these Boys in Blue was willing yesterday to undertake the job of being officer of the day on Tuesday. So, for the first time, the Grand Army men will go outside their own ranks for a chief marshal.

Michael J. Walsh had had the place of honor for several Memorial Days, but "I can't trust these old legs of mine any longer," said Michael. "They might go back on me, and that would hurt worse than surrendering the place to begin with."

Commander William F. Oliver is walking with a cane. Ira McLaughlin carries a bullet he got at Rappahannock station, Virginia. So it goes, down the shortening list. Comrade John Sweet, they say, will never leave his bed again, and if Henry L. Bunker is able to be out on Tuesday his friends will call it a miracle.

So they're going to ask Marshal Hunt, Hunt of the 4th Vermont, to serve, and they're quite sure Marshal will oblige, for all he resigned from Packard Post some years ago. Comrade Hunt never fails to show up with the comrades at funerals and the like, and, being as he's still spry, the boys expect to see him officer of the day. Hunt will make the tenth man.

Everybody knew it was coming. Year by year the boys have been growing older and weaker and fewer. Before many years the last Grand Army man will be among us. After that the Grand Army of the Republic will be a proud memory. In cities and the larger towns the posts are still big enough to make a showing, but out in little Avon, the smallest post of all marches out before the neighbors to sadly emphasize the fact that it all happened fifty years ago.

Packard Post was organized soon after Avon was set off in 1888 from the town of Stoughton. [illegible] that time Avon had been [illegible] Stoughton.

"Of course we felt that there ought to be a post in our own town," Charley Oliver says, "[illegible] East Stoughton had contributed ninety-six men to the war, and we set about getting one. Once we had thirty-two members.

We have our own hall, and in the beginning it was a pretty lively place. In late years we had been meeting twice a month [illegible], even that got to be too hard on us and last Winter we cut it down to once a month. The hall is a deserted place these days.

Formation of Line.

All who can get around will assemble at Forest Hall on Tuesday, however [illegible] uniform, at 7.30 in the morning. The veterans will march a few steps to [illegible] Hall and pick up Avon Court, No. 50 of the Catholic Order of Foresters, after which the line will be formed like this:

John [illegible] Camp, No. [illegible] Sons of Veterans,
[illegible]
G. M. Packard Post No. [illegible], W. F. Oliver, [illegible]
[illegible] O. F.

The procession will move to the Old Cemetery, Catholic and Avon Cemeteries, where the graves of forty-eight honored dead will be decorated. In each of the cemeteries the exercises will begin with a dirge by the band. In the Old Cemetery [illegible] graves will be decorated, in the Catholic Cemetery thirteen graves, where there will be a brief address by the Rev. Father Glennon, and in Avon Cemetery thirty-two graves.

Then they'll come back to the common, where in the square [illegible] an oration will be delivered by the Rev. Edward H. Brewster [illegible] chaplain of the day. The [illegible] S. Frank Oliver, [illegible] Roll of Honor and [illegible] at Gettysburg. It is [illegible] the exercises over this year [illegible] than 12 o'clock, when [illegible] Wade and the other [illegible] Woman's Relief Corps will serve dinner.

This is Avon's Roll of Honor:

Gift from the Town.

The monument in the square was a gift to the town from one of her native sons, Orlando Leach, who, having amassed a fortune in the publishing business in New York, came back to "East Stoughton" several years ago to occupy one of its most notable houses. His fellow citizens twice elected Mr. Leach to the Board of Selectmen. The Grand Army boys backed him unsuccessfully for the Legislature. That candidacy is said to have left some heartburnings. However, that may be, Mr. Leach sold his place and left Avon. His memory will remain, however, as long as the splendid monument:

"[illegible] years ago," Charley Oliver says, "[illegible] wasn't a hotter place [illegible] East Stoughton, now Avon. [illegible] the young fellows were [illegible] to the front. I got away [illegible] and received my final [illegible] of the war. A year [illegible] pretty near. I [illegible] but I saw [illegible], and Williamsburg [illegible] the [illegible] of Malvern Hill and Fair Oaks.

"Just before the fighting began, sentiment ran pretty high here and [illegible] who said a word in favor of [illegible] was in for a ducking, at [illegible].

Story of Kidnaping.

"I have always been ashamed of my part in the kidnaping of Ansel Curtis, when we took out of his shop and [illegible] for a night in the lock-up. I [illegible] was so much to blame [illegible] for my own grandfather [illegible] papers, and him a boy two years old.

Ansel had promiscuously let loose what we young fellows were [illegible] secession sentiments, so we descended on his shop in a swarm [illegible] of fifty years [illegible] and when he refused to salute the flag [illegible] we forced him up [illegible]. [illegible] father went around [illegible], but not until he [illegible] Ansel that it was a good thing his father wasn't around. [illegible] had been a major in the War of 1812."

Every Oliver house in town sent its full quota to the war. [illegible] Whitney, and Quartermaster [illegible] of Packard Post are brothers. [illegible] S. Frank Oliver is their [illegible]. William B. Oliver, a brother of Frank's, went out with the Fortieth Massachusetts and before Newbern, N. C., had his head cut off by a shell.

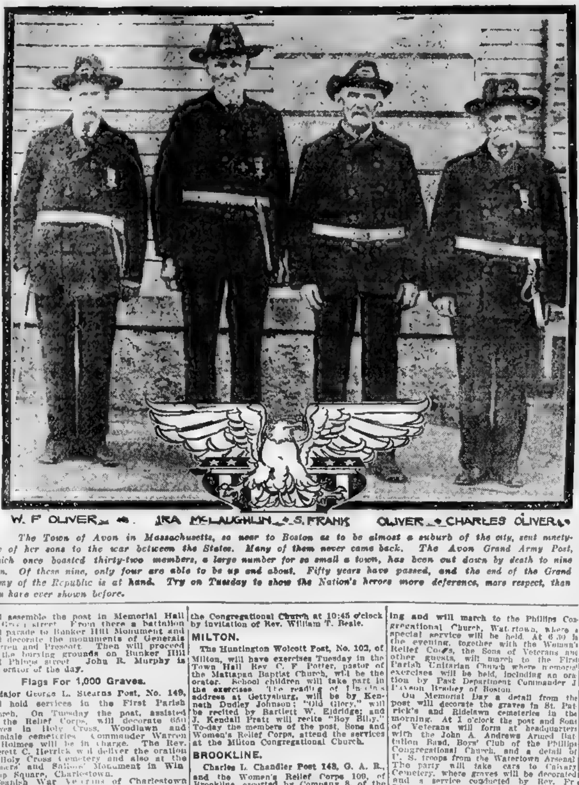
Doubt About a Grave.

None of the old boys was quite positive about the last resting place of Captain "Jim" McGonigle, who led the company, raised in and around Avon, or East Stoughton. "You see," the Oliver boys said, "we've had a Catholic cemetery here only ten years or so. Before that time interments from the Catholic parish were made at Randolph. Captain 'Jim' was possibly buried in Boston, for many years he had been employed at the Custom House."

Avon isn't changing much with the years, except that nowadays her shoemakers, instead of being employed at home, ride in to Brockton on the trolleys. Otherwise the description that somebody wrote thirty years ago or more is still good:

"This brisk and widewake village is making boots for the nation, and, by the good old honest way of hard work and fair dealing, is accumulating greenbacks and keeping pace with the general run of things in the Commonwealth. The people are too busy to trouble each other and too well off to move away; and so a peaceful, industrious, contented and increasing population crowds the place. Wages are good, living is low, and those willing to labor—and there are but few who are not—find enough to do, and come to plenty. This the snug and tasteful cottages, the peasant gardens, the well dressed and fine looking children amply manifest."

When that description was written Avon had a population of 1,500. To-day, although the local shops are closed, her people number above 2,000. They'll all be out in the square just before noon on Tuesday to do honor to brave men; to pay homage to the memory of those who are gone; to cheer and salute the noble little band of ten.



W. F. OLIVER — IRA McLAUGHLIN — S. FRANK OLIVER — CHARLES OLIVER

The Town of Avon in Massachusetts, so near to Boston as to be almost a suburb of the city, sent ninety-six of her sons to the war between the States. Many of them never came back. The Avon Grand Army Post, which once boasted thirty-two members, a large number for so small a town, has been cut down by death to nine men. Of these nine, only four are able to be up and about. Fifty years have passed, and the end of the Grand Army of the Republic is at hand. Try on Tuesday to show the Nation's heroes more deference, more respect, than you have ever shown before.

EXPRESS ALMOST WRECKED

WEST CONWALL, Ct., May 27.—Rushing along at sixty miles an hour, the New York express over the Berkshire Division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, with passengers for Canaan, Lenox and Pittsfield, was stopped on the edge of a ditch by brakes set by Engineer Harry Grant after the tender had been derailed by a broken journal. The derailed tender had torn up the roadbed for 500 feet. The chains between the tender and the engine were strong enough to hold, and in the opinion of railroad men this alone prevented the tender from breaking loose and dragging the coaches into the ditch.

GABY DESLYS GETS $100,000 IN PEARLS

"Even My King Couldn't Afford That," She Cries, When New Admirer Presents Them.

POOR MANUEL IS ECLIPSED

Late Constant Meyer Made So Many Wills That Heirs Are All Bemuddled.

By VANCE THOMPSON.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, May 27.—By reason of the romance of a rope of pearls, Gaby Deslys is the most envied woman in Paris to-day. A wealthy Cuban named Osuna having seen Gaby cavorting on the stage of the Theatre des Capucinnes became smitten worse than was King Manuel of Portugal.

"If you care for me," said Gaby, "You will buy me that rope of pearls at La Cloche."

The beatings of his heart compelled M. Osuna to make a bee line to La Cloche Freres, No. 18 Rue de la Paix. The pearls represented the expert collection of many years and the rope cost $100,000.

"Well," said Gaby, "My King could not afford to pay that."

Then, chaperoned by her sister, the beauty consented to sup with the Cuban at Maxim's. Gaby wears the pearls in the day time. The rope reaches from head to toes, a total length of ten feet, and with her svelte figure, Pomeranian dog, make her the cynosure of all eyes when she appears on the boulevards. No such present has been presented to a reigning beauty since Cardinal De Rohan gave the historical necklace to Marie Antoinette.

The long standing habit of making wills has so bewildered the heirs of the late Constant Meyer of New York and Paris that they cannot tell whether his memory is worthy of love or hatred. For Constant Meyer, painter and Knight of the Legion of Honor and man-about-town averaged three wills a month. These are being discovered at the bank of Morgan, Harjes & Co., and houses of friends where he visited, in a safe at the Credit Lyonnaise and in all his old familiar haunts.

These wills are important as a considerable fortune is involved, the foundation of which was laid in New York in the early sixties. Meyer was the Francois Flameng of the then unimportant New York. He was paid good prices for painting portraits of rich men, such as Jacob Schiff and other financiers, of Kuhn and Loeb and their contemporary set. A sad feature of his death is that it was accelerated by the harrassing of his concierge.

The Terror of the Concierge.

A year ago the aged artist fell foul of the Cerberus of the apartment house in which he lived in the Rue Rochet. His letters were lost, his newspapers undelivered and his packages unreceived. His dearest friends were told he was not at home and other tenants were warned to be careful of the eccentric American. Finally his life became unbearable, and all because of a quarrel with that most dreaded person in Paris, the concierge.

His closest friends were General Rush B. Hawkins and the late portrait painter Chartran. Meyer and Chartran were both natives of Besancon.

The Princess De Chimay, formerly Clara Ward and daughter of the late Commodore Ward of Detroit, Michigan is in the throes of another divorce case. She wishes to break the bonds which tie her to the Italian station master whom she married in 1904.

The herculean strength and Cavalleri like eyes of the straping Ricchiardo fascinated her, but he grew moody and melancholy, for the air of the Avenue Victor was not as invigorating as that of the Appenines and the amorous princess has fallen in love with another Italian, to whom she declares that her heart has shed only its outer leaves to give him of the best. Her divorce comes up soon in Paris but the course of her new true love is rendered rough by the fact that the courts of Italy have not yet acknowledged the divorce. In order to get rid of him the amicable princess is willing to pay Ricchiardo an annuity equal to that which she pays Rigo.

Marriage Mania Expensive.

When her divorce shall have been obtained the Princess will embark for the fourth time on the troubled sea of matrimony. To her first husband, Prince De Chimay, she was married twenty years. After her divorce from him she married Rigo, the fiddler; this virtuoso she set aside in favor of the station master, and now another has supplanted the latter. Each ex-husband cost the Princess a pretty figure. The Belgian Prince halved her fortune; Rigo gets $6,000 a year and Ricchiardo will get six thousand more.

A [illegible] of medicine as an aid to matrimony is to be carried out on June 3. The [illegible], at [illegible] of which are a fair New Yorker and a most eminent Paris physician. The former is Julia Delano [illegible] Delano Domachy, as she is sometimes hyphenated. She belongs to the New York [illegible], whose name is legion.

The fair fiancee, who is accomplished as well as rich, has a villa at Bellevue, close to where Marie Antoinette had her famous baths, and commands unquestionably the best view of Paris. Last year, when suffering from a slight indisposition brought on by too many society functions, she called in a famous physician, Dr. Aschil[illegible] Alfred Maurice Cazin, Knight of the Legion of Honor. Dr. Cazin, who is among the most eminent physicians in France, cured her, but left an aching void in her heart.

Dr. Cazin, who lives at No. 7 Place de la Madeleine, has posted the banns of marriage at the Mayor's office in the Rue D'Anjou, almost next [illegible] where Lafayette died here. His fiancee is described as the eldest daughter of [illegible] and Hannah [illegible] Mason will be the bride's witness, and so much importance does he attach to the marriage that although he is historian of the St. Die baptismal font of America, he will decline to go to the Franco-American festivities so as to be present at this [illegible].

BIG SLUMP IN PRICE OF CORONATION SEATS

Speculators Have Overreached Themselves and Stands Along Route Empty on Their Hands.

KING KEEPS EARLY HOURS

Finds Time to Ride in Hyde Park Every Morning Despite Heavy Official Duties.

By WILLIAM T. STEAD.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, May 27.—London has entered bravely into the world of the coronation season. What with court functions, imperial conference meeting, free exhibitions, fancy dress balls and public and private dances, to say nothing of a naval and military tournament, the people who are in the swim find it difficult to get through with their engagements. The King finds time to ride in Hyde Park from about 8:30 to 9:30 o'clock every morning, but he keeps comparatively early hours and court meets an hour earlier than in his father's time.

The weather has been splendid. A late Spring has filled the parks and gardens with a wealth of golden glory. I have seldom seen the hawthorn, both red and white, so full as it is this year. Add to these the chestnut trees in full bloom and the pale purple of the wistaria and you have a city framed in splendor for the like of which you may seek far and wide and seek in vain.

Identify Route by Stands.

The streets through which the royal processions will pass are easily picked out by the number of stands which are being erected on every available site. The prices have been fixed at ten to thirty dollars along the line route in the city, but in and about Westminister Abbey the price runs from $25 to $105 a seat. The speculators have over-reached themselves, however. Secure in the possession of a strictly limited monopoly they have raised the prices to figures so high that many seats are left unsold and there will probably be a bad slump in seats a day or two before the coronation.

Among all the functions of the week that which was most interesting to Americans was undoubtedly the Pilgrims' dinner. I have seldom been present at a more inspiring function or one at which all the speaking was of the highest order, but the palm of oratory was undoubtedly carried off by the American Consul-General, whose eloquent oration in praise of peace was one of the finest I have ever heard.

Duke Full of Confidence.

At the dinner I was seated next to the Duke of Marlborough, whom I found entirely in favor of Democracy providing it were tempered by the Dukes and bridled by the Lords. The Duke is now putting in a fortnight's service with the yeomanry of his country and he has just finished his report upon emigration drawn up by the commission of which he is president. I found him full of confidence as to the future and very much disposed to throw overboard the old shibboleths and lingo for a programme of drastic social reform.

KAISER ON THE GO.

BERLIN, May 27.—The Kaiser this year seems more determined than ever to live up to his nickname, "Der Reise Kaiser" (the traveling Kaiser). Berlin sees very little of him and is not to see him much for some time. Loaded down with relics from excavated Greek temples and determined to add a building of this kind to the other attractions of our gay and noisy city, the Kaiser returned from his vacation to Corfu, but before we had time to realize he was there he had gone again to hold reviews at Metz and Strassburg and to visit the famous Hohkoenigsberg Castle, recently rebuilt and refurnished in its original mediaeval glory. Without a moment's rest he went to Wiesbaden, where he acted as amateur stage manager of his Royal Opera House. Then he had a week of rest and boredom at London, and greatly relieved at having fulfilled a tedious duty to the memory of his grandmother, Queen Victoria, he rushed back to his own empire, where at Cologne he opened the magnificent new bridge across the Rhine.

TOURISTS FILL ROME.

Rush of Americans Greater Than in Any Previous Year.

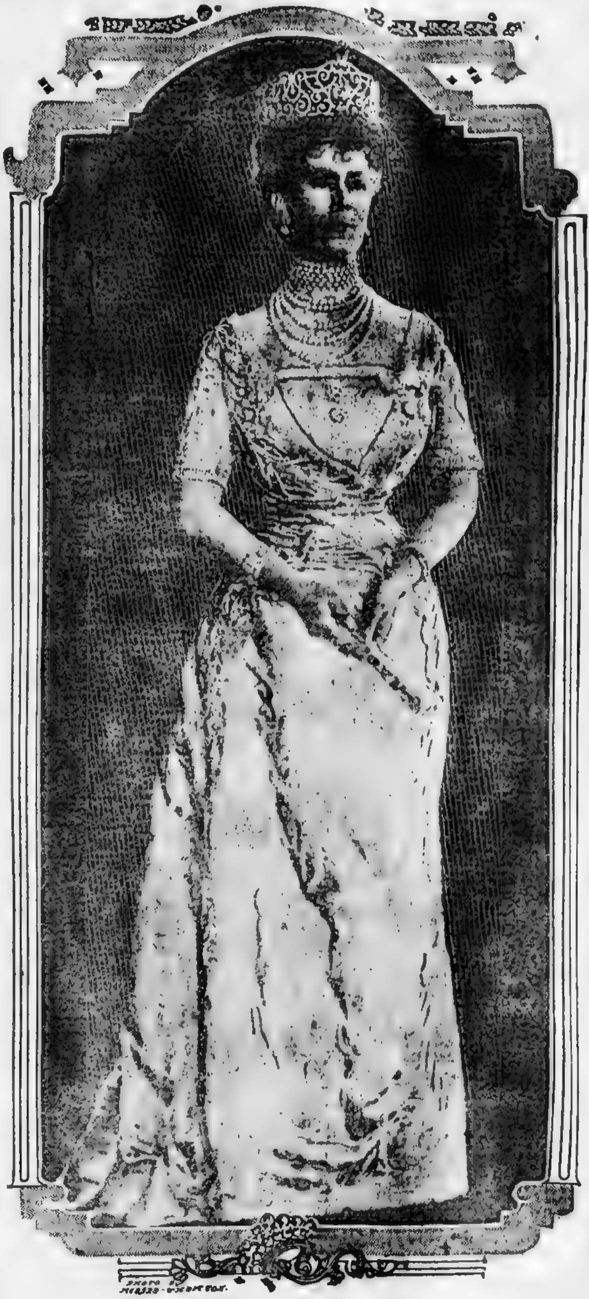
ROME, May 27.—At present there are no fewer than 70,000 strangers in the Eternal City. This is an extraordinary total, and far outnumbers that of any previous year. Of course, the attracions are the exhibition, in connection with the fiftieth anniversary of the proclamation of Rome, as the capital of United Italy—more correctly speaking Disunited Italy. It is estimated that Rome will be crowded during the whole of the months of June and July, as suites of rooms have been engaged at the hotels and pensions for people who intend to remain during that period. Thousands of visitors are expected this Summer from America, so many, indeed, that all the principal hotels, will remain open long after their regular season.

GIANT MOTOR BOATS.

New German Liners Will Use Oil for Fuel.

LONDON, May 27.—If everything goes as now planned the first motor vessel to cross the Atlantic will leave Hamburg for New York early in December. Eight ocean going ships, equipped with oil motors instead of with steam boilers, are now being constructed in Germany, and they are expected to inaugurate a new era in sea travel. The new ships will be devoid of funnels, so that their appearance will add a new and strange feature to the maritime highways of the world. They will be giant motor boats. The motor boats are being built for the Hamburg-American Company. The German Levant line has ordered a motor ship of more than 3,000 tons, and five motor ships, all exceeding 2,000 tons displacement, are in course of [illegible].

Queen Mary in Her Famous 'All English' Court Dress; H. R. H.'s Idea of a Properly Modest Low-Cut Gown



From an exclusive photograph posed by the Queen on the eve of the first Court of King George's reign, May 9.

QUEEN MARY of England has made her consortship felt in English society by a series of unprecedented fiats and regulations of Court costume.

One of her earliest pronunciamentos was her distinct wish that everything of women's attire worn during the coronation festivities should be "all English," or at any rate "all British," whether in material or make. All the female members of her household were given to understand that they should not go to France for gowns or millinery, and a broadcast intimation was sent out that all who attended Court functions would find royal favor by following the same rule of patriotic devotion to English fashions and fabrics.

As an addendum to this there was a very distinct intimation that hobble dresses or clinging skirts would be tabooed at royal audiences, that lip salve and rouge were under the ban and that the extreme display of arms, shoulders and backs would be frowned upon severely.

As an object lesson [illegible] points the Queen wore the "all English" dress at her first Court, May 9, and also posed for her photograph therein that her ideas might have a wider publicity.

That dress is shown in the above picture. The patriotism of the plan cannot be doubted, the unpatriotic modistes are very likely to be severely critical of the result. The opinion of those experts is that the dress hangs abominably, that the wrinkles are at the waist, would shame an American country dressmaker and the set of the shoulders and sleeves is deplorable.

CHICAGO GIRL MAY BE FRANCE'S FIRST LADY

Widow of Ambassador [illegible] Writes Book Which Has Endorsement of the Kaiser.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE

Special Cable to Sunday American

PARIS, May 27.—The outlook is that M. Ribot will be the next President of the Republic.

Why? First of all, because he has the two great negative qualities which characterise our presidents. He has the capacity of silence, and when he does speak he is of the opinion of his questioner. Several times he has been Prime Minister, but without a program and without prestige. But now his capacity for holding his tongue has given him the reputation of wisdom. The other day he uttered some commonplaces of paternal counsels to our warring Republicans and now all France is talking about him as the successor of President Fallieres.

He is a lawyer by profession and a member of the Academy. He is a Senator for Pas de Calais, the constituency which elected Tom Paine a member of the Chamber of Deputies. His town house is in the Rue de Tournon, quite close to the flat in which Admiral John Paul Jones lived.

Was Formerly Miss Burch.

I shall be very pleased to see M. Ribot President of the Republic, because then we shall have a bright American lady presiding at the Elysee and first lady of France. Madame Ribot was formerly Miss Burch of Chicago.

I am glad to note that literary success smiles upon Mrs. Arthur Inkersley, formerly Mrs. Walker Fearn, widow of Judge Walker Fearn, some time Minister to Greece, Roumania and Servia. Her book, "The Diary of a Refugee," is being translated into German. The translator is the scholarly and accomplished Baroness Willebois, whose husband is Ambassador at Constantinople. As she is a personal friend of Francis Fearn, which is Mrs. Inkersley's pen name, the translation will be a labor of love.

Mrs. Inkersley will visit Baroness Willebois at her magnificent home overlooking the Bosphorus. As the authoress herself is an accomplished linguist and will be associated with the Baroness in the translation, the work should lose nothing in the German version.

The German Emperor, who is a close student of the negro problem, lends countenance to "The Diary" and its translation, his attention having been called to it by his literary mentor, the Countess Von Waldersee.

Money Lender's Big Order.

Alfred Thomas, lawyer and money-lender, who financed Henry Addison Alexander in the days of his matrimonial troubles with Jessie Terrance McGloon Alexander, and also young Thomas Ross Winans, in those years when his father, Ross Winans of Baltimore, disowned him for marrying an Andalusian dancer, has been overwhelmed by the biggest order ever known in Paris to finance a spendthrift.

The order comes from August Thyssen of Berlin, who recently fought a duel with Dr. Borchardt, for which he was imprisoned in a fortress for four months. Thyssen seeks a loan of five million francs ($1,000,000) to tide him over bankruptcy. His father, a coal and iron magnate of Westphalia, left $10,000,000 each to his four children.

The spendthrift and duelling son, having heard that Thomas was in the habit of financing stranded American millionaires, turned to him for aid. He offers his whole future fortune, which is enormous, for a temporary relief.

WALES MAY BE A MASON.

King George, Not in Craft Himself, Considers Plans for Prince.

LONDON, May 27.—King George has many plans for the Prince of Wales, and one which he is considering just now is regarding Free Masonry. The King has never become a Mason, despite the fact that his father was an enthusiastic member of the craft.

The Duke of Connaught is trying to persuade King George to make the Prince of Wales a Mason, and it is highly probable that the boy will be initiated when he is a little older. At present the young Prince feels his coming responsibilities far too much, and unlike his second brother, who is consistently cheerful, he is subject to fits of nervous depression.

It is practically settled that he will visit Potsdam next Autumn and even the English papers are beginning to welcome in a vague manner the possibility of his betrothal with the Princess Victoria Louise.

J. P. MORGAN IN DISGUISE.

Italians Penetrate It When He Prices "Old Masters."

PARIS, May 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan has been at Florence, writes a friend who is living in that delightful Italian city, and Florence is, as usual after his visits, richer in money and poorer in works of art. It is a well known fact that when the famous American millionaire visits Florence it is with a view to making an extraordinary purchase in connection with art. He travels about in a hired landau, attired in a manner which is far from the modern idea of the way in which a millionaire should be clad, and assumes the name of a "common" person. However, he cannot disguise the endowments of Nature, which were plentifully bestowed in the shape of warts on his nose and other parts of his face. He is a man of few words. He "spots" a picture, deprecates its merits, and says, "What is the price?" That is his one cry, "What is the price?"

[illegible] Pat's Daughter Sails for Africa with Presents; to Marry There.

By CHESTER OVERTON.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, May 27.—A little incident which occurred at the court ball given in honor of the Kaiser has just come to light and has caused much amusement at the expense of Lord Kitchener. That gallant soldier, who cares very little about attire and is not a carpet knight, appeared at the ball wearing tight trousers which were strapped down over the shoes. He had not been in the ballroom more than ten minutes when a court official approached and whispered:

"I am afraid I must inform you, my Lord, that you are improperly dressed. It must not occur again."

Lord Kitchener then learned that court etiquette requires that all Field Marshals must appear at all state functions in full dress—that is, in buckskin breeches and top boots. Lord Kitchener was so annoyed that he got away as soon as possible without his early departure being noticed.

King George, who has an immense admiration for Lord Kitchener, would have passed over the mistake if he had noticed it, but he did not.

Another little tragedy of dress concerns Lady Maitland, who visited New York a year ago when she painted the miniatures of several social celebrities. She had ordered a "ravishing creation" from Paris, but at the last moment it proved to be so tight that she dared not appear in it. So the gown was widened by the insertion of a lace panel.

No bride-elect in theatrical circles ever received so many interesting gifts from so many interesting people as did Stella Campbell, the only daughter of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who left on Thursday for Mombasa, East Africa, to meet her future husband, Mervyn Howard Beech, district superintendent in the civil service. Mrs. Pat is a sort of cult in the artistic set, and her daughter during her brief stage career has been immensely admired.

Gifts for Stella Campbell.

Mrs. Lewis Harcourt, sent a beautiful pearl and diamond ring, with an affectionate letter. Old Lord Wemyss, who is 93 years old gave a gold watch and chain, and jewelry of all sorts and objects of jewelry and utility have been showered on the young actress by such celebrities as Sir Carl Meyer, Raymond Asquith, Mrs. Alfred Lyttleton, Lord Charles Beresford, the Duchess of Rutland, Lady Ripon, Ellen Terry, George Alexander, Lady Bancroft, and Lady St. Helier.

Mrs. Pat cannot accompany her daughter to Africa because she is still playing to crowded houses in "Lady Patricia." If free next Winter she may revisit America.

The past week has been crowded with social engagements in which American hostesses figured prominently. The Earl and Countess of Granard gave their third large dinner party at Forbes House on the same night that Mrs. John Ford, daughter of Mrs. Cavendish Bentinck and cousin of Lady Granard, gave a big dinner party followed by a cotillion led by the hostess and the Duke of Manchester. The Duke, by the way, is coming out quite as much as his wife, and the couple, who have hitherto taken no part in London gayeties are to be seen everywhere.

The Granards' dinner was a formal affair in honor of the wives of the colonial statesmen who have come to the Imperial conference. A huge horseshoe table was gorgeously decorated in red roses and heavy with old silver.

Mrs. Ford's dinner-cotillion attracted a brilliant gathering. Among the best dressed American women present were [illegible] Waldorf and her sister Mrs. C. D. [illegible] Mrs. J. J. Astor, Mrs. Ward, the [illegible] of Roxburghe and the Duchess of [illegible]rough. The last named gave a [illegible] the night after, [illegible] the most [illegible] The Duchess, who wore [illegible] of magnificent [illegible] gave the dinner in honor of General B[illegible], the Premier of South Africa and [illegible] deadliest enemy. The Duchess's friends regard the invitation to the General as a brilliant stroke of [illegible] which is bound to be appreciated by the King.

The following night the Duchess gave a superb concert at which every American in London who is anybody was present.

Countess Pappenheim's Problem.

Mrs. William Leeds has yet done nothing but sit to J. J. Shannon, R. A., for her portrait, but next week she will give her first big dinner party at No. 18 Grosvenor street.

Mrs. Mulholland, a prominent American hostess of last season, is now in town with her younger daughter, Miss Vida, and has already begun to entertain.

What has happened to Countess Pappenheim, that smart and exquisitely dressed American, with her attractive daughter? That is the question which many society people are asking. For some extraordinary reason the Countess cannot get the right set to her entertainments. Her ball at the Ritz Hotel the other night was a tragic failure.

Much had been written about it previously, and yet the Countess at almost the last moment postponed the affair so that it would not clash with the court ball. At the last named function, however, the Countess Pappenheim was conspicuous by her absence.

Before her ball the Countess dined forty guests, but the only noted American present was Lady Monson, Miss Turnure of New York and Miss Goudy. At the ball itself there was a gathering of nonentities, the only people in the smart set who appeared being Lady Rosemary Portal, Captain and Mrs. Edgar Brassey. The Ritz management did everything as usual to make the affair a success. The flowers were beautiful and the dinner superb, but the entertainment fizzled out into a boy and girl affair. The only representative of the American Embassy present was William Phillips, who stayed exactly ten minutes.

Two years ago the Countess Pappenheim gave a most successful party at which all the smart set were present.

The Kaiser has bestowed a statuette of himself on the Master of Horse, Lord Granard. On the German Emperor's former visit Lord Granard accompanied him in his carriage to the Guildhall, pointing out everything of interest in such a manner as to win the Kaiser's high esteem, of which the statuette is a token.

Another of the chief aims of the conference is to bring church workers into closer contact with movements for the common good which are being carried on outside of church work.

MANUFACTURES WILL BRING GRAND TRUNK

President Hays Shows Canadian Merchants Why It Will Pay to Come to Boston.

"It should be remembered that it is the transportation of manufactured products which pays the railroads, not the transportation of East bound grain."

This statement by President Charles M. Hays of the Grand Trunk Railroad explains in a nutshell the anxiety of the Grand Trunk to enter Boston and why Boston will be preferred by the Grand Trunk to any of the Canadian ports or Portland as its great Eastern terminus.

President Hays was talking to some merchants in Montreal about reciprocity when he made this statement, and it was the most significant remark that the astute railroad magnate has made since the question of bringing the Grand Trunk to Boston began in the AMERICAN by the securing of a petition of 100,000 signatures.

"Nobody can predict exactly how reciprocity will work," said President Hays, "but if it is a good thing to make two blades of grass grow where one grew before reciprocity should be good for Great Britain as well as Canada and the United States. If the broadening of their market enables Canadian farmers to grow more wheat the number of farmers will increase and their demands for manufactures from the East will also increase."

Canadians Are Patriotic.

The patriotic Canadians demand that Halifax shall be the port of the Grand Trunk as St. John is the port of the Canadian Pacific.

Both these cities are hundreds of miles farther from the West than Boston. The Canadians make this demand in spite of the most powerful economic reason which forces the railroad presidents to choose New England ports. In his opening sentence President Hays disclosed that reason.

There is a very small profit in hauling 50,000 bushels of grain 1,000 miles to the sea. But if the freight cars which delivered the grain must be carried back again empty the profit is destroyed and a heavy loss is chalked up. This is the problem that President Hays of the Grand Trunk may solve by entering Boston. He expects to bring his long freight trains filled with grain to this port and send them back crammed with manufactured products.

Halifax is a small city situated in an agricultural community in a province whose manufactures are insignificant. St. John is in the same situation. Portland is also located in a farming country far from the great factories. Providence is in a brisk manufacturing district, but every advantage that Providence possesses is ten times as great as applied to Boston.

Boston Great Trade Centre.

Boston is the centre of the greatest manufacturing community in Eastern America and the value of its foreign imports is more than $100,000,000 a year.

Boston has every facility for shipping food stuffs from Canada to Europe and the tremendous advantage over Canadian ports of being able to fill the freight trains of the Grand Trunk with the manufactured products for the Canadian Northwest which makes railroads profitable, to quote President Hays.

Reciprocity will enable the manufactures of New England to enter Canada and compete with the manufactured products of England. Under reciprocity it will be cheaper for a Canadian merchant to use New England cotton print than the print of Birmingham and Manchester. There is to be a great boom in American manufactures in Canada and the Grand Trunk wants to handle the business.

Railroads are conducted on business principles. The Grand Trunk is not going to do very much with Halifax because Halifax cannot fill its cars after they have delivered grains at her wharves at greater expense than would be necessary to send the same grain out of Boston.

The Grand Trunk officials are expressing themselves as delighted with the friendly feeling that Boston has expressed for them through the AMERICAN. They are delighted, for that means that the entrance of the Canadian railroad to this port will be unopposed.

WAREHAM IN REVOLT.

Wants Senator This Fall or Will Join Insurgents.

WAREHAM, May 27.—From the present outlook there will be a mixup in Republican ranks this Fall over the candidacy for Senator from the Second Plymouth District. There is a feeling that this year this end of the district should have representation in the Senate. The local politicians go so far as to demand it or split the party. It is ten years or more since the southern end of the district has been represented, the last Senator from this section being the late Rev. Noble Everett of this town. The name of Dr. Robert Delano of this town, who served two years in the House, and Walter Perry of Marion, who has also had experience in the same branch, are mentioned and both are willing to make a fight if it be needed.

THREE LITTLE FAIRIES IN THE MAY FESTIVAL

Margaret McDonough, who has a new [illegible] surprise this year, little Miss Pauline Mason and Bessie Poole in a Pierrot number

THE fairies are coming to town next Saturday for the afternoon and evening.

Some say there are no fairies. But all children and some grownups who have not lost their youth know better.

'Tis true, there are fairies. Hundreds of them may be seen Saturday afternoon or evening at Mechanics Hall.

What brings the fairies? Nothing less than Mrs. W. S. Butler's annual May Festival. This will be the twenty-third annual. But the hoodoo number will not work any mischief. Fairies are proof against hoodoos.

Mrs. Butler, with Lilla Viles Wyman directing the dances as usual, has arranged more surprises than ever for her 1911 patrons at the big festival.

Miss McDonough's Surprise.

Those who went last year will recall sprightly Margaret McDonough the Chanticleer dancer. This year Margaret McDonough has a number of new and very pretty dances for the festival program.

Others who will appear include Pauline Mason, Bessie Poole, Stella Best, Jane Pepper, Eva Francis, Theresa and Clara Weiscopf, Doris Stewart, Frances McDonnell, Mary Murphy and a host of other children.

The festival will begin with an introductory part called a "June revel." Forty tots will appear in this in costumes of Springtime tints.

Then comes a navy dance number by children from twelve to eighteen years.

A big feature will be "Betty Marigold's party." Fifty little girls will represent hollyhocks, roses, morning glories, pansies, bachelor buttons, four o'clocks, sweet peas, golden-rod and all the lovely, old-fashioned flowers.

Eva Francis will be costumed as "Daddy Dandelion." Leland Benham as "Billy Bullfrog" will jump out at the flowers and scare them horribly. James Kennedy will be "Peter Pumpkin." Joe Knox will come on as Reuben Cauliflower. William Knox will blush as "Reddy Radish."

Flowers and Vegetables.

The flowers and vegetables will dance in fairy like array. The scene promises to be one of the most beautiful of the festival bill.

Another elaborate number will be the Russian mazurka, led by Virginia Tanner, Inez Spencer, Amelia Burnham, Leroy Young, Clayton Robinson and Wilfred Baxter.

A number of children will put on a French pantomine. Mary Murphy will offer an Indian dance. Theresa Weiscopf will have an Irish number. Margaret McDonough is listed for a valse caprice.

Clarissa Weiscopf and Lilian Brown will win applause in their Spanish farucca, a picturesque dance. Caroline Brine assisted by Charles Williams will entertain in a "Teddy Bear" dance.

MISSING CASHIER FOUND IN ALBANY

GREENFIELD, May 27.—Ernest D. Hamilton, the missing Southbridge National Bank cashier, is in Albany, according to a telegram from the police of that city, received by his father, Darwin F. Hamilton, to-day. The elder Mr. Hamilton and Ernest R. Alexander, a friend, left for Albany this morning to bring the cashier home. Nothing in the telegram explains the mystery of his disappearance.

The cashier is thirty-four years old and his family home is in Greenfield, where he was a bank official before he took the post of cashier in Southbridge a few months ago. His family is in Greenfield. He left Southbridge on Tuesday last for this town, intending to take his family to his new home. But he never reached here. Since Wednesday his friends have conducted a search for him which covered all this section of the State. He was finally traced as far as Springfield, where the trail was lost. Nothing further was learned about his whereabouts until the telegram from Albany was received.

MACHINE WAR ON DIRECT NOMINATIONS

Leaders Planning to Have Bill Kicked Out of Senate, Although It Passed House.

The grid iron is marked off in the State Senate for one of the prettiest games of football ever held in these parts. The game will be held some day this week. The Direct Nominations bill which recently passed the House of Representatives by the decisive vote of 207 to 15 will be the football.

The original plan of the G. O. P. machine leaders to have the Direct Nominations bill kicked out of the Senate window has been [illegible]. The new program provides for simply sticking a knife into it in a knife created: Referendum.

It was said last night at Republican State headquarters in the Kimball Building, at the Parker House bar and at other places where members of Senator Lodge's [illegible] are wont to gather, that Mr. Lodge will not show his hand in the Direct Nominations fight. Mr. Lodge is busily engaged just now in awaiting reciprocity.

Wardwell Otherwise Engaged.

J. Otis Wardwell, whom Mr. Lodge has usually sent to the State to kill direct nomination bills in past years when he was too busy or too timid to crack the whip himself, is also expected not to do any work in the open against the Direct Nominations bill. Mr. Wardwell's best efforts are being used just now to have the Boylston street extension bill passed over Governor Foss's veto.

The duty performed in the past by Messrs. Lodge and Wardwell is being performed this year by Charles E. Hatfield, Mayor of Newton and chairman of the Republican State Committee.

The "referendum" game which the G. O. P. machine plans to play on the Direct Nominations bill is of the same gold-brick type that has been employed for years. The machine is simply trying to stop having [illegible] on the voters something which the voters may not want.

The Lodge [illegible] folks have not yet [illegible] that the people want direct nominations. The Lodge machine is opposed to direct nominations itself. It [illegible] now to save its own neck for another year by delaying the operation of [illegible] with a referendum. The referendum is never popular with the Lodge machine except as a means of delaying popular legislation.

Tip to Frothingham.

Some of Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham's friends said last night that it might work to his political advantage if he should issue a statement urging the passage of direct nominations without the [illegible] referendum. [illegible] such a statement from [illegible] dispel the impression [illegible] that the referendum [illegible] work to help [illegible] an [illegible] for Governor for [illegible] next Fall.

The Direct Nominations bill [illegible] been [illegible] in the Senate Committee on Ways and Means now [illegible] just what is holding [illegible] committee has [illegible] and Hatfield and his lieutenants [illegible] in their missionary work [illegible] speak [illegible] in Senators.

Senator James H. Doyle of Boston, the only Democrat on the Senate Ways and Means Committee, said last night:

"So the Direct Nominations bill is held up in our committee, is it? Nobody on the committee has notified me that it was there. Well, Uncle James is going into the next session of that committee—probably to-morrow—to make a motion that the measure be reported on at once, and that the report be 'ought to pass.'"

The Republican members of Senate Ways and Means are Greenwood of Gardner, Wells of Tisbury, Bennett of Saugus, and Ross of New Bedford.

Archbold, son of the millionaire vice president of the Standard Oil Company, to-day filed in the Superior Court a motion for a new trial in the suit won by William de Mello. A jury awarded De Mello $6,100 for the death of his seven-year-old daughter, who was killed by Archbold's auto on July 23, 1908.

MILK CONTRACTORS MAKE PRICE THREAT

ANOTHER ROAD ACCUSED

The six Boston milk contractors and William A. Hunter, secretary of the Boston Cooperative Milk Producers' Company, who were indicted by the Federal grand jury on charges of conspiracy in restraint of trade, in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, will be cited into the United States District Court in the Federal building this week, probably on Wednesday.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Elm Farm Dairy Company, which were indicted by the same grand jury on charges of giving and accepting rebates, are to appear in court at the same time. It is not likely the defendant individuals and corporations will be arraigned until later on.

A development of yesterday in the milk situation was a persistent report that another railroad will be prosecuted by the government for giving rebates in the transportation of milk.

Another surprise that came yesterday were charges made by farmers of Central Massachusetts that Secretary Hunter, who is one of the indicted men, had betrayed the farmers into the hands of the common enemy, the milk trust. Hunter was accused of using his office as secretary to [illegible] with the contractors.

Special Agent William S. Gregg of the Department of Justice, who conducted the investigation before the grand jury yesterday afternoon informed the counsel for the indicted men and corporations that they would be given ample time for the filing of demurrers to the indictments. Whether the defendants are to be arraigned this week depends on these demurrers. All the defendants [illegible] preparations to fight the charges. With the exception of Hunter they have retained counsel.

Lawyers in the Case.

Former State Senator John H. Cusick is to defend the three Whitings who were indicted—Isaac, George and John K., composing the firm of D. Whiting & Sons Company. Whipple, Sears & Ogden will appear for [illegible] H. and Edward J. Hood of H. P. Hood & Sons. William A. Grau[illegible] of the Boston Dairy Company, the sixth of the indicted contractors, will be defended by former Assistant United States District Attorney Michael J. Sughrue.

Next to the widespread feeling of surprise [illegible] against the New Haven road and the members of the so-called Milk Trust the greatest interest in [illegible] the announcement [illegible] of the Boston Cooperative Milk Producers' Company of a rise [illegible] milk to the contractors, to go into effect July 1.

[illegible] this announcement grew the report that while the contractors may agree to pay this increase to the farmers, they will raise the price to the Boston consumers. This will mean a general increase in the retail price of milk in Boston.

Price Jump Not Contempt.

It was this new phrase of the question that promises to create comment in the next few days. The point was raised yesterday that the declaration of a raise in the price of milk might constitute an offense against the court.

A lawyer prominent in the case stated that raising the prices, while it might be regarded by the people as a further indication of the existence of an illegal combination, would not mean liability for contempt of court.

"If the rates are raised," he said, "the milk men are in precisely the same situation as a man indicted for an offense and who immediately commits another one violating the same law. The act is a repetition of his offence against the people but is not an offense against the court."

It became known yesterday that it is the intention of the Federal authorities to try all milk cases at the present sitting of the District Court. The first case will be called as soon as the present docket is cleared. Special Attorney Gregg, who is one of United States Attorney-General Wickersham's most valuable assistants at Washington, will remain in Boston until the cases are brought to trial. He will direct the handling of the Government's case. Associated with him will be Special Attorney Charles Connor, who helped prepare the case against Standard Oil in Chicago.

There was an intimation yesterday that further prosecutions will be forthcoming in the milk situation, notably in connection with another railroad than the New Haven and which has been charged with giving rebates. The indictments reported Friday are regarded by many milk producers as only a starter. They say they expect other rebating cases, and they do not believe the Federal authorities have overlooked at least one other railroad which has been accused of violating the Elkins law.

Because of this, the kennel exhibition will attract attention, not only throughout Massachusetts, but all over New England.

The proceeds of the show will go to charity—one of the most worthy charities aided by the efforts of society workers through which crippled children and needy families can be given an outing into the country. Each child or family is given a week's rest, without expense to themselves, the money being advanced out of the common fund. The charity is known as "Country Week," and is conducted throughout the Summer season.

Already about 1,000 entries have been received, which will mean the showing of fully 600 or more dogs, some of them the most valuable to be found anywhere. The competition committee has arranged for trophies and prizes costing $500.

The officers of the association are: President, Mrs. E. H. Seagrave; vice-presidents, Miss Fanny Brooks and Mrs. Charles Whitney; treasurer, Mrs. E. K. Thayer, and secretary, Mrs. P. J. Talbot. The show committee is headed by Miss Brooks and the other members are Mrs. E. H. Seagraves, Mrs. E. K. Thayer, Mrs. C. F. Dennee, Mrs. T. H. Whittemore, Mrs. Charles Whitney, Mrs. P. J. Talbot and Mrs. Albert Geiger, Jr.

The association evidently believes that women are capable of passing judgment on the different breeds of dogs and have accordingly placed the honor of judging two of the biggest classes in the show on women.

Miss Vernona Jarbeau of Manuet, New York, the well known actress, will pass the ribbons to the winners in the French bulldog classes and will face about sixty dogs, among whom will be the best in the country.

Mrs. E. W. Clark of Egypt, who owns a large kennel near that of Thomas W. Lawson at Scituate, will judge the English toy spaniels, toy poodles, Pomeranians, Japanese spaniels, Pekingese spaniels, toy black and tan terriers, Griffon Bruxelois, Italian greyhounds and maltese terriers.

Women as exhibitors will go into competition with some of the biggest and most prominent kennels in the country. Miss Mary Winthrop, who owns the Never, Never Land Kennels in New York, is coming to the show with a large number of French bulldogs, some of them with a long record of wins; Mrs. Arnold Lawson, owner of the Noswal kennels at Winchester, will also be in the show ring with her string of "Frenchies"; Mrs. Frances P. Kendall of the Kill Kare kennels at Lexington will show a number of Boston terriers that have traveled about the country winning blue ribbons; Mrs. Waldo Kennard of Tingham will have her collies at the show in competition with Mrs. John Grimbleston's Blue Battle, one of the best youngsters of the year, and a number of other good ones.

Many Women Exhibitors.

Another interesting exhibitor will be Mrs. T. E. L. Kemp of Brookline, who will bring from the Carmen kennels many of the finest bred St. Bernards that can be found. Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Tyler of this city have the largest single entry of any in the show, chiefly of English setters, and they have given a number of valuable specials in the English setter classes for which they will not compete. Mrs. A. Henry Higginson will show wire haired fox terriers that have won at the big New York and Philadelphia shows.

In specials, this show will be a record breaker, many valuable trophies being up for competition. Miss Winthrop offers a silver cup known as the Never, Never Land trophy, to be taken by the French bulldog kennels winning at the most shows in 1911 to April, 1912. She has also given six other silver cups in the French bulldog classes. Miss Jarbeau offers as the judges trophy in the French bulldog classes, a silver cup. Mrs. Fred W. Fisher offers through the French Bulldog Club of New England a cup to be known as the Tanguay trophy for the best French bulldog in all the shows of 1911; the cup to be taken by the dog winning the greatest number of times.

Another interesting trophy presented by a woman is the Grand Challenge trophy, a sterling silver pitcher, for the best Great Dane under fifteen months of age. It is presented by Mrs. J. W. M. Cardeza and must be won four times to become the property of the winner. Mrs. T. E. L. Kemp will give the King Carmen Memorial cup for the best St. Bernard, to be won three times. Mrs. E. H. Seagraves gives a cup for the best in the English setters open to all. Mrs. W. E. Blake gives a cup for the best team of St. Bernards. The Societe Canine De Savoie, the leading kennel association of France offers two trophies for the largest entry made by a member of the Ladies' Association and by any one exhibitor.

Kennel Club Prizes.

The Ladies' Kennel Association offers the Bayview Whisper cup, presented by Mrs. Jessie Barnard Scully, for the best in any breed, novice [illegible] to be won four times at the [illegible] show in New York and this show. The winner must be owned by a member of the Ladies' Kennel Association. The association offers several valuable all round specials. Mrs. P. J. Talbot, Mrs. Helen Talbot, Mrs. T. H. Whittemore, Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Kennard, Mrs. Minnie Bullocke, Caroline G. Plant, Dorothea E. McVickar, Mrs. J. W. Minturn, Mrs. F. P. Kendall, Miss Gertrude Sands, Miss Margaret B. Brigham, Mrs. L. K. Thayer and Mrs. Owen Moore. Mrs. Hartley Williams, Miss D. B. Champion, Miss Brownell and Mrs. W. C. Wiedersehn also offered silver trophies for competition in various classes.

Mrs. John W. Minturn offers a challenge silver bowl for the best Boston terrier, owned, bred and shown by a member of the New York Boston Terrier Club, to be won five times, champions barred.

The Boston Terrier Club, the clubs at Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, Haverhill, French Bulldog of America, [illegible] and Airedale Terrier Club, the Bulldog Breeders' Association of America, Chicago Collie Club, the English Sheeping Club and various other organizations throughout the country offers cups for members of their organizations.

The Boess cup, open to all, is presented by Philip French for the best American bred Airedale.

The judges will be: Bulldogs, W. N. Gilbert Clark of Cambridge; Scottish White Highland terriers, Robert Sedgwick, Jr., of New York; Dalmatians, J. W. Minturn of Long Island, N. Y.; Irish and Gordon setters, A. M. Tucker of Lexington; English setters, Horace Belcher of Waltham; Dachshunds, Dr. Herbert Sanborn of [illegible]; Airedales, Philip French; collies, Archibald Ormiston of Concord; Poodles and Foxhounds, Roy Baker of Waltham; Pointers, Lincoln Pettee of East Foxboro; Sporting Spaniels, H. K. Bloodgood of New York; Boston terriers, D. Wallace [illegible] of Boston; Irish terriers, J. J. [illegible]; Harry W. Lacy of Boston and G. Muss Arnold of Tuckahoe, N. Y., will judge a variety of breeds.

FOREST FIRE LOSS TO STATE $350,000

More Than Sixty Miles of Valuable Timber Land Destroyed in Few Weeks.

Less than a month and a half of actual forest fires this Spring has cost the State of Massachusetts almost $350,000, a far greater damage than resulted from all the forest fires during 1910, when the total loss was but $205,383. Figures from the office of State Forester Rane, counting only the fires that cover fifty acres or more and cause a damage of $50 or more, show that the losses up to May 11 last amounted to $328,680.

The serious fires of this Spring have been due to a very dry season. More than sixty square miles of valuable timber land have been firesweept this year.

To Fight Fires.

The appalling nature of these forest fires, which have already cost several lives, has aroused a widespread sentiment among the citizens of the smaller towns in favor of local organizations to co-operate with State Forester Rane, for protection and prevention. Several town association have been organized to fight such fires and adopting preventative measures.

"Farmers are rapidly coming to recognize the necessity of co-operating with the fire wardens and the State Department," said Forester Rane yesterday. "It is my aim to educate the people to carry out modern methods of forest management. This includes forest fire protection and prevention. At present we have laws that are doing great good. Other laws are needed. Our organization consists of about 350 forest wardens throughout the State, appointed by city or town authorities with the approval of the State forester.

Whole State Endangered.

"We can truthfully say, that if it had not been for our present forest warden system, practically the entire forest lands of the State would have been burned out. Much is being done, and much more can be accomplished, with the assistance of those in rural communities. This year, our forest wardens have made more arrests in connection with the setting of forest fires, than ever before. Under a law I had passed, the wardens can now compel male citizens from eighteen to fifty to be [illegible] fighters. Our purpose is to obtain efficiency [illegible] to save the forests from fires.

A large number of forest fires in Massachusetts are caused by sparks from locomotives. Under a law the Forestry department was instrumental in having passed, the railroads are made responsible for damages caused to forests along their systems. The Boston & Maine paid out $60,000 on account of the big forest fire. The railroads also have to reimburse the towns for the cost of putting out the fires.

FIGHT FOR "OPINION" BILL.

Effort Will be Made to Defeat Adverse Report.

The Senate Ways and Means Committee has reported adversely on the Public Opinion Bill. This bill has been substituted in the House for an adverse committee report. A fight will be made in the Senate to pass the bill over the Ways and Means Committee. The bill, which was introduced by John Weaver Sherman of the State branch of the American Federation of Labor, provides that upon petition of 200 voters in any representative district or of 1,000 voters in a Senatorial district, any two questions of public policy before the Legislature may be placed upon the official ballot at a popular election to allow the voters to express their opinion on the same. The Secretary of State is to determine, under the bill, what questions are of public policy.

According to the story, one of the players lost $1,000 in less than an hour, and the stakes amounted to more than that sum during every hour of the play.

MISS SEARS PRAISED BY TITLED VISITOR

Lady Constance Duggan of Scotland Finds Versatile Boston Girl 'Feminine Paragon.'

LIKES AMERICANS, TOO

But She Can't Understand Why We Treat Working Women With Such Respect.

By ELEANOR AMES.

Miss Eleonora Sears of Boston is a feminine paragon, declared Lady Constance Duggan, of Scotland, yesterday, at Hotel Lenox. Lady Constance is on a brief visit here after spending the winter in California and the spring in Colorado. She sails from New York next Thursday for the coronation festivities.

Although she likes Boston girls very much Lady Duggan was disappointed at the courteous way that working girls are treated in this country. In England, she declared, a girl who works is considered no better than a barmaid.

King George, according to Lady Duggan, has cut Lady Duff Gordon because she opened a dressmaking establishment, and her sister, Elinor Glyn, because she wrote "Three Weeks" and other books that have given her publicity.

Glad to Be in Boston.

"I am always glad to come back to Boston," said Lady Duggan. "It is by far my favorite American city.

"I think New York is intolerable, it is so noisy and tiring. But Boston is more like London, than any city I have ever known. Not even the Canadian cities are so like, and perhaps that is the reason I enjoy it so much. I like Boston girls; they take more exercise than in any city.

"Where else is there a girl like Miss Eleonora Sears for instance? She is most unusual. American girls go in for a good deal of a spectacular sort of athletics, but as a matter of fact I think that English girls take more systematic outdoor exercise. They take it more as a matter of course, as part of their regular daily program. And both English and Scottish girls grow up in the saddle; a pony is one of their earliest birthday presents and they are all excellent horsewomen.

"American women are the queens of the world, both in general intelligence and in their dress," continued Lady Duggan, but she proceeded to qualify this assertion by her contempt for the "American fetish" of democracy.

Work, and You Lose Caste.

"Why, I know a man in New York who speaks of his young woman stenographer with actual respect, as though she were a person of great intelligence," she said. "Of course, with us, a stenographer is no better than a barmaid; in fact, any woman who works loses caste absolutely. Look at Lady Duff Gordon, you know she has opened a dressmaking establishment, and as a result the King last year refused to receive her again."

"But perhaps," the reporter interrupted, "she needed the money and didn't want to marry a wealthy American."

"Oh no," said Lady Constance, with a laugh, "it isn't that. But you know that whole family is so very peculiar. All love publicity. Look at her sister, Elinor Glyn.

"But people like that have completely lost caste with the present household, and will not be received while King George is on the throne. Our new King is going to be much more exclusive than his father was; and I think that his subjects are relieved that it should be so. King Edward was extraordinarily democratic, and received many whom the present King would never tolerate. And I think that King George's policy upholds the dignity of his court much better.

"What shall I remember with greatest pleasure about this country? Oh, I think it would be the charming hospitality and genuineness of the American people, especially in the West. The most obnoxious thing about you is the way you handle our luggage. Two of my trunks were smashed just coming across the Continent, and I think it is a perfect crime that you permit your porters to be so careless. Why in our country a traveler's luggage is treated as though it were sacred.

One for the Suffragettes.

"I have absolutely no patience with suffragettes. They are merely a laughing stock in England. And if you could see them, you would realize why. They all look like frights and wear spectacles and dowdy clothes, and resemble the famous Boston school-marm. They are women who have no outlet for their emotional [illegible], no social life, with nothing to divert them, and in looking around for something to take up their time, they have hit upon this fad.

"I imagine that conditions are much the same in this country. I hear that the suffrage parade in New York the other day was very funny, that the women made just the sort of showing one might expect. This craze for independence and public life is a strange thing anyway, and there is much less of it in England than over here.

"We have a couple of colleges over there, but most English girls go to the continent to [illegible] they don't want this highly technical and specialized education that a college gives. As a result, English women are very clever and intelligent. They take an active interest in politics and many other serious subjects, but they are distinctly not the college sort.

"Of course I am always glad when it is time to go back home, and this year will be especially interesting with the coronation festivities, but I have had a most delightful Winter in this country, and shall hope to return sometime."

Presbyterians Declare Against Wines at Their Dinners.

ATLANTIC CITY, May 27.—The use of alcoholic beverages at all diplomatic functions both at home and abroad was strongly condemned in a resolution introduced in the Presbyterian General Assembly to-day by the Rev. The resolution was the direct result of a declaration made by William Jennings Bryan during his address on morals and the liquor question before the assembly last night. There were 100 delegates present.

SEEKS BEAUTY CHAMPIONSHIP

MRS. LEEDS POSES FOR ARTIST

MRS. LEEDS, FROM A RECENT PHOTOGRAPH

MRS. WILLIAM B. LEEDS

Widow of wealthy tinplate manufacturer, now posing for $25,000 portrait by J. J. Shannon the celebrated artist.

Widow of Multi-Millionaire Now in London for the Coronation.

MRS. Nonnie Stuart Leeds, the pink-cheeked young widow of William B. Leeds, the tin-plate millionaire, is desirious of being called the most beautiful woman in the world, according to cables from London.

Mrs. Leeds is in London for the coronation. Her latest invitation to fame is sitting for her portrait to J. J. Shannon, the celebrated artist, whose patrons include aristocracy from royalty down. Shannon is to receive a check for $25,000 from the beautiful American widow upon completion of the portrait.

It goes without saying, the London cables add, that the artist is to portray Mrs. Leeds to utmost advantage. In this he will not have to draw upon his artistic imagination. His fair subject is in the full bloom of her womanly charm. She is about thirty years old, with fresh, fair complexion and with a figure that leaves nothing to be desired.

With these charms, spurred by boundless ambition and fortified with $20,000,000 of tin-plate wealth, Mrs. Nonnie Stuart Leeds bids fair, her London admirers assert, to achieve acknowledgment as the world's fairest woman to-day.

Having her portrait painted by Shannon is, of course, a natural step on the road. The portrait will be exhibited in the natural course of events. The renown of the painter and the beauty of the subject will insure the painting a fine position. Then will come the art critics, with their honeyed words. The society magazines will doubtless copy the painting and another rivet will be clinched to establish the title of "The Beautiful Nonnie Leeds."

Mrs. Leeds will bring the portrait back with her to this country. In time it will find its way to the walls of the art gallery in Routh Point villa, Newport, the Leeds mansion.

PLAN BIG PAPER MILL.

PORTLAND, Me., May 27.—It is stated that considerable Southern money is being gotten together for the erection of a large paper mill in Shelburne, N. H., using the Androscoggin River for power. Only the highest grades of paper are to be manufactured and the pulp wood, which is to be shipped from the South, is to go to the New Hampshire mills via Portland. The plans for the mills are well under way, it is stated, and men are now in Shelburne making arrangements for a suitable location.

M'NAMARAS GET DELAY.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 27.—Judge Bordwell today extended from June 1 to July 5 the time set for John and James McNamara to plead to the indictments charging them with blowing up the Los Angeles Times building. Both of the defendants were in court. The motion for delay was made by Lecompte Davis, assistant counsel for the defence.

BOY LEPER PROVES PROBLEM TO STATE

Rhode Island Likely to Have to Start Haven for Stricken Youth in Pawtucket.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., May 27.—Although it was three weeks ago to-day that Harry Sheridan, the Pawtucket schoolboy, was pronounced to be a victim of leprosy, following an examination at the Massachusetts General Hospital, the health authorities of the State have exhausted every scheme imaginable to find a suitable place where the boy may be cared for, but failure has greeted them at every turn.

The leper is at his home, No. 85 Kenyon avenue, in the Darlington section, under police guard, day and night. The health officials cannot put down the fear of the public and the people are demanding that something be done with the patient.

Police Chief Hill is as anxious as every-one else to have the case taken out of Pawtucket. Six men are needed each day for duty at the Sheridan home, there being three shifts. The force is somewhat crippled by this fact.

Dr. Gardner T. Swarts, secretary of the State Board of Health, has exhausted every means he has at his command to get young Sheridan out of the city. Health Officer Richards of Pawtucket has appealed not only to the Massachusetts authorities to have Sheridan taken to Penikese Island, with his board paid by this State, but has taken the case up with the Federal authorities. His endeavors to have the boy sent by the government to the leper colony in the Sandwich Islands have been just as fruitless as the other attempts.

It, therefore, looks as though Rhode Island must establish a leper colony of its own and there is no reason to believe that it will be located elsewhere than here in Pawtucket. Dr. Richards leaves next week for Europe and the case will be taken up by the newly-formed Board of Health. Sheridan's family is being shunned by friends and the boy's father, Edward [illegible] Sheridan, superintendent of the Lunn Knitting Company, has given up his position.

STAY AT HOME CHAMP.

Rockland Man Hasn't Been to Boston Since 1872!

ROCKLAND, May 27.—Rockland has among its citizens the champion stay at home in Austin Studley of Vernon street, who has been to Boston but once since 1872, yet living within an hour's ride of the Hub.

Mr. Studley has just attained his 78th year and the approach of the centennial anniversary of the First Congregational Church has unusual interest for him. He has the rare distinction of having been an auditor of every pastor the church has had during its 100 years' career. He says he probably knows more about Boston than some of its residents for the reason that he has read a lot about it and has seen hundreds of photographs of various buildings and the like. He has been to Brockton, but six miles away but twice.

DANCE FOR CHARITY.

Home for Destitute Jewish Children in Dorchester to Benefit.

A charity ball and lawn party for the benefit of the Home for Destitute Jewish Children will be given on the evening of Memorial Day, Tuesday. The party will be at the nearly-completed new home, Canterbury and Austin streets, Dorchester. The building has been in course of construction for the past eight months.

The cost of the building will be $[illegible],000, of which $65,000 has already been subscribed. Tuesday evening an opportunity will be offered those interested to inspect the new [illegible]. The officers are Samuel [illegible] Dana, president; Hermon Levy, vice-president; Oscar [illegible]berg, treasurer, and Mark Stone, secretary.

Reception for Fr. McClinchey.

A reception will be tendered this evening to Rev. Joseph E. McClinchey by the parishioners of St. Paul's Parish, Cambridge, at the New Cambridge Theatre, Central square. Father McClinchey was formerly a curate at St. Paul's, and was recently placed in charge of the Society of the Propagation of the Faith, the headquarters of which is in this city. Addresses will be made by Rev. Father John Ryan, permanent pastor of St. Paul's, Mayor J. Edward Barry and other prominent churchmen and city officials.

LADY DUFF GORDON TALKS OF FASHIONS

NEW YORK, May 27.—Lady Duff Gordon, wife of Sir Cosmo Duff Gordon, has arrived from Europe and is at the Ritz. She was full of the new modes, as she has just opened her new establishment in the Rue Penthievre in Paris. She says that the harem skirt never was thought of seriously by the fashionables of London and Paris, and that what little vogue it did have has entirely died out.

"Women simply won't be made ridiculous," she said. "The harem skirt had not a single advantage and it accentuated the largeness of the feet without displaying the ankle to as much advantage as a smart short walking skirt does. So it went the way of all absurdities.

"I hope no American made the mistake of wearing them. American women are too smart to wear frumpish things—but of all women I know they could best afford to take the risk of a harem skirt because they have such wonderful small feet."

"Is it true that Queen Mary has tabooed tight skirts and elbow sleeves and large hats?" she was asked.

"She may taboo them for the royal family, but that is about as far as her influence in matters of style will extend. You see, our Queen sticks to a style of dress that has been affected for ages by her family, and she isn't a wearer of the mode. I made clothes for her when she was the Princess of Wales, but they were her styles, you see, and not mine. It is recognized in England, and we don't mind the least what the royalties wear. It doesn't in the slightest affect fashion. Her style is peculiar to herself, and we have got accustomed to it, but other women will not dress as she does, because they have not the position to stand for such fashions, you see.

Tight Skirts Still the Fashion.

Queen Alexandra always affected a [illegible], old-fashioned toque, but it never was the vogue in England among the fashionable ladies. So if Queen Mary chooses to wear full skirts and long sleeves when others are wearing short sleeves and tight skirts, it isn't noticed in the slightest. I don't think that our fashionable women will be guided much by the Queen in matters concerning style. I am still making and selling to my fashionable London clientele the tight skirts, and the edict that has been sent forth regarding the skirts and hats hasn't affected our modes—not at all.

"We haven't what you Americans term hobble skirts, which are tightened in and about the lower part by bands and such things. What is being worn is a tight straight skirt, and oh, so short! Neatly to the high shoe tops! And, by the way, the shoes most favored for street wear now in Paris are patent leather with white or gray upper parts. The skirts show most of the tops.

"The little short jackets are so tight that I call them uniforms. The fashionable women of Paris on the street to-day look as much alike as soldiers because of this. No colors are being worn—just black and white or combinations of black, gray and white.

"Hats are either enormously large or very small, almost entirely concealing the hair. The intermediate sizes are not seen at all. Aigrettes and all sorts of curious plumes and trimming of feathers are worn."

Her Models Startle Paris.

"I shall spend about a fortnight here looking about and getting ready for our bigger plant," she said. "I have just finished with my Paris opening. I was enormously pleased with the wonderful reception the Parisians gave me—an English woman coming into their city in business for the first time. It was so charming to find with what cordiality I was greeted and how much they seemed to enjoy my new establishment. You see, I have four of the most beautiful models in the world, and they were a revelation even to Paris, with their lovely English skins and beautiful freshness and youth. I think they made even a greater impression than they did here at my opening, and that was tremendous."

The new Paris house of Lady Duff Gordon is entirely in the period of Louis Phillipe, and the new Empire fashions are delightfully displayed in such an environment.

"The simplicity of that period pleases me immensely after so much of the Louis," she said.

CHILDREN'S DANCE RECITAL

Pupils of Miss Florence Give Annual Entertainment.

The eighth annual entertainment by the pupils of Miss Isabelle Florence was held in Huntington Chambers hall yesterday afternoon, and was repeated in the evening. The opening consisted of a Greek romance, entitled "Thalia," written by Miss Florence to introduce some special Greek dances and a slave dance that brought together in marvelous evolutions four of her very clever pupils. This was followed by various fanciful dances. Miss Theresa Connell danced in imitation of Genee and was recalled several times. The work of Miss Francis Purcell and Helena Hipwell was particularly good. Assisting at the piano was Mrs. Clara Hill. The ushers were Miss Mary Boyle, Miss Mary Cushman, Elizabeth O'Brien, Miss Grace Connell, Miss Gertrude Fisher and Helen Connell.

Among the patronesses were Mrs. J. Murray Forbes, Mrs. Eugene N. Foss, Mrs. [illegible] Ames, Mrs. Von L. Meyer, Mrs. J. Arthur Beebe, Mrs. H. P. Quincy, Mrs. J. REAL CLUB FOR REAL "BUSINESS WOMEN"

Membership of Boston's Newest Organization Will Be Limited to Those Who Work.

BOSTON'S newest woman's club is different in many respects from the famous Chilton Club, which is composed of women in Boston's most exclusive society circles.

In the first place, it will be located in the business and not in the Back Bay section of the city. The committee is trying to find a proper site in the district bounded by Washington, West, Bromfield and Tremont streets.

In the second place the membership will not be at all exclusive. Every woman of good moral character will be eligible. But the membership will not be recruited from the ranks of society; the enlistments will come from the ranks of the women who earn their own living.

In the third place, the club rooms will be designed for the comfort and convenience of the busy woman and not for the woman of leisure. Arrangements will be made for serving lunches promptly and at a reasonable cost. There will be no idling about the tables or lounging about the rooms, and it will be the policy of the club to see how many women can be well and cheaply served.

Club Badly Needed.

The club starts off with a charter membership list of 105. It is not necessary for those desiring to join to be in business for themselves. They may be employed by others, and no distinction will be made in the election of club officers.

For some time there has been a feeling among the busy women of Boston that there should be a convenient meeting place, so that those who had an engagement for the evening would not have to make a tedious journey home and back again between the closing of business and the time of the engagement.

The leaders in the movement are Mrs. Robert A. Woods, Miss Eleanor Wood and Miss Alice H. Grady. The idea was first discussed by them informally when they met for luncheon at Young's Hotel one day not long ago. They decided the time was ripe for the launching of a movement for a business women's club. Later on letters were sent to forty-five business women, and forty of them attended a meeting at the Twentieth Century Club, at which Mrs. Woods presided and outlined the plans.

For another meeting 175 invitations were issued and in response 105 women met at dinner in the American House and discussed the club question.

The next meeting will be held on June 15, when the club will be formally organized by the election of officers and the adoption of a constitution. A committee of seven is in charge of the arrangements for the organization. Of this committee Miss Alice H. Grady, confidential secretary for Louis D. Brandeis, is chairman. Her associates on the committee are Mrs. Alice P. Lesser, Mrs. Mary A. Harris, Mrs. Mary Moran, Mrs. Annie M. F. Sherman, Miss Jeanette Dougherty and Miss Louise M. Sweeney.

Discussing the club situation Miss Grady said to a reporter for the Sunday AMERICAN:

Small Beginning Planned.

"The idea is to have a club where the business women can invite their friends and feel they are at home. It is often very inconvenient to have no suitable place to meet a friend in town, and such a club would be far more suitable for such a purpose than a public hotel or perhaps a street corner. Our idea is to make a small beginning, however, and we are now looking for rooms in the district bounded by West, Bromfield, Tremont and Washington streets. We are looking for suites of three or four rooms, a dining room, lounging room and dressing room. To make the movement a complete success we have about 500 members. The membership will be limited to business women who pass the requirements of the membership committee."

"How would you define a 'business woman?'" was asked.

"Well, it is rather difficult to give a concise definition, but I can illustrate my point by telling you about a woman who applied for membership who is not a business woman, according to my notions. She owns considerable property, and is a director in a company, and devotes a good part of her time to this business. But she is not dependent on her business for her living, she does not have regular business hours, she does not have to be at a desk at 9 in the morning and work, say, till 5. Although she does business, she is not a business woman in our sense of the word."

Question of Business.

"Would you call a stenographer getting $5 a week a business woman?" the reporter asked.

"Yes and no. She is in one sense a business woman, but the way I think of the term it implies a certain amount of responsibility that we do not associate with so small a salary. However, the amount of a woman's income will have nothing to do with her eligibility. It is probable, however, that a $5 a week stenographer would feel that she could not afford the membership dues. Then there is the newly organized Stenographers' Mutual Benefit Association, the low dues of which place it within reach of all."

"Have the dues been decided upon?" was asked.

"Nothing has been definitely decided as yet but amounts ranging from $5 to $15 annually were suggested. There will probably also be an initiation fee.

"Among the women who are enthusiastic for the formation of this new club we have practically every business activity represented. There are secretaries, lawyers, buyers, stenographers and social workers."

MISS GRADY, ACTIVE FOR NEW CLUB FOR WOMAN WHO WORK

CENSURES LAWYERS IN TAX DODGING CASE

Bar Association Keeps Resolutions Secret; Mayor Promises to Make Them Public.

The Boston Bar Association is carefully guarding the text of the resolution passed by which Robert F. Herrick of Milton, and Francis C. Welch of Boston, two of the most prominent attorneys in New England, were censured for their action in not making public to the assessors the full amount of the taxable estate of the late Quincy A. Shaw.

The Committee on Grievances of the Association, it became known yesterday, reported the resolution of censure unanimously to the council and the latter body affirmed it.

There are only two copies of the resolution in existence, it was said yesterday, one in the possession of the Bar Association and the other in the hands of Mayor Fitzgerald. The Mayor, it was said yesterday, will make the resolution public this week. It is intimated that he will accompany it with some comment.

It is expected, in view of the attitude the Mayor took at the time the facts became public in the famous tax dodging case, that what he has to say about the report of the Bar Association will be of a caloric nature.

The members of the Committee on Grievances are: Edward W. Hutchins, chairman; Charles T. Gallagher, Theodore H. Tyndale, John Lowell, R. D. Weston, Arthur D. Hill, and Charles E. Shattuck, secretary.

The charge lodged with the Bar Association against Herrick and Welch, to the effect that they had violated the ethics that govern, or should govern, the profession in this city, was referred to the Grievance Committee at the time the tax scandal was being widely discussed throughout New England.

The council is a very formidable body and contains among its members the most prominent lawyers in this section of the country, as will be seen by a glance at the following names:

Boston Bar Association, Council, 1910-11—President, Moorfield Storey; vice-president, Samuel J. Elder; treasurer, William S. Hall; secretray, Robert S. Gorham and all former presidents ex-officio; Richard Olney, John C. Gray, Charles P. Greenough and Alfred Hemenway.

For three years from October, 1909—Theodore H. Tyndale, Frank Brewster, Charles F. Choate, Jr., Charles E. Shattuck, Michael J. Sughrue, James D. Colt and William G. Thompson.

MRS. THORNDIKE HOSTESS.

Gen. Sherman's Daughter to Entertain G. A. R. Veterans.

HARVARD, May 27.—Mrs. Paul Thorndike, wife of one of Boston's prominent surgeons, and daughter of General Sherman, will entertain at her Summer home here on Memorial Day the members of the local G. A. R., Sons of Veterans, and the Women's Relief Corps, as well as the public of Ayer, Shirley and Harvard. Former Governor Guild and Rev. J. P. Reddish, department chaplain of the G. A. R., will be prominent among the speakers. It is expected that there will be several veterans who participated in Sherman's march from Atlanta to the sea, made famous by song, present as speakers.

A DOUBLE ROMANCE.

Four Young Brookline People Will Become Two on June 17.

A double romance that arose through the companionship of four young Brookline people will reach its culmination in a double wedding June 17, when Florence C. Dearborn and Theodore W. Dearborn, brother and sister, will be married to Lester H. Baker and Helen M. Goldsmith. The ceremony will take place in the Leyden Congregational Church, just across the street from the Dearborn home at No. 1,853 Beacon street, Brookline. The young people have been chums for years.

MISS ABERCROMBIE WEDS.

Daughter of Worcester Principal Is Now Mrs. D. P. Lockwood.

WORCESTER, May 27.—Miss Esther Greenleaf Abercrombie, daughter of Principal D. W. Abercrombie of the Worcester Academy, and Dean Putnam Lockwood of Harvard '03, assistant professor at Columbia University, New York, were married to-day by the Rev. Raymond C. Knox of Columbia University and the Rev. Dr. Allwyn K. Foster of the First Baptist Church, at the bride's home, No. 81 Providence street. The bride is a graduate of Wellesley, 1905.

"AMERICAN WORKING GIRL A FINE TYPE"

Evangeline Booth, of Salvation Army, Replies to Self-Constituted Critics of Workers.

The American working girl represents a more splendid type of woman than the girl of any other country.

She grows mentally and physically, since there are no problems of caste confronting her.

These apply more often to the girl who has nothing to do.

It is natural for a girl to want to be attractive and pretty in the years between seventeen and twenty-five, the average working age.

Miss Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in the United States, in expressing the above views said she had little patience with self-constituted critics of the American working girl.

"The American working girl is gradually but surely evolving into a splendid type of womanhood," she said. "I might say she is the most self-sustaining woman of any country. One of the fundamental reasons for this lies in the fact that there is comparatively no question of caste in this country.

Inspired by Ambition.

"The working woman may rise to the heights of the so-called first women places of other lands. The dignity of labor is continually about her and she is forever confronted with the common occurrence of the newsboy who becomes the power in the older man, the saleswoman rising to the point of partner of the concern. There is a continual hope of something better all the time in her mind, which is not the case in any other country.

"Out of about 5,000 working girls that pass through our rescue homes annually eighty per cent. of them are eager—no, anxious—for employment on account of this ever present spirit of endeavor. When given an opportunity of being self-supporting, they need very little or no preaching to keep them in the way they should go. Work over here is a recognized factor of individual worth and a woman recognizes it.

"The aim of the average working girl is to make more money so that life may be easier. Eighty times out of a hundred she chooses the field of industry rather than the wayward life. This may seem contrary to the oft-repeated belief that the girl is continually seeking to bedeck herself with finery and that she will find means toward this end. It is not true. Continually harping 'Fallen working girl' cannot bring the results to help the girls become more efficient in the work they are doing.

Girls Need Amusement.

"We have some good, big men at the head of things who are doing a great work in a quiet way by action, not theories. They are paying living wages. They are giving cleaner conditions. They are making surroundings agreeable. They are providing amusement—and right here let me say that amusement is a prime factor. They recognise the need of uplifting surroundings. These are the things that in the working girl's strata of existence are necessities in the line of morality much more than continuous preaching without practice.

"In the majority of cases the working girl who goes the wrong way must not be too harshly condemned. While it is the mission of the Salvation Army to show the struggler the folly of finery and personal aggrandizement, yet the most straight-laced reformer must acknowledge that the truly natural thing in the world for the young girl is to have the joy of being sweet and pretty and attractive. Very often she must help support the family and has little to call her own for adornment. Even though her love for the beautiful may assume the form of the tawdry, it is not to be despised or she condemned for her innate girl tendencies in this direction."

ASSAILS MINE OWNERS.

Minister Tells of Conditions in Westmoreland County.

Speaking on "Social Conditions Among the Miners in Westmoreland County, Pa.," before the Twentieth Century Club, yesterday afternoon, the Rev. Dr. Algernon S. Crapsey, head of the People's Church in Rochester, N. Y., said that "Westmoreland County is to be the instigator of one of the greatest conflicts in the country." He said it would be due primarily to "a little group of capitalists that gained possession of the coal mines in those regions and have held on to them since by methods that would bring shame to any Christian community."

"For the last fourteen months there have been 10,000 men in camp in Westmoreland," he said, "who are opposed by an armed force. The unarmed men are strikers.

"The mine owners own the dwelling houses, miserable huts, and evicted the men and their families. This took place during the cold month of March. The whole community was thrown out of their homes, children were born in the open. I am firmly convinced that we need to send missionaries to the Christian mine owners rather than to Indians."

How the Piano Trust Drove Me Into the Piano Business

And Why It Is Now Trying to Drive Me Out

A few years ago I sold very few pianos and the few I did dispose of were sold absolutely without profit to me. They were long overdue on the storage salesrooms floors and I sold at a price to clear only expense of handling. I legally advertised the sale and mentioned the name of makers of pianos in my announcement. This brought down upon my head the wrath of the Piano Trust. Of course when I put a price of about $95 on one of the $350 or $450 pianos the Trust dealers did not like it. It showed the public the enormous profit in the piano business and the Trust thought that this was a bad thing to do, and it was (for the Trust). I was served notice by the Trust to quit, but I didn't quit. Then the fight started. The Trust got after me, using the usual trust methods, and any man who has fought a trust knows what that means. I was attacked through the press, through the courts and through their paid emissaries. I was hounded and lied about, pilloried and posted throughout New England. This persecution resulted in my making an exhaustive study of the piano business for the purpose of learning piano manufacture so that I might defend myself and fight the Trust at its own game, and, believe me, I needed a thorough knowledge of the piano business to do this.

Let Me Tell You What I Discovered in My Study of the Manufacture and Sale of Pianos by the Piano Trust

I discovered that there was no mystery nor magic about the making of a piano. For the same grades of instruments the makers used the same grade of materials. None of the makers had any patents on the different woods, wires, felts or ivory. And in the making of a piano—the construction—the assembling of the parts—some makers used the best materials and put the best workmanship into the construction. Some makers used the cheapest and poorest materials and put the cheapest and poorest workmanship into the construction. The difference between a good piano and a bad piano is the difference between a piano made by the first method and a piano made by the second method—that's all. The perfection attained in the making of best pianos is not due to the great knowledge or skill of the house whose name the piano bears—the maker's name—far from it. The specialization in the manufacture of the different parts is what is making for perfection of the whole, and this special work is not practiced by the people whose name is on the piano, but by the makers of the different parts of the piano who sell these parts to the so-called maker, who merely assembles them. To the makers of the parts, then, must be given the credit for the present state of perfection of the piano. My study of the manufacture of pianos taught me the actual cost of construction and proved to me that the Piano Trust was getting an exorbitant price for its pianos—a price away out of proportion to cost, and the public was paying several hundred per cent. more than it ought to. The Piano Trust was charging luxury prices for pianos. I determined at this stage of the game to fight the Trust, by selling Trust pianos and all pianos at necessity prices and I did it, and am now doing it, so you see how the Trust forced me into the piano business. The Piano Department of my storage sales business has developed to such an extent that I am now selling more pianos than any concern in the East. This explains why the Trust is now trying to force me out of the business. At just this time I need the co-operation of the public more than ever. I ask only that this be done. If the reader of this announcement will investigate my sales (no matter what kind of a piano is wanted) I will assure a saving of from $100 to $200 on any make instrument. An investigation is all I ask. Come up here next week. Some very special bargains in new pianos. Don't buy till you see me.

CHELSEA TURNS COLD EYE TOWARD BOSTON

Citizens, Proud of Rebuilt Town, Are Not Likely to Favor Plan for Annexation.

POLITICIANS BUSY NOW

Board of Control to Quit and People Will Choose Between Two Government Systems.

C. STANDS [illegible] and it also stands for [illegible]

Civic pride is prevalent in Chelsea as a result of the fire, and recent events have inoculated every citizen with it.

Now the citizens of Chelsea are going to be handed a miscellaneous assortment of city government and asked to take their pick. There is a bill before the Legislature to annex Chelsea to Boston and give John F. Fitzgerald a chance to rule the city on the Mystic.

Another bill offers the citizens of Chelsea two forms of government. One is the commission form favored by highbrows everywhere, and practised in Des Moines and Galveston, and the other is the ordinary mayor and council system which prevailed before the fire.

One thing is certain, the Board of Control will not be in power after this year, and the people of Chelsea will cease to be in the condition of the inhabitants of Russia, ruled by a despotism.

It must be admitted that the despotism has done a pretty good job. Chelsea is tickled to death just at present that it will be able to pay off an old debt of $[illegible] this Fall. The money is in the [illegible] and no extension or renewals [illegible] be asked. It has been pretty hard [illegible] to get ready to pay this debt [illegible] fire wiped out $5,500,000 of taxable property, but the Board of Control has accomplished it.

"We're From Chelsea."

This civic pride crops out in all sorts of ways. Chelsea people visiting New York write Chelsea, Mass., after their names on the hotel register. Formerly they wrote Boston and said "Oh, yes, we are Bostonians. We—er—live in the suburbs."

But Chelsea is now famous. It had the greatest fire in recent history, or did until Bangor got into the limelight, and the quickest recovery. Chelsea people think the Bangor fire rather a small affair anyway.

That is why [illegible] people think they can get along [illegible] [illegible] tion [illegible] [illegible] than $1.50 per [illegible].

The Chelsea assessors have almost completed their work for 1911 and report that [illegible] [illegible] the loss [illegible] 1910 [illegible] buildings worth more than $1,000,000 have gone up, bringing the total [illegible] in the three years since the fire up to $5,500,000.

But here is where the astonishing feature of the recovery comes in, and Charles Reed, the city clerk, doesn't let anyone fail to understand it. Although the valuation of the new buildings is equal to those destroyed in the fire, only one third of the burned section has yet been rebuilt.

Chelsea now has just as much assessable property as before the fire and close [illegible] acres of splendid building ground still to be utilized.

It is a remarkable fact that every building which has gone up on a vacant lot has averaged three times as much in value as the structure it replaced. [illegible] the vacant land buildings worth $11,000,000 will be [illegible] the same ratio of values continues to prevail. This means very much [illegible] taxes [illegible].

Proud of New City.

That is why Chelsea is so cocky although she is still spotted with burnt patches.

Joseph P. Loud, who used to live in Chelsea, but moved to Pittsfield after the fire, was back in town the other day and he was shown around the city by City Clerk Reed.

"I don't see but the old town won out by having a fire," said Mr. Loud. "You might think [illegible] three times as big from the character of the buildings. Why the banks are built of marble like the big banks in Boston. The school houses look like colleges in other places. The City Hall puts it over any I ever saw. And the apartments [illegible] business blocks are all built of stone."

Mr. Reed showed [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] cost $125,000 [illegible] $100,000 [illegible] three institutions that Chelsea would never have obtained except for the fire.

He pointed out the fine modern Gordon's Theatre, erected at a cost of $10,000, and called attention to the splendid blocks [illegible] by S. Dedomenico near Bellingham Station.

He didn't have to draw attention to the magnificent Shurtleff School building which stands out on the hill to the east of Broadway. This school was built out of [illegible] $1 [illegible] immediately after the fire and cost $200,000.

"People [illegible] from all parts of the State to see [illegible]," said Mr. Reed. "It is [illegible] [illegible] school [illegible] [illegible]."

The W[illegible] School building is even more [illegible] and costly, but by this time Mr. [illegible] [illegible] surprise.

If anybody would like to know how far one can go with [illegible] dollars he ought to take a trip [illegible] and see how the Board of Control spent it.

Spending a Million.

The chief item is the City Hall, which cost $300,000 and occupies a strategic position on Broadway. The two schoolhouses cost $[illegible] between them, the city stables, [illegible] [illegible] and fire stations $[illegible] [illegible] municipal [illegible] remainder.

The [illegible] of [illegible] money had powers [illegible] of [illegible] government in [illegible]. The [illegible] by a special act abolished the city government as incapable of dealing [illegible] crisis and the Governor appointed [illegible] to govern the city. They were absolute autocrats. The politicians of Chelsea were turned out in the cold and have remained out for three years.

Now they are hoping to get back again, and they do not regard with [illegible] the [illegible] government [illegible] for [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] committee [illegible] offering two choices to the people of Chelsea for choice. In one the commission form is followed and by the other the old system of mayor and [illegible] council used.

[illegible] the Board of Control is [illegible] E. McClintock of Chelsea is chairman of the Board, and the other members are [illegible] Kattlesky of Boston, Mark Wentworth of Malden, Alton E. Briggs of Chelsea and George H. Dunham of Chelsea. By the original act the board was to remain in existence during the first year of the new municipal government with a vetoing power. The board last [illegible] the Legislature that such a [illegible] not work and asked for a new form of Government.

No Chance for Graft.

Bill Halliday, who drives a team for the Forbes Lithographing people, thinks the Board of Control deserves a lot of credit, but he's glad it is through.

"Those fellows did their best and they were up against a tough proposition [illegible] deserve credit for winding out [illegible] [illegible] the citizens of Chelsea [illegible] a [illegible] in the city government [illegible] of thinking of running for alderman [illegible] self. The million dollars [illegible] were selected to spend is go[illegible] [illegible] longer that a Mayor and [illegible] anything, so let's have [illegible]."

The city will get rid of [illegible] when it pays the bonded [illegible] $869,500, which comes [illegible] [illegible] The sinking fund [illegible] $[illegible],000 of the city every [illegible] than a decade to meet [illegible] most of the people have fo[illegible] [illegible].

Chelsea is now paying a tax rate of $22.40. Last year it was $[illegible] it will be somewhat lower [illegible] is very high, but consider w[illegible] has been up against.

Let us have a few statistics. The fire burned down 2,828 buildings. It covered 287 acres and seventeen miles of streets. The estimated loss, personal and real, was close to $17,000,000, of which the insurance companies paid $8,800,000. Fifteen thousand people were made homeless and most of them moved to some other town.

The result was that those who remained had to pay heavier taxes or the city would have been obliged to go out of business.

Now Chelsea's troubles are over. Broadway is lined with modern stone buildings. Eight new churches have been [illegible] of [illegible] the burnt district. Hundreds of fine modern apartment houses have gone up and the carpenters and builders are never idle. The grass has grown over the unsightly ruins and the air is fresh and pure.

Old Chelsea was the most congested city in the United States. Most of the burned section consisted of old and musty, also wooden tenements, and there were several unhealthy slums.

The 10,000 people who have moved into the new houses in the burnt section are paying much higher rents and are of better class and character. The slums have gone forever and Chelsea is well rid of the old junk shops and dives which were a menace to health and safety.

Opposes Annexation.

Speaking against annexation and regarding the opportunities and future of Chelsea, William E. McClintock, chairman of the Board of Control, says:

"To my mind it can be easily seen that we are to be a greater city than before the fire. The future will see us in a better financial condition than any other municipality. We have streets, water, sewers, sidewalks and schools all paid for and many debts standing before the fire will be wiped out this year.

"Our water system gives the city a return of more than $35,000 with a lower rate than other cities. We have forty-two miles of pipe and all sections of the city have the supply. Our sewer system is complete and a large percentage of our sidewalks are paved. The school buildings are unequalled in the State and we have a complete complement of public buildings.

"With things paid for and our natural increase in valuation our tax rate is bound to be reduced and our real estate valuation increased all over the city.

"We have plenty of room for freight yards and workshops for the Grand Trunk Railroad if it locates in East Boston, easily accessible to its proposed location. There are many acres of land available for manufacturing establishments, a large portion of which is open to shipping facilities by water and all of which is accessible to the two railroads now going through our city.

"The Chelsea Creek is to have a draw 100 feet wide and the government engineers are surveying for a channel 200 feet wide and 25 feet deep at mean low water. We also have an industrial railroad on Marginal street giving communication between the land and water.

Invites Grand Trunk.

"The land bordering on Chelsea Creek can be purchased reasonably and with the facilities for shipping by rail or water should make an ideal place for any enterprise, and the officials of the city extend an invitation to the Grand Trunk Railroad or any other concern looking for a favorable location.

"With two-thirds of the burned area yet to be rebuilt, the largest number of buildings will be residences which will shelter a population of workmen for factories or industrial buildings. We have six large new factories located in the city since the fire and those destroyed then have enlarged their plants for the increase of business.

"We have a population now of about 34,000 with all the public buildings needed and playgrounds for the children.

"The question of continuing the present form of government will be on the [illegible] at the Fall election and, if a [illegible] for a Mayor and Board of Aldermen is elected, the Board of Control will retire [illegible] of this year.

"I [illegible] that the annexation [illegible] will [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] should be referred to the [illegible] Court and not be considered when the citizens are choosing their form of government, as I do not believe the people should be called on to decide so many important questions at one time.

"The city of Chelsea is bound to be a fine residential city, a city of large factories and industries and soon to be better off financially than ever."

WHAT CHELSEA MAY GET IN THE WAY OF CITY GOVERNMENT

Annexation to Boston.

Government by a commission.

Power of Board of Control, which was that of a benevolent despotism, but under which [illegible] has risen bigger and better [illegible] its ashes, will soon be [illegible] the people.

UNION LABOR NEWS OF GREATER BOSTON

June Demands for Higher Pay or Better Conditions Will Affect 3,000 Working Men.

PLUMBERS AWAIT ACTION

Building Laborers to Hold Mass Meeting for Union and Non-union Men in Campaign.

Three thousand organized workmen are [illegible] in the June 1 demands for higher [illegible] [illegible] afternoons, [illegible]. The building laborers, artificial stone, cement and asphalt workers and the steam engineers' unions are the principal organizations affected. It is not [illegible] likely that any general tie-up of either trade will occur next Thursday, however, despite the demands submitted. The building laborers want all construction work paid for at the same rate now allowed masons' tenders, thirty-five cents an hour, but are willing to allow the old rate of thirty cents to stand for excavating. Sixty cents an hour, instead of the present rate of fifty cents, is the demand of the artificial stone and asphalt workers, while the portable hoisting engineers want an increase of $1 a week, and Saturday half-holidays the year round.

Plumbers' Union, No. 12, has held several conferences with the master plumbers of Boston looking toward the adoption of [illegible] wage schedule, to take the place of the $4.50 [illegible] now prevailing. The [illegible] committee will report at a special meeting of the union on Tuesday, June 7, and meet the employers again the following evening, June 8. The question of [illegible] the initiation fee of [illegible] from $10 to $25 also will be [illegible] the Tuesday meeting. [illegible] conferences have been [illegible] May 1 and some disposition of [illegible] matter must be made before August 1, [illegible] of the union.

Stitchers Get Charter Back.

Mrs. Nellie O'Roy, secretary of the Brockton Stitchers' Union, has notified the [illegible] members of that organization that, [illegible] special dispensation of the general [illegible] board, they are privileged to elect [illegible] delegate to the St. Paul convention [illegible] Boot and Shoe Workers' Union [illegible] held at Brockton next [illegible] convention opens [illegible]. Under this dispensation the stitchers' charter, revoked last August for alleged disregard of the general union's constitutional provisions, is restored for ten days.

Dominic D'Alessandro, international president of the union, and Jacob Lazenaar, national organizer for the A. F. of L., will address both meetings.

Bookbinders Have Grievance.

Joseph McManus, business agent of Bookbinders' Union No. 16, states that the Public Library trustees have instituted a [illegible] policy in giving the bookbinders a raise from $19.17 to $21 a week and then taking away their annual two weeks' holiday. The boasted Saturday half holiday given these men, he asserts, also is offset by the fact that they are required to work eight and three-quarter hours a day the remainder of the week. He further declares that the working of the bookbinders at the Public Library more than eight hours a day is contrary to the municipal regulations.

Boston Bindery Women's Union has instituted an organizing campaign for the enrollment of every woman employed at the calling locally in that organization. They are being assisted in the work by the men's union.

New Haven Freight Handlers' Union No. 70 is out with a warning against giving subscriptions or donations to any person claiming to represent that organization. David Tapley, secretary of the union, declares that a gang of fakirs have been victimizing Boston business men by using the name of the union. He requests that all such persons be handed over to the police.

Charlotte Kruesi, secretary of the Boston Socialist Club, has sent out circular appeals to every local trade union, asking for contributions to the defence fund being raised to defend the McNamara brothers, under arrest at Los Angeles, California, because of an alleged complicity in dynamiting the Times building in that city.

Asbestos Workers' Union No. 6 has [illegible] notified meeting [illegible] avenue, Thursday evening [illegible] election of officers will take place for the ensuing term. All members are requested to attend.

Barbers Want More Pay.

Edward A. Fitzgerald, secretary of the Painters' District Council, has notified affiliated locals that nominations for the council secretary and two business agents must be filed before June 20. Election will be held during the first week in July. The district covers the twenty-six wards of Boston and the town of Brookline.

An increase of $1 a week with [illegible] hour less work a day has been demanded by the Barbers' Union of Boston to take effect August 1 next. It is proposed to have the shops open at 7.30 [illegible] of 7 o'clock, the present hour. The union has voted to allow its members to work until 9.30 a. m. Labor Day, in response to a request submitted by the employers.

Returns from the referendum vote taken by the National Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers' Union show that Boston has been selected as the place to hold the general convention of the organization, which will come next August. It is thought that 160 delegates will attend.

Stationary Firemen's Union No. 242 will hold a big smoke-talk in Wells Memorial Building next Thursday evening. Because of its rapidly increasing membership the local has decided to secure other and larger [illegible] headquarters.

Four persons were injured, buildings were shaken and windows shattered, while hundreds of shoe operatives were thrown into a panic, when several sticks of dynamite were blasted prematurely in Central Square, Lynn. Scores narrowly escaped serious injury.

The force of the blast going in an easterly direction, up against the brick building, saved many workers going to dinner.

Blasting for Phone Conduit.

The blast occurred in an excavation of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, which is laying wires underground at this point. The trench is thirty-five feet long, four feet wide and about six feet deep. The workmen encountered rock and several blasts had been set off. The blasting was under the direction of Contractor David J. Sheehan.

On the east side of Washington street opposite the trench is the three-story brick building occupied on the street floor by the Boston Lunch Company, on the second floor by the Lynn Cigar Company as a storehouse for fine cigars and imported tobacco. Much of this tobacco is damaged by flying bits of stone and glass. The top floor was also used as a storehouse. The building is owned by the Olympia Theatre Company.

The May special is nearing the finish. Next Wednesday night, May 31, at 10 o'clock, the special May offer to candidates in the AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest will come to a close.

The headquarters of the Contest Department at No. 275 Devonshire street will be open till 10 o'clock that night to receive subscriptions under the May offer. [illegible] sent by mail up to that hour, as shown by the postmark, will also be accepted for the same.

The next list of candidates' standing will be printed on Sunday, June 11, with vote totals. This next list, the final one before the close of the main contest, will be compiled up to Wednesday, May 31, at 10 p. m. That gives another reason for digging for votes and subscriptions at this time. The effect of high rank in this next list will be tremendous. It will boom your campaign at the closing time, the most important time of all.

BROCKTON SETS OUT FOR 100,000 MARK

BROCKTON, May 27.—"Boom, Boys, Boost Boys. Bigger, Better, Busier Brockton." That's the slogan in Brockton nowadays. The big Brockton story in the Sunday AMERICAN a week ago struck a responsive chord. The entire city was excited over the boom idea and surprised to learn what a really great place Brockton is.

Monday night a mammoth mass meeting of enthusiasts was held in the Orpheum Theatre and a committee of five men was named to appoint another committee which will organize a realty company to raise funds for the erection of new factories. This committee consists of William L. Wright, John A. Scott, Elroy Sherman Thompson, L. Francis Pope and Walter M. Dunbar. William L. Wright was the first man to suggest that $100,000 be raised for the erection of factories and was the first to offer $1000 toward this amount. Others who have volunteered this amount are W. R. Buchanan, Alderman L. R. Churchill, and the Carpenters' Union.

Real estate men have offered land free, one of them donating a plot valued at $8,000, and it is planned to erect large shoe factories on these plots.

"Brockton 1915—100,000 population" is the battle cry. Within the last few weeks many shoe firms have communicated with the Board of Trade with a view of negotiating for factory room here. Everybody is optimistic about the future and all will join hands to make Brockton one of the big cities of the State.

Among the prominent men greatly interested in the formation of the realty company and the general upbuilding of the city are: Ex-Governor Douglas, George [illegible] Keith, ex-Mayor John S. Kent, Mayor Harry C. Howard, City Treasurer F. Francis Pope, City Tax Collector E. Sherman [illegible], who is secretary of the Board of Trade; President A. H. Andrews of the Board of Trade, Frank S. Farnum of the Commercial Club, President Walter M. Dunbar of the Brockton Merchants' Association, Secretary J. John Evans of the Brockton Shoe Manufacturers' Association, William L. Wright of the Boston Store, Charles L. Bird, O. B. Q., Charles [illegible], [illegible] Agricultural Society; William R. Buchanan, [illegible] W. Baker, [illegible], George Howard, [illegible], A. H. Fuller, M. A. [illegible], S. P. [illegible], G. O. Churchill, H. L. Tinkham, P. L. Erskine, A. F. Nelson, J. W. Mc[illegible], [illegible] Fraser, Robert [illegible], James B. [illegible], [illegible] Cook, John P. Mor[illegible], G. W. P. [illegible], [illegible] B. Howard, [illegible], [illegible] Crocker, Charles S. [illegible], John V. Scott, President Stewart B. M[illegible], [illegible] Council, L. R. Churchill, W. [illegible], W. M. Nute, W. T. Stall, P. B. Keith, George Thompson, Charles F. Richmond, Bernard Sexton, William H. B[illegible], [illegible] A. Norris, F. F. Field, D. W. [illegible], A. A. Lumbert, John Kelly, John [illegible] Bonney, Edward Gilmore, [illegible], John P. Meade, Charles M. Park, [illegible], [illegible] H. C. Kott, [illegible], [illegible] Tolman, F. S. [illegible], W. P. [illegible], Elbert Howard and Alfred W. Donovan, president of the New England Boot and Shoe Club, which was directly the cause of the boom campaign.

SUMMER FLIRTATIONS MADE 'REASONABLE'

Cupid's Blacklist Threatens the Boys and Girls Not Loyal to Shore or Mountain Affinities.

Heartless flirts are going to be subjected to "reasonable restraint" this Summer.

No more of the Summer girl who keeps five men guessing and gives them all the [illegible].

Nix on the fair-haired boy who dates seven different girls for the same week and thinks he is the favorite son of all creation.

The "Almost Marriage Contract" will put a stop to this wholesale flirting from this Summer on. The contract is a formidable document. It bears a large red seal on its southeastern exposure. It is legally drawn with space for names of principals and witnesses. A girl or man who would break one of these contracts will never be the same person afterwards.

Blacklist Is Planned.

Besides, he or she will be blacklisted in the Amalgamated Order of Summer Girls and Summer Sweethearts. All blacklisted ones are barred from the benefits of Summer flirtation for three years.

The contract starts with the time-honored "We, the undersigned," which is proper to all contracts, whether for peace negotiations between nations or signing [illegible].

Then the man, signing his name, promises [illegible] above all Summer girls and to forget "the maids of Spring, Winter [illegible] other seasons."

[illegible]

"To furnish one engagement ring of such quality as to make all other girls envious.

What They Must Do.

"To invent such pet names as shall be pleasing and feebly express his ardor.

"To furnish ice cream, soda, bonbons, all of highest quality and in sufficient quantity.

"To find secluded nooks where a summer afternoon may be profitably passed in billing and cooing."

She, on the other hand, engages herself to have no other summer chap, but [illegible]

"To be a good, faithful summer girl and not to flirt with other men immoderately (eg that 'immoderately?')

"To make her eyes behave, except when they are alone.

"To wear the above-mentioned ring on the third finger of the left hand and to [illegible] acknowledge from whom she received it.

"To reserve an ample amount of morning, afternoon and evening for her summer affinity and to carefully watch the calendar for moonlight and to keep it all for him.

Drive Collins Out of the Box and Cicotte Has to Go to the Rescue of Donovan's Left-Hander Late in the Game

Speed Boys Get a First Inning Lead, but They Are Helpless After That; the Senators Tie Them Up One by One

AMERICAN LEAGUE BALL GROUNDS, Washington, D. C., May 27.—Tom Hughes pitched a [illegible] game after the first inning to-day, Boston getting but four hits in the last eight rounds. Collins started well and hung on until the seventh, when he was driven to the bench by timely drives. The fielding of the Speed Boys was bad, Wagner making two costly fumbles, while Lewis dropped an easy fly and Engle booted one.

Engle pulled off the star play of the game, a catch of a foul fly right against the stand on the dead run, but the play cost a run, as Lelivelt scored after the catch was completed. Lelivelt and McBride were also in the lime light by brilliant catches and stops.

Tris Speaker broke into the game in the ninth, batting for Cicotte and to show that the old boy still has his batting eye with him drove the ball over Gessler's head for three bases.

The way Tris got around the bags demonstrated that he is fit to resume work. For fear of a slide at the plate Thoney ran from third and scored easily after Lelivelt had caught Lewis' fly.

How Game Was Played.

Boston opened the game as though a runaway affair was to be the result. After Hooper had flied out, Yerkes got a base on balls and Lewis tore off a single to left

Engle singled to centre, scoring Yerkes, but Lewis was caught going to third on the throw home and run down by Condey and Hughes.

Blanks went regularly for the next seven rounds, but in the ninth, the fourth and final tally came across, the result of Speaker's drive and Thoney's good base running.

Washington's first run resulted [illegible] Milan's single in the initial inning, followed by Lelivelt's double.

In the fourth Gessler doubled and Cunningham sent him home with a single. The Nationals tied the score in the sixth, the result of a base on balls, a stolen base to Gessler, a hit by McBride and the double steal, Carrigan's throw to second being too low for Wagner to get.

The Fatal Seventh.

Then came the deluge in the seventh, hits by Street and Hughes starting the trouble for Collins, a base on balls following, and a timely drive by Conroy, for a long single scoring two runs. Cicotte then went in and Milan dashed home when Wagner threw low to Carrigan on Lelivelt's bounder.

Gessler was hit by a pitched ball and pinch-hitter McBride came across with a single that enabled Lelivelt to cross the pan with the fifth run.

In the eighth Washington's last run was hung up, Milan geting second on Lewis's muff, and coming all the way home when Wagner booted Conroy's grounder.

WOLGAST WINNER IN SLASHING FIGHT WITH BURNS

Champion Battles Slowly and Surely Until He Finally Crushes Down His Victim; Burns Throws Up the Sponge

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 27.—Ad Wolgast is still champion lightweight of the world Frankie Burns, the sensational Coast lightweight, battled the Michigan farmer here to-day, and was forced to succumb to the terrific punching ability and ring generalship of Wolgast after sixteen rounds of hard fighting.

From the beginning until the end of the fight Wolgast was complete master of the Californian wonder. For not a single moment of the mill was he in danger of losing to Burns.

The champion fought a careful fight

Though defeated, Burns is not disgraced by any means. He gave such an exhibition of fighting as any man might be proud of. His great defensive fighting kept the Michigan wildcat at a comfortable distance the greater part of the time. Wolgast was baffled time and time again by the quick shifts of the wily Californian

On the offensive Frankie fought a rattling good battle, which called forth [illegible] tinual applause from the crowd. He [illegible] always ready to stand toe to toe and mix things up with the champion with the hope that he might slip across a haymaker, but Wolgast was too clever and strong for the youthful Burns.

Wolgast Bores In.

ROUND ONE—Both men went to the centre of the ring. Wolgast started fighting with two light leads which Burns blocked. They came to a clinch, Wolgast hammering the kidneys with his right Wolgast landed light to the head then uppercut Burns on face with right. Wolgast backed Frankie to the ropes and swung with both hands. Burns covered up and jumped to the centre. Wolgast smiled and drove a hard right at Burns which the latter blocked. Wolgast shot a right uppercut under Burns's guard and Burns countered on head with right. Burns assumed crouch and Wolgast straightened him up with a right to the body. Just before the bell, Wolgast landed another uppercut on the mouth and brought blood

ROUND 2—Wolgast went right after his man and did some close infighting. Burns hooked the champion with his left, turning Wolgast's head around. Burns landed both hands on Wolgast's head, but went into his crouch as Wolgast swung for the head. Wolgast hooked right to face. Burns shot two lefts to Wolgast's face and then backed toward the ropes. Burns swung wildly, Wolgast pounding him twice on the kidneys. Wolgast brought blood from Burns' nose with his left. Burns started to fight back hard and Wolgast slipped to his knees. As Burns walked to his corner his face was covered with blood

ROUND 4—Burns landed two lefts and Wolgast sent in two vicious uppercuts Wolgast landed hard right swing on Burns's kidneys. Wolgast backed Burns to a corner and hammered him with both hands. Burns suddenly straightened up and sent Wolgast's head back with two hard lefts.

ROUND 5—Wolgast forced Burns to the ropes and partly sent him through the ropes with lefts and rights to the body. Wolgast caught Burns with a hard right on the chest. Wolgast got two on the kidneys and Burns landed a light left, then swung his right to the mouth

Burns Fights a Game Battle.

ROUND 6—Burns had the best of the infighting and continued to be aggressive The crowd shouted frantically for him to follow it up. Burns landed left to face and landed the hardest blow of the fight with a right hook to the jaw A series of clinches followed and Burns protected himself well.

DODGERS WIN CLOSE GAME FROM BOSTON

By R. W. LARDNER.

That Rustler winning streak didn't last very long. They will have to start in on another one to-morrow and be content with having given the Dodgers a terrible scare and the big Saturday audience a run for its money.

Yesterday's score was 9 to 8. The way the game looked in its middle you would have thought it would have ended about 16 to 3 in favor of the Dodgers. But you never can tell when these Rustlers are going to do. They gave such a swell exhibition of rallying in the sixth, seventh and eighth that folks fully expected them to tie it up or win it in their final effort

But Wilbur Goode, ordered to sacrifice with "Doc" Miller on first, popped up a foul which Erwin grabbed, and Harry Steinfeldt, ordered to hit it to the Columbus avenue playgrounds, cracked into a double play. That wound up the game and when it was over nobody could say that Boston had any more license to win it than Brooklyn.

New Tricks in Baseball.

President Lynch's baseball showed a lot of new tricks. Almost every time it was hit in the air it landed just out of reach between the infield and outfield, and almost every time it was hit on the ground it took a freak bound a mile over some infielder's head. The result was that the fielders of both clubs were a very nervous lot. They had no idea how the pill was going to act and they finally got so they hardly knew what to do with it when it acted naturally

The Dodger infield was patched up some more. John Hummel was still unfit for service and McElveen was again at second. The nifty Jake Daubert was sick and his place was taken by Cy Barger who can do more things than just pitch Cy's feet were his chief trouble They ran wild under him and he had to do an eccentric dance every time he tried to step on first base. The sack didn't ever seem to be in the same place twice when Cy's feet were moving that way

Henry O'Day did the umpiring alone for the first time this year His side kick Bill Brennan, was excused to visit West Point and work in the Army-Navy pastime with old Robert Emslie Henry umpired nicely in spite of his lonesome state and there was far less kicking than there usually is on Saturday, which usually has more than the entire balance of the week.

The Dodgers accumulated three errors and the Rustlers four, two of which were made by the German side of the infield Harry Steinfeldt dropped a foul ball in the eighth, but it cost nothing. Manager Tenney and Roy Miller split six safe smashes evenly between them, two of "Doc's" being doubles

The Rustlers gathered fifteen hits off Bell and Rucker and that was just as many as the Dodgers made against Brown Tyler and Pfeffer. The last named wasn't scored on, and the Rustlers would probably have won if he had started, but, of course, that's just a second guess. Man-

Hudson's Golf Ball Lands in Gray's Caddy Bag and Keeps Going

BROCKTON, May 27.—One of the most unique drives ever made in a golf game was turned in this afternoon at the Brockton Country Club by Everett G. Hudson, one of the cracks of the club. Hudson drove from the first tee, watched the [illegible] soar and all of a sudden it disappeared from his view. Winslow Gray was coming up the course on the way to the second hole and was carrying his golf bag over his shoulder.

He saw the ball coming his way, but the sun shone in his eyes and blinded him for a moment. The next instant something hit his bag, and looking about he could see nothing that might have been responsible for it. Hudson came running down the field and demanded that Gray return the golf ball. Gray expressed ignorance and when the pair looked in Mr. Gray's golf bag they found Hudson's ball Hudson dropped the ball and continued playing

HARVARD OARSMEN BEATEN BY CORNELL

ITHACA, May 27.—By winning the varsity race over Harvard by two lengths and the freshmen race by five lenghts Cornell rounded out a day that will be long remembered in Cornell history

Victory perched on the Red and White banner in all parts of the country and to night the students are tearing up the town and yelling themselves hoarse

The crew races on Lake Cayuga this evening were the most exciting in recent years. It demonstrated that Coach Wray had not spoken in vain when he said he had prepared especially for Cornell and they would give him the race of his life

They certainly did, as the Harvard eight ever worked to better advantage and never made a Cornell crew hustle as this one did

The race demonstrated another feature, that Cornell has the best crew since 1901 With a late start of a month, and other discouraging circumstances, the oarsmen have rounded out a crew that will probably put a dent into the record at Poughkeepsie in June

The varsity race did not start until 6.40, after the three thousand people on the observation train had waited some time. The water was smooth and ideal for rowing

Cornell Away First.

Cornell got away first at the sound of the gun and was piling up a stroke of 42 while Harvard started at about a 40 stroke and when the 200-yard point was reached the Ithacans were well in the lead

Harvard held on until the half mile was reached, where Cornell had lowered its stroke to 36, while Harvard was rowing 38. At the three quarter mark Cornell got open water, and from there on was never headed nor pushed

At the mile Harvard bothered a little because of bad water, but stuck to the same stroke. They let out a little at the mile and a half

Cornell dropped to 34 and at the two mile mark was two lengths to the good.

The Cornell men finished the race in good form, and rowed to their boathouse amid the deafening yelling of the crowd of 8,000 people on the banks of the lake, in boats and on the observation train.

The Harvard crew looked tired when it finished and Cutler at No. 7 was apparently distressed

The official time of [illegible] was Cornell, 10.59, H[illegible] 11.08 [illegible]

Walkaway For Freshies.

The freshman race proved a walkaway for the Cornell youngsters. They caught the water with [illegible] precision as their elders, and [illegible] quarter were drawing away from their powerfully built adversaries

They stroked [illegible] and maintained [illegible] swing until the finish, when [illegible] five lengths between the [illegible]

Harvard rowed [illegible] what Cornellians style the old English form with backs erect. There [illegible] noticeable check to the boat on the recovery

Cornell had the famous Courtney stroke and it showed to advantage in the varsity crew which moved like a huge machine The oarsmen did not [illegible] as straight, but their recovery [illegible] without a hitch, and the shell [illegible] as well as when the men were [illegible] hard

It was [illegible] of Harvard form against the Cornell pluck and the Courtney stroke and the latter won again

Cornell men said Harvard had a fine crew and should defeat Yale, as they rowed a harder race than at Carnegie Lake last week.

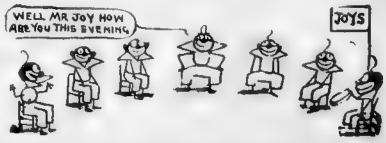
CORNELL, with three or four wonderful runners, captured the Intercollegiate track and field championships at the Stadium yesterday afternoon with a total of 30½ points, beating out the nearest rival, Yale, by just six points

The meet was one, the equal of which was never seen in the history of track athletics. Five records were broken, while three others were equalled,



WELL MR JOY HOW ARE YOU THIS EVENING
JOYS

It was a regular old time burnt cork show when the Cornell bunch broke loose

one of these records being a world's amateur mark in the mile run, the new mark established by J. P. Jones, a Cornell sophomore, being 4 minutes 15 2-5 seconds

This beat the world's former amateur time by one fifth of a second, and bettered the time made by W. C. Paull of Pennsylvania in the Intercollegiate held in the Stadium two years ago by two and two-fifths seconds.

It was a meet full of surprises and wonderful running. Pennsylvania had been chosen to capture the Intercollegiate title because of the great number of men she qualified Friday afternoon, and also because practically every one of these seemed certain of winning a place

That Florodora stuff was out loose when Jones came home with a world record in the mile

In any ordinary intercollegiate meet they certainly would have done what had been expected of them, but yesterday there cropped out such a remarkably fast group of runners that the Red and the Blue athletes were simply outclassed. It was not that Pennsy's men fell down, but rather that men from other colleges, particularly from Cornell, did far better than their fondest supporters had dared hope they would.

When John Paul Jones let out his speed wagon he made 'em look like the British did after his Revolutionary namesake hit 'em.

Cornell won the meet on the showing of her long distance men, especially Jones. Not only did he win the mile in record-breaking time, but he also

GIANTS WIN FIGHT FOR LEAD IN LEAGUE

NEW YORK, May 27.—Christy Mathewson and Earl Moore went to the mat in a pitchers' battle at the Hilltop this afternoon and a crowd that had the management thinking seriously about closing the gates saw [illegible] take the measure of the husky Philadelphians, 2 to 0.

Matty kept the Giants in first place by his work Friday and to-day he gave them a firmer hold on the position.

He was in superb form, holding the Dooin crowd in check throughout. While the Philadelphia star did not have the same terrors for the Giants that he experienced earlier in the season he pitched well. The Giants eked out their hits at the right time.

It was a quarrelsome affair from start to finish.

CASEY ON A BAT

BY WILLIAM F. KIRK.

OLD BLACK JOE

IT looked extremely rocky for the Boston team that day.
The score was one to nothing, with one inning left to play.
He hadn't any alibi when staggering through the gate.
So when he tore his necktie off and stepped upon his hat
The manager looked grim and said, "It's Casey on a bat."

"WELL," said the Boston manager, "with joy I ought to scream—
Here's Casey with a dandy load, the best man on the team.
He told me he was sober, but he couldn't quite get by
When he stepped upon his derby and was yanking off his tie.
A blooming championship at stake and Casey on a bat."

TWO Boston batters in the ninth were speedily retired.
"Here, Casey!" cried the manager, speaking as one inspired,
"Go in and bat for Grogan! There's a man on second base,
And if you hit the way you can we'll win the pennant race."
This is no knock on buttermilk, or anything like that,
But the winning hit was made that day by Casey on a bat.

TENNEY'S TEAM ALMOST WINS AND THAT HELPS

B. Brown was hardly responsible for the first two Brooklyn runs, which came in the second. With one down, Herzog threw Coulson's peculiar bounder to the first base stand and the sturdy right fielder reached second ahead of Tenney's return. Zimmerman then lifted a fly to short right. Doc Miller thought he had it, but he mistook the sun for the ball and the latter fell at his feet, allowing Coulson to score and Zimmerman to get to second.

Buster was an in and outer in the third. Stark singled and chased to third when the Boston pitcher heaved Barger's bounder wild past Sweeney. Then Mr. Brown braced and fanned both Wheat and McElveen, but Barger and Stark pulled off a delayed double steal for the third tally. The Rustlers grabbed one in the fourth, Herzog getting wounded by a pitched ball and then stealing second and third. His theft of the latter base surprised Erwin into throwing to left field, and Charles kept on going till he was across the plate.

Three of those queer bounders, all of which went for hits, and one clean single by Coulson added two to the Brooklyn total in the fifth. In Boston's part, three Dodgers mixed up on Graham's fly to short centre and it dropped to the ground for a single. Brown flied to Burch. Sweeney forced Peaches, stole second and came in on Tenney's safe poke over second.

Erwin Finished Brown's Career.

Tex Irwin finished "Buster" Brown's career in the Brooklyn's sixth by pulling a homer over the right field fence. Then George Tyler entered the ring and got his. Bell walked and three singles and a sacrifice followed for a total of three juicy runs, making four for the inning. Jeff Pfeffer was called in to finish it up and the Dodgers scored no more.

The Rustlers were seven tallies to the bad when their sixth turn arrived. Ingerton shoved a single through Zimmerman and tallied on one of Miller's doubles to left centre. Goode fanned and Steiny fouled to Erwin, but "Peaches" Graham produced a safe one to centre which brought "Doc" around. Jack Spratt, whom Hank O'Day didn't know from a bunch of asparagus, batted for Tyler and popped to McElveen.

Sweeney cracked open the Rustler seventh with a single and Tenney followed suit. Herzog again came across with a neat double over Stark. This counted Sweeney and persuaded B. Dahlen that it wasn't Bell's day. Rucker jumped in with two balls on Ingerton and then Scotty died, Zimmerman to Barger, while Tenney scored. Herzog was shot out at the plate on Miller's grounder to Stark. Goode hit safely and he and Miller pulled a double steal, but Steiny's best was a bounder to Rucker.

They Almost Won, But—

Graham was easy in the Rustler eighth. Pfeffer lifted a fly over Barger. Cy said he had it, but McElveen said the same thing and Cy withdrew his statement, only to find that Mac was not telling the truth, for the pill hit bottom and Jeff sprinted as far as second.

Sweeney was saved when Stark booted his ground hit. Tenney tried to hit into a double play, but McElveen, after tagging out Sweeney on the line, pegged low to first and the manager was safe, Pfeffer counting. Herzog still had another double in his bat and he let it out at this point, Tenney scoring. Ingerton fanned while the bugs begged him to lift it over the wall.

Miller's third safe one opened the ninth. Goode attempted to bunt and lifted a foul which Erwin bagged, and Steiny hit into an easy double play. Score:

YANKEES SPLIT UP ATHLETICS GAMES

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 27.—Philadelphia and New York split a double-header here to-day. In the opening game Eddie Plank was on the firing line for the Athletics, and held the Yanks in check throughout.

The Highlanders, with the great Russell Ford on the firing line, won the second game by the score of 8 to 3. Russell used his spit ball exclusively, and the champions could not connect when there were men on the bases.

Jack Coombs started to pitch for the champions, but he walked the first three men and hit another, while Knight belted him for a double and Gardner got a single in the opening inning.

"Lefty" Russell started in the second inning and he pitched a fair game of ball.

TIGERS TROUNCE THE LOWLY BROWNS

DETROIT, Mich., May 27.—Bailey was no puzzle to the Tigers to-day, while Lafitte was practically invincible, relaxing slightly only after his team had a big lead. Stephens collided with the grand stand and sprained an ankle in the fifth. The Browns tried out First Baseman Rowan, formerly of the Three I League—and he made a favorable impression. The Tigers introduced an infield shift that seemed to work well, O'Leary going to second and Delahanty moving to first.

Hickman's single with the bases filled produced the winning run. Wormwood and Howard had a great battle on the slab, and though the visiting southpaw was hit hard, he was given sterling support at critical stages.

ACCIDENT GIVES LYNN A VICTORY

NEW BEDFORD, May 27.—A collision ebtween Merrill and Snyder in the ninth inning, as a result of which Merrill was rendered unconscious, gave Lynn a victory over the "Whalers" to-day, 6 to 5. With two men down and Callahan on first, Strand lifted a fly between center and right fielder. Both Merrill and Snyder came tearing across for the ball, but before Merrill could effect the catch Snyder bowled him over. Both players lay prostrate on the ground and Strand and Callahan made the circuit.

Skeeters Beat Grays In Garrison Finish

WEST SIDE PARK, JERSEY CITY, N. J., May 27.—By a Garrison finish Jersey City came from behind in the seventh inning of to-day's game with Providence and, wiping out a margin of four runs, tied the game up with three bases on balls, a single and Tonneman's triple with the bases full.

Another charity by Sline to Dolan, a sacrifice, an infield out and a squeeze play by Dolan and Wheeler enabled the "Skeeters" to make it three straight over the "Grays."

Sline held the Jersey men to four hits but his passes proved fatal. Kissinger was hit freely in the fourth and fifth rounds, retiring when Tonneman was sent in to bat for him in the seventh and Batley finished up on the mound. Elston, Rock and Rondeau shared batting honors for Providence.

HOLY CROSS NINE IS VICTOR OVER HARVARD IN LOOSE GAME

BABSON IS HIT HARD

Final Count Is 4 to 1 in Favor of the Mt. St. James Collegians.

WORCESTER, May 27.—Holy Cross, by timely hitting, aided by loose playing on Harvard's part, had but little difficulty in defeating Harvard, 4 to 1, on Fitton Field this afternoon. Lynch, the freshman twirler, pitched a good game and was a mystery to the Cambridge boys, who scored their only run in the seventh, when, on a wild throw and passed ball of Gans, Clifford crossed the plate for the visitors.

Several times during the battle Harvard managed to get men on the bases and had good opportunities to score, but inability to connect with Lynch retired them.

Ostergren crossed the plate in the opening inning of the game for Holy Cross after being walked by Babson and advanced by Matthews, who also walked, and Kennedy's single to right.

Gans, after hitting a two-bagger in the next inning, scored as did Lynch, who also touched the sphere for two sacks, the former coming home on the latter's hit while the Holy Cross star twirler advanced to third on Cawley's fly to right and crossed the slab on Whalen's single.

Cawley scored the last run for the local collegians in the seventh while Coon was joking with Whalen off second.

BROWN WINS A 2-1 GAME FROM MICHIGAN

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 27.—In a game marked by clean and fast fielding. Brown defeated Michigan here this afternoon, 2 to 1. It was the first time that the Wolverines had visited Providence in more than a decade, and a big crowd turned out.

Conzelman, who pitched such a wonderful game against Columbia last Saturday, was again on the mound for the Brunonians, and the best the visitors could do was two hits. He fanned fifteen men and passed but one.

Ver Heyen, for Michigan, also twirled a strong game most of the time, but two hits, with an error by McMillan in the third, netted Brown two runs and the game. Michigan scored in the eighth on two hits and a passed ball.

E. Nash at short for Brown and Martin in the same position for the visitors gave fine exhibitions. The score.

Graham Nine Men in One

How 'Peaches' Won Out

Great Mystery [illegible] Solved by the Modest Confession of the Mighty Catcher of the Boston National Team

"PEACHES" GRAHAM.

It Was Once Upon a Time "Peaches" Made Nine Runs in an Inning—He Was Pitcher, Catcher and the Whole Field

By R. W. LARDNER

"YOU know," remarked the Sporting Editor, "we get out a Sunday paper once a week, so you needn't sit there doing nothing just because there's nothing in sight to do. There's a certain amount of space to fill and you're supposed to be one [illegible]. How [illegible] a column or so?"

With that, he turned away without giving the reporter a chance to reply. So the poor slave knew that it was up to him to make the perilous journey to the Rustlers' clubhouse again and run the risk of arousing the displeasure of one or more of the idols of the town. The necessary nickel was borrowed with no little difficulty, but the journey to Walpole street was [illegible].

As luck would have it, the only occupants of [illegible] aside from the proprietor were Messrs. Raridden and Graham, whom the reporter recognized [illegible] by their [illegible] attitude. The Raridden [illegible] tote, so it was to [illegible] that the reporter spoke first. But the result showed [illegible] the truth of [illegible] "Appearances are deceiving."

"What do you want, boy?" came from the lips of G. Graham, whose countenance now looked kindly by contrast with that of his brother [illegible] "Perhaps I can do something for you, if it isn't too hard and if you refrain from asking foolish questions. If you have come to find out how to catch, you're wasting your time. I'm a baseball team—do you get me? A BASEBALL TEAM."

I'm telling you why I [illegible]

"There he goes," remarked Mr. Raridden as he started out the door, while the reporter wondered how the other was sufficiently familiar with him to call him 'Bill.'

"That's what I am—a baseball team," reiterated Mr. Graham, and the reporter, anxious only to humor him, smiled and nodded sympathetically.

Catching Is Too Easy.

"I won't be interviewed on 'how to catch,'" the [illegible] continued. "That's just like trying to tell how to enjoy a sirloin steak—one's as simple as the other. But if you'll give me all your attention and not misquote me, I'll tell you how I became a baseball team and some of the things I did when I was one."

The reporter was cute enough to know that it was too late to stop now, so he produced a cigarette paper and prepared to take notes, and the nine ballplayers in one got the following out of his system:

"First and foremost, even you must have noticed that I am called 'Peaches,' not merely 'Peach.' Why? Because I'm plural. Ty Cobb is sometimes spoken of as the 'Georgia Peach,' but never as the 'Georgia Peaches.' That's because he's just a fielder and only one peach. I'm a [illegible] a pitcher, four fielders, three infielders, one [illegible] and [illegible] pinch batter. That's why I'm Peaches, a whole crop of them.

"I came from Persia in a balloon."

"I ought to speak of myself as 'we' and 'us,' but if I did, folks probably would call me conceited. I started playing professional [illegible] I was [illegible]. You know I was born in Persia and came to this country in one of the old fashioned balloons when I was a little over two. For the next year and a half I worked as a drummer on a street car selling transfers, but the pay was small—a little over $140 a week, and that was just about enough to keep me in collars.

"Our trolley line passed a ball park in Spring Valley, Ill., and it was there that I first saw the national pastime. The Spring Valley team used to play the Kewanee [illegible] every Saturday and two or three times on Sunday. There was great rivalry between the two towns and sometimes pools of as much as eighteen cents were up on the games.

How He Started Out.

"My entrance into the sport was the old story—one of the stars hurt and no one to take his place. I volunteered and played shortstop one day so much better than the star that they sent the latter to jail for thirty years.

"Well, it happened that there was a contagion of croup in Spring Valley that year and every ball player on the local team was taken with it except me. I had had my throat removed before I came across the ocean.

"How I first saw the national pastime."

"The manager was in an awful fix, or thought he was till I came to the rescue. He had all those games scheduled with Kewanee and had posted a forfeit of $2,300.40 to insure his playing them.

"That night the epidemic hit the town, he came to me and said:

"'Peach'—I was only one, then—'I'm up against it right. I've got some ball games booked and no players.'

"'Manager,' I answered, 'why do you say you have no players when I'm still here?'

"'But you can't play the whole game,' said he.

"'Try me and see,' said I, for in those days I had more confidence than money.

It Was Well Advertised.

"So the posters advertising the next day's game were left up, and when the hour for the battle arrived the park was crowded. Every fan present was a doctor, for all the rest of the people had croup. The Kewanee team came on the field joyously, for the players thought the series would be forfeited. You can imagine their astonishment when they saw me in uniform. Their astonishment turned to alarm when they witnessed the spectacle of one man going through fielding and batting practice and warming up to pitch besides.

"Perhaps batting practice was hardest for me to master because it came first. I hadn't yet worked up the full speed of my legs for running, so I had to pitch slow ones from the box so I could get to the plate in time to pick up a bat and hit at them. It didn't do to miss any swings or foul off any, for that meant I had to run back to the grand stand [illegible] myself out.

It Took Some Practice.

"I was so [illegible] the bell rang [illegible] it was simple [illegible] or a fly and [illegible] run to one [illegible] or another and [illegible] it. I completed [illegible] preparations by [illegible] as catcher, warming up to [illegible] pitcher and [illegible] the [illegible] warming up.

"The game [illegible] played on the Spring Valley grounds [illegible] Kewanee team [illegible] first to bat. I [illegible] loose two fast [illegible] at the first hitter [illegible] missed them, but [illegible]. The effort of getting [illegible] catcher's position [illegible] wearing and I knew [illegible] So [illegible] a [illegible] new delivery which [illegible]. It was the [illegible] knuckling action. When [illegible] wasn't hit, it came right back [illegible].

"You can't [illegible] that [illegible] was a great saving of energy [illegible] use [illegible] else [illegible] to deceive [illegible] six or seven times an inning.

Batters Were Helpless

"The Kewanee hitters were helpless before me for eight innings. [illegible] I had been unable to score a run [illegible] hit and run play was my [illegible] you must know it was hard to accomplish it. I had to start from [illegible] second, or from second [illegible] while the pitcher was winding [illegible] the same time dash for the [illegible] I would be on hand when [illegible] up to the plate.

"The result was that I couldn't get set to swing. Several times I missed connections at the plate and the catcher would throw me out at some base or other because I had been obliged to stop short in my journey on the base lines to return to bat.

"So the count was 0 to 0 when the ninth inning came. In Kewanee's half my real troubles started, for the opponents began to bunt. It took me by surprise and [illegible]

[illegible] to spell the [illegible]. I finally did [illegible] mastering the [illegible] delivery [illegible] forced batsmen [illegible] hit little flies.

"I wasn't feeling exactly gay when [illegible] finally got the [illegible] retired and we [illegible] to try to over[illegible] of the [illegible] of the team had [illegible] I had to win or 'get a pound of go-to-jail.' [illegible] on the result and I knew I was as good as dead if I failed him in this crisis.

"Did I Get 'Em? You Bet!"

"Did I get the nine tallies? Yes, I did, and not by hitting nine home runs over the fence, either, although I could tell you I did that and get away with it. I beat Kewanee at its own game. I began to bunt.

"First I laid down a perfect one and easily beat it out. Then I bunted another and sped for first, yelling at the top of my voice: 'Second base, second base.'

"The pitcher, who picked up the ball, turned to throw to second, but no runner was trying for that bag. Then he started to throw to first. I immediately changed my course and started for second. He did finally throw to first, and the first baseman made the catch just as I landed at second.

"[illegible] I asked.

"'You are,' was the [illegible].

"'When [illegible] why am I out?' said I.

"'At first base because the ball got there before you did,' said they.

"'How do you figure that?' said I. 'I left first [illegible] as soon as the succeeding batter bunted and here I am safe at second. Nobody tried to get to first, so there was no play there.'

"Well, the umpire and the Kewanee players finally had to admit the force of my argument. The game went on [illegible] on the next bunt the pitcher unhesitatingly threw to third. I dashed to first and [illegible] no effort was made to stop me. Thus the bases were filled and the rest was simple so long as I could keep the ball on the ground.

"I succeeded beyond my wildest dreams. All I had to do then was lay down nine straight bunts and just touch the plate with my foot after each one, thus scoring one tally at a time until I had nine.

"The Kewanee boys were a pretty sick looking lot when it was all over. But the Spring Valley owner was tickled to death and that night, on the way home, he took a crisp dollar bill out of his pocket and handed it to me. 'This is a loan,' he said, 'but there'll be no interest.'

Little Remains to Be Said.

"There isn't much left to tell. I beat them three more games and then they quit coming. Finally it got so bad that no team would play at Spring Valley unless I left town. So I left and since then I have been forced to play only one position at a time, which, as you may imagine, is pretty tame sport."

Mr. Graham paid no heed.

"Yes, sir, I have played first, second, third, fourth and fifth and all the outfield positions, and I have pitched and caught."

"And what do you like best to do, Mr. Graham?" asked the reporter.

"Smoke a [illegible]" said they.

Fate of This Ball Team In Hands of Girl Fans

BROCKTON, May 27.—Because the girls, which comprise the larger part of the student body at the High School, have not attended the ball games this season, the financial condition of the team is in a deplorable state.

Athletic Advisor Merlet Getchell has issued a plea to the young ladies and the fate of the team lies in their hands.

If the girls go to the games, the team will be allowed to go on, otherwise it will have to disband because of lack of funds.

HAPPY NEWSBOYS TOO MUCH FOR AVENUES

Yesterday afternoon the speedy Happy Newsboys proved that they are as game a bunch of amateur ball tossers as are at the present playing the great national game on the back lots of Boston. They also showed several hundred fans of the fair city of Everett what nine real live news merchants can do in the line of bringing home the bacon on the diamond when all signs point to almost certain defeat.

Yesterday the Happy Newsboys triumphed over the Avenue A. A. by a score of 8 to 6 on the Everett High School grounds. But in winning, the newsies were compelled to play the best ball that they were capable of. In the first inning the Everett bunch got the jump on Happy's boys, they scoring five runs in this chapter.

In the second inning the newsies scored one run. But in the third they showed the stuff that they were made of when by the heaviest kind of stick work they sent four runners scampering across the counting station. In the seventh they added two more runs to their total, while in the eighth stanza they again tallied. The Avenue A. A. scored their final run in the eighth inning. The score:

Desperate Desmond

YOU CUR! I WILL NEVER MARRY YOU DESMOND, I LOVE ONLY CLAUDE ECLAIRE

THIS SNOW WILL EXTINGUISH THE FLAMES AND THEN WE CAN RESUME OUR KILLING OF ROSAMOND
CURSES WE HAVE STARTED AN AVALANCHE
MY HERO
HERSHFIELD

When a lady refuses to marry a gentleman the latter may, with perfect propriety, go and jump off a dock, but he should never under any circumstances leave the lady to freeze to death on a snow-clad mountain-top. But as Desperate Desmond is no gentleman, the rule does not apply to him. He doesn't care a hoot for etiquette.

If Gomgotz had known before he started on this expedition that they were going to visit the region of eternal snow, he would have brought his fur coat with him, if he had a fur coat. But as he didn't know about it and didn't have a fur coat, anyway, the best he can do is to start a fire in Desmond's portable oil stove.

Being a simple, untutored child of the jungle, Gomgotz is not familiar with the refinements of civilization, such as gasoline stoves. He finds that starting a fire is one thing, while keeping it under control is quite another. To make a long story short, he sets the whole bloomin' aeroplane on fire and gets in Dutch with Desmond.

There is only one way for Desmond to save himself and his pal from being roasted alive in mid air, and that is to plunge the machine into the snow. As the aeroplane is now out of commission, the two wicked conspirators are left in the same predicament as their innocent victim. It serves them right, but that doesn't help Rosamond.

But when the aeroplane hits the snow bank it starts an avalanche. An avalanche, dear reader, is a large quantity of snow moving with great velocity down a precipitous mountain side and sweeping everything before it. Thus it happens that Desmond, Gomgotz and Rosamond are carried down to where our brave hero awaits his sweetheart's return.

Claude [illegible] friends with him, too, and the [illegible] the villain and his pal while [illegible] Rosamond to his heart. The dear girl gives him all the credit for saving her life, though you and we know that he had nothing to do with it. [illegible] we will not undeceive her. [illegible] pictures will show how [illegible] even with Desmond.

ANOTHER CORNELL VICTORY ON WATER

Ithacan Junior Eight Noses Out Navy Crew by Inches In Thrilling "Henley" Race.

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—The junior eight-oared shell of Cornell University beat the United States Naval Academy junior crew by barely a foot in one of the most thrilling finishes ever seen in a collegiate race at the American Rowing Association regatta on the Schuylkill River this afternoon. The Ithaca lads won by almost the narrowest margin it is possible to win with. The Yale junior crew was third and Harvard fourth. The University of Pennsylvania Juniors were last.

All five crews finished close. The first boat beat Penn by not more than six lengths, while Yale and Harvard had a pretty start for third and fourth place. All five crews got away to a pretty start, but the superiority of the lads from Ithaca and Chesapeake Bay soon began to tell. Gradually the other three crews fell behind.

Then Penn began to lose a little and then Harvard and Yale. Cornell increased the stroke and halfway down the course were a clean length ahead of the Middies. At the head of Peters Island the navy stroke oar hit a new burst of speed. Like automatons the eight flashing oars rose and fell and gradually the gray jerseyed boys cut down the lead. The prow of the navy boat came up even with the stroke oar of the Cornell boat, then up to number seven, then six, then five. With the finish scarcely three lengths away, the Middies caught up with number four, nosed ahead of three, passed two, and then the head of the Cornell boat oar, but the spurt had come an instant too late. Scarcely a foot behind, the line was crossed and Cornell had won.

Columbia Wins.

Another good race was the one between Columbia University, the Naval Academy and the Wahnetah Boat Club of New York. It was the second time that Columbia and the Middies had met and as in the previous meeting, Columbia won. It was a close struggle between the New York collegians and the Navy boys, but Columbia was always ahead and finished well within themselves and with a length of open water. In this race the Harvard crew withdrew.

The eight-oar "Plebe" crew of the Naval Academy at Annapolis won the fourth event. The navy crew got away at the start for a small lead and were never headed. The Columbia University freshmen lost by only a half length. The University of Penn was a bad third.

By a fine spurt the first double-scull crew of the West Philadelphia Boat Club nosed out the crew of the University Barge Club in the second event. The Yale Boat Club second scull crew was a poor third, being out-distanced early in the race.

The seasoned veterans of the Philadelphia Barge Club walked away with the University of Pennsylvania second four-shell in the first race, the college boys getting a false start. The third event proved easy for the Arundels, who finished with three clear lengths of water between them and the University of Pennsylvania first crew.

Two members of the University first club, Edward F. Hoffman, Jr., and Lindley Johnson, Jr., fought out the first single scull race, Hoffman winning by two and a half lengths.

Union Crew Is First.

The Union Boat Club of Boston, a new comer in Schuylkill waters, defeated the Malta Boat Club of Philadelphia in the inter-club eight-oar race.

The Union Club crew passed the Philadelphia men and took the lead with the shot of the pistol. They finished a length and a half ahead.

"Inside" of Rustler Row

Russell Tells 'Who's Who'

"There Was Interference Enough With Tenney To Move the Umpire to Call Us All Out."

"MY closest friend," said President Russell of the Boston Nationals, "is William Hepburn Russell, and he wants to tell you a little about his side of the controversy that has been raging in the public prints."

Whereupon Mr. Russell took the witness chair in his own defence yesterday. The chair was a big, comfortable looking one in the club's downtown office, and the witness got ready to annihilate an innocent looking cigar before he proceeded.

"Mr. Page's 'closest friend,'" he continued, "consumed about two columns of space the other day in telling the public that the vice-president never had interfered with Manager Tenney, that he and Manager Tenney had pulled off the deal which brought Ingerton and Pfeffer here in exchange for Shean, that——, but what's the use of recounting all the State's evidence when the jury already has heard it? I will proceed to do a little rebutting.

"No interference with Manager Tenney? Well, believe me——" and he apologized for the use of the term, "there has been interference, enough of it to move an umpire to call the whole side out.

"Is it interference when the manager is told that he is expected to keep a ball player he doesn't want and to use him regularly at second or first base? Do you get that part—first base?

"In other words, you must hang onto this man Shean, Mr. Tenney, and play him where he has been playing or give him your own position, which you haven't played long enough to know anything about.

Interference? Well!

"No, that isn't interference. Of course, Mr. Tenney, if you can make an advantageous deal for this athlete, trade him for Sherwood Magee, Hans Lobert, Earl Moore, Otto Knabe and Horace Fogel, well and good. Perhaps you can catch Red Dooin some time when his mind is wandering. Red doesn't know anything about trading.

"But let Mr. Russell's closest friend give you the real history of that Shean deal. Manager Tenney didn't want Dave. He thought second base was the weakest spot in last year's team, or one of the weakest, and he set about to strengthen it. It was his belief that Herzog belonged at shortstop and that Bill Sweeney would fill in very acceptably at second. This left third base open.

"Manager Tenney had watched Shafer closely at New York and was convinced he would be a star if he were given a regular place.

"Now, we come to the 'gold brick' part. The vice-president, according to his closest friend, blocked the deal because he had information that McGraw was trying to hand Tenney a lemon, inasmuch as there was little or no likihood that Shafer would consent to the deal or play ball with Boston.

"It happens that Mr. Tenney did have correspondence with Shafer. The player wanted to know if he would be played regularly at Boston and said he wouldn't come here if it was the intention to use him as utility man. But listen. There was no chance for a gold brick game, for the simple reason that there was a contract to guard against it."

Was That a Gold Brick?

"You see Exhibit Q shows that McGraw would be obliged to call off the deal if it didn't satisfy us by May 15. Shafer, under the terms of this contract, might have come here and hit .953 for the first month of the season, might have then made up his mind to go to South Africa after diamonds, and still we would have been ahead on the deal, for we could have had Shean back for absolutely nothing. If that sort of an arrangement is a gold brick, I wish a whole lot of big city sharpes would take me for a farmer and sell some more of their goods to me.

"We're not yet through with Shean. The suggestion from the non-interfering gentleman is to trade him to Philadelphia, which already had passed him up, for Lobert or Knabe, neither of whom you could pry away from Dooin despite their German ancestry, or else hang onto him and play him regularly at second or FIRST BASE.

"Here's a secret, something we discovered during the Winter of turmoil and strife: Every suggestion made by Manager Tenney or myself, good, bad or indifferent, was handed a haymaker by the closest friend's closest friend. Having made this discovery, and still being anxious to rid ourselves of Dave Shean, we set about it in a foolish manner, like foxes.

"You must permit me to go back into ancient history. While Manager Tenney was attending the National League meeting in New York last December, and while Mr. Harris was still president of the club, Charley Murphy, owner of the Cubs, began talking about Scotty Ingerton, his large batting average and his larger reputation. Later on, in January, Mr. Murphy again boosted Scotty to Mr. Tenney.

"Well, in February, the manager came to me and said he could probably trade Shean to Chicago for Ingerton and Ball, a promising young outfielder. At the same time he remarked that he would like to have Frank Pfeffer, because he might 'come back' as a pitcher, but would surely be valuable anyhow, because he could fill in as an outfielder or pinch hitter.

"The plot thickens. I called Manager Tenney by his first name: 'Fred,' said I, 'I believe this deal would be a good one, but there's only one way we can pull it. Let me get out of town, and then you go to the other side of the house and put it through behind my back.'

"So I hopped a train for New York, N. Y., and the manager visited the vice-president. He told him he would like to ship Shean to the Cubs for Ingerton and Ball and the vice-president suggested Pfeffer as a substitute for Ball. Thus was the proposition sent to Chicago and accepted, with my approval."

"Oh, yes, there's that Yale-Lynn controversy. Now, those Lynn people were just anxious enough to have us play there to threaten an appeal to the ruling powers of baseball if we broke our date, and such action would mean a fat little fine for our ball club, inasmuch as the engagement had been made in perfectly good faith by Manager Tenney.

"Mr. Page booked a game at New Haven on the same day, and we couldn't very well take care of both to the satisfaction of both, because we didn't have two first teams, it being our highest ambition to develop one—just one. We compromised with Lynn by sending our seconds there and giving them a first team date later in the season.

"And the crowd at New Haven was a pretty big one. The trouble was that it was just like the crowds that get up early to see a circus unload; it costs them nothing. I think we got about $250, and that wouldn't have paid our Lynn fine, if there had been one.

"As for this New York office, I am reliably informed, or reliably am informed, or am informed reliably, that I can have it there or in Sandwich, Illinois, if I want to.

"I am not much on traveling and for that reason I'm glad matters have been so arranged that Manager Tenney can make trades and purchases and sales without conventions, primaries or coronation ceremonies. Otherwise, I would have to go to Bermuda every time there was a chance to pull off a player deal or said deal would be blocked.

"Before I leave the subject of deals, I want to say that some are pending right now which are bound to strengthen our club. Another secret—I think the Steinfeldt deal would have been knocked in the head if it had been possible.

"And pray, what has 'Mr. Russell's breaching of his contract' got to do with all those straight defeats? Oh, yes, I see. Mr. Page, if he had been let alone, would have taken a turn as pitcher or would have gone to bat in the pinches and thus turned grief to joy. I hadn't thought of that."

COLLINS AFTER MORAN.

Two Cyclers May Be Booked for Revere Beach Track.

Elmer Collins, champion motor pace follower, is seriously thinking of taking a trip abroad and competing on the French and German tracks. The success of Jimmy Moran, the Chelsea milkman, who has been sweeping everything before him, has made Collins envious.

Elmer figures that if Moran can take the measure of the foreign cyclists, he should have little trouble in doing so, as he has defeated Moran time and again. Then again, Elmer is anxious to take another fall out of Jimmy, for Moran has always claimed that he was in poor condition claimed that he was in poor condition when defeated by Collins, and now Moran is riding in his old-time form.

In order to get a match with Moran, it is necessary for Collins to go across the pond as Moran has written to friends in this city that he will not be seen on an American track this season. Collins will, in all probability, leave for the other side in a week or two. If he defeats Wiley and Root next Tuesday at the Revere cycle track, he will get into communication with the manager of the Velodrome, Paris, which is the principal track in Europe.

Nat Butler, manager of the Revere cycle track, however, says there will be no need of Collins going abroad as he expects to have Moran's name attached to a contract calling for a series of races at the Beach track inside of the next two weeks.

In addition to the 25-mile motor pace race, Tuesday, Manager Butler has arranged a special match race, best two in three heats, between Willie Fenn and Alfred Goulette. This will be the first appearance of Fenn in this city for years. At one time Fenn was looked upon as the king of the sprinters.

TWO RUNNERS DROP OUT.

FITCHBURG, Mass., May 27.—Kallie Nieminen, the champion runner of Brooklyn, N. Y., easily defeated Thure Johnanson of Sweden, holder of the world's record for indoor Marathon running, and Tal Crook of Fall River in a 12-mile run at the Fitchburg Driving Park this afternoon. The race should have been for 20 miles, but Nieminen had such a lead over the other two men that they dropped out before the race was finished. Crook dropped out of the race after circling the track twelve times for six miles. Johnanson covered eleven miles before he retired.

Nieminen's time was 1 hour 10 minutes and 35 seconds.

WOLGAST WINNER OVER FRANK BURNS

ROUND 8—Burns landed a light left to the nose. Wolgast staggered Burns with a right on the jaw. Wolgast swung into Frankie's ribs and half turned him around. Wolgast then put two hard rights to the kidneys when they went into a clinch. Wolgast went after Burns like a tiger, forcing him to the ropes. Wolgast shook Burns with a hard left to the jaw. Burns swung a wild left and Wolgast laughed. Burns is apparently weakening.

ROUND 10—Wolgast put a light left to Burns's jaw and Burns put a right to the body. In a clinch Wolgast put a right to kidneys and forced Burns back into his crouch with a right uppercut. Burns landed a right to the body which nearly took Wolgast off his feet. With their arms locked they went around the ring until the referee told them to break. Wolgast got in a left uppercut to the mouth and a left swing to the jaw and another to the nose. Burns went to a clinch and hung on. Wolgast drove Burns's head back with a hard right as the bell sounded.

ROUND 11—Wolgast rushed over to Burns and went into a clinch. Wolgast landed a series of blows in the kidneys and then backed away and lifted Frank off his feet with a short uppercut, half wrestling. The only blow landed was a kidney punch by the champion. Wolgast continued to use his left and right and soon made Burns cover up. Coming out of a clinch Burns went after Wolgast and the men fought like demons. Burns forced Wolgast to break ground and the bell rang.

ROUND 12—They clinched in the centre of the ring, Burns getting in light rights on the kidneys. Burns showed a little burst of speed and landed left on head and right on the body. Wolgast rushed Burns to the ropes where Burns was pushed partly through. Wolgast slipped to his knees, and when he got up Burns went after him like a wild man, landing several blows to the face. Breaking from a clinch they both landed lefts, and then Wolgast landed a hard left to the face, forcing Burns to hold on. They were in a clinch at the bell.

ROUND 13—They met in the centre of the ring. Burns looked fresh and advanced toward his opponent with his head up. Wolgast made a wild swing which missed by a foot and Frankie backed away as Wolgast tried to get a right over on the head. As they broke from a clinch Wolgast put in a right uppercut and Burns backed away. Burns came back with a left on the nose and the crowd shouted for Burns to outbox him. Wolgast tried to land his right on Burns' body, but Frankie boxed in masterly fashion. As the bell rang they were in a clinch.

ROUND 14—Burns jumped to the centre and Wolgast backed him to the ropes with left and right uppercuts. Burns came back and jabbed two lefts to the body. Both swung rights and both landed the blows, carrying about the same amount of steam. Ad tried to rush but Burns stood his ground. Burns got out of a tight place and held his own by clever boxing. Wolgast worked hard for the finishing punch and was after him like a wild man when the bell sounded.

ROUND 15—Wolgast lost no time in going to his man in the first ten seconds of the round and had Burns' head going back with snappy rights. Wolgast got in two uppercuts. Burns backed away from two vicious rights. Wolgast backed Burns to a corner and slammed away at his head with both hands, swinging Burns around with a right to the head. Wolgast backed around Burns and kept chopping him with both hands.

ROUND 16—Wolgast went after his man at the sound of the gong, landing a light left to the jaw. They went to a clinch and wrestled around the ring. Wolgast finally straightened up and swung a right to Burns' neck. Burns jabbed Wolgast with his left and Wolgast came back with a hard right which caught Frankie on the cheek. Wolgast then backed to the ropes and waited for Burns to come to him. When he did Ad met him with a rush of blows to the face that clearly distressed him. In the center of the ring Wolgast went after Burns like a wildcat and hammered him all over the ring. Wolgast backed him to a corner, landing rights and lefts. Burns stood like a dazed man while Wolgast hammered him at will. Burns dropped his guard but before Wolgast could finish him the bell sounded. It was remarkable that Burns stayed on his feet. Burns was entirely [illegible] and as he sat down his seconds threw up the sponge. The referee gave the decision to Wolgast just as the gong sounded for the seventeenth round.

Brockton Golf.

BROCKTON, May 27.—The greatest golf ever played in a match in this city and in this section of the State was played at the Brockton Country Club this afternoon when Leon J. Hazelton, in a match with W. T. Stall, did the course in 34 and 38, totaling 72, and beating bogey four strokes. Bogey is 78 and Hazelton's performance is considered nothing short of marvelous. With all this good playing Hazelton lost the match, as Stall had a big handicap with his 81.

CLOSING DAY AT THE WOODLAND GOLF MEET

F. X. Barr Leads Large Field With 6 Up, Packard Has a 5 Up on "Colonel" Bogie.

There were 78 golfers in attendance at Woodland yesterday in the closing event of the three-day Spring meeting, a handicap vs. Bogey.

F. X. Barr led the field with 6 up while George Packard was a close second with 5 up on the redoubtable "Colonel." No less than 10 players were up on bogey and 8 more returned cards that showed they were on even terms. This shows the high class golf that was played by a large part of the field, of which 50 returned scores, while 28 evidently had trouble and handed in "no cards."

He pluckily resumed the race with a borrowed sulky and lost to McDonald in two heats by a nose each.

There were seven [illegible], all very interesting, especially [illegible] A event, a three horse race [illegible] Cracker Boy, W. H. Young's horse driven by A. S. Gushee winning [illegible] after six hard heats over E. F. Powers.

SHRUBB'S LEG IMPROVING.

Alfred Shrubb, the famous English distance runner who underwent an operation last Tuesday for an injury to his leg, is convalescing at the home of friends at No. 187 Hamilton street, Dorchester. Dr. John M. Kelly, of No. 182 Bowdoin street is attending the athlete, and he expects that Shrubb will be able to be about within ten days.

COLLEGE RECORDS GO TO SMASH IN GREATEST ATHLETIC MEET IN AMATEUR SPORTING HISTORY

took the half mile run, breaking a record which has stood the test of the flower of American runners for six years, and he broke it not by any narrow margin, but one and one-fifth seconds.

Yale secured second place because of the unexpectedly good showing of Holden in the broad jump, which he won, and of Child's good work in the hammer throw, the Eli winning fourth place in this event. Gardner, the pole vaulter, did what was expected he would—break the record—but a gentleman named Babcock of Columbia came to the front, and not only tied Gardner's new mark, but proceded to set up a new Intercollegiate record with a vault of 12 feet 8⅝ inches, which even Gardner could not equal, and Columbia won a first place in the big meet for the first time in many years.

Michigan Comes to the Front.

Michigan came to the front stronger than had been expected. Craig had been looked to to win both of the dashes, and he did this with vengeance, tying the intercollegiate records in both of these with [illegible]. Horner broke the record in the [illegible] put as had been predicted of him with a heave of 46 feet 7⅛ inches, after having broken the record once before in the afternoon by a quarter of an inch.

But the place that Michigan came to the front unexpectedly was in the mile and quarter mile runs. Hanavan, the Wolverine miler, proved too much for Paull of Pennsylvania, the holder of the former record, and won out after a game struggle in second place. This gave Michigan a point more than she had looked for.

Again in the quarter Michigan had not been reckoned with at all, but Gamble and Haff took third and fourth places respectively in one of the fastest quarters that has ever been or ever will be run in the Stadium. This made three more points for the westerners.

Haimbaugh, the two-miler, didn't look better than a fourth in this race, but he slipped into third by a beautiful exhibition of form and pluck and to cap the climax, Ross took fourth in the 220-yards dash, shutting out the once great sprinter, Captain Minds of Pennsylvania.

Jones the Greatest of Them All.

John Paul Jones of Cornell, was the shining light of the greatest meet of the age. His running in the mile was an eye opener to track folowers, for he trotted along so easily and in such beautiful form that no one guessed that he had set a new mark for the amateur world in this event until the time was announced.

At the beginning of the mile he took it easy and followed along in fifth place for the first lap, which was run in the fast time of 59 3-5 seconds. After passing the one lap mark he strode out a bit and swung into first place and from that point on he was never headed. Halfway around the fourth lap he let out and simply walked away from his rivals, going faster and faster until he had crossed the finish line in the fastest time ever made by an amateur. The race, from the advance view point of the spectators, lay between Paull of Penn, the former champion, and Hanavan of Michigan, whom no one had expected would be able to defeat Paull. Hanavan had been underestimated.

When Jones let out on the last lap Kanavan did the same, and gradually drew away from Paull until on the last turn he was ten yards in the lead, Lawless of Harvard following him some twenty yards in the rear.

It was at the last turn that Paull made his final effort to overhaul the fleet Wolverine. Paull gave his last ounce of strength, and to many it seemed as though he had caught his rival at the tape, so fast did he overtake him, but the Michigan won out by a couple of feet, and the [illegible] while champion was decisively defeated. Lawless of Harvard finished a fourth in this event, beating all other followers to the tape by fifty yards.

An hour and twenty minutes after the mile run the competitors for the half mile were called together at the start of the quarter. When it was announced that Jones of Cornell was to run this after breaking the record in the mile [illegible] ones shook their heads, but [illegible] know what the Cornell champion had in him.

He ran fourth all the way around the first lap of the half, and the same easy swinging stride which he had shown in the mile was still in evidence.

Just before the last turn was made he had crept up to the front, and as the group of runners tore around the curve he swung full in the lead and raced down the straightaway to the tape at a terrific speed. His teammate, Putnam [illegible] forward and Paull who was also [illegible] [illegible] this race was passed.

Jones's wonderful [illegible] first [illegible] this last few yards landed him in the lead by a bare three yards' lead over his fellow-countryman, Putnam, while Jaques of Harvard was a close third and Bodley of Pennsy a good fourth.

Here again Jones had run so easily that the time was not suspected, and when it was announced he had broken the collegiate record, running the half in 1 minute, 54 1-5 seconds, a great cheer went up and he was acclaimed as the greatest runner the world has ever seen. He seemed not the least fatigued and walked off the field smiling and happy.

Craig of Michigan was undoubtedly next man on the roll of honor yesterday, his feat of tying both the records in the hundred and two hundred yards dashes being a wonderful stunt. The time of 9 4-5 seconds made by Wefers of Georgetown in 1898 has not been equalled in the intercollegiate meets since then, and for one man to equal both of Wefers' marks meant much in the world of sports.

Craig's running was remarkable in both heats of the hundred he got a [illegible] start and for that matter he is [illegible] a slow starter anyhow. At the fifty yard mark he was the last man of the [illegible] fighting for the race, but from that time on his terrific stride carried him past his rivals like a shot and landed him the winner of the race by a good two yards in one of the greatest bursts of speed ever seen in such a race.

> *New world's amateur records.

Ordinarily the fast man in this event is the fast starter. Craig overcame his deficiency by the rapidity with which he gathered speed towards the end of the race. In both the century dashes in which he ran yesterday, it seemed certain that he would be beaten, but he wasn't, for he proved himself the greatest sprinter of the age.

In the 220-yard dash he showed himself the greatest runner the world has ever seen in this event, no one excepted. In the finals of this run he entered the Stadium fully ten yards ahead of his nearest rival and from that point on he had it all his own way, taking his time to the finish. Even by running easily and frequently looking back to see where the other men in the race were, he was able to equal his and Wefer's record. What would this wonder have done had he been pushed?

Not for the past eight years have conditions been more favorable for a meet of this kind. The track had been softened the day previous by a light rain, and the sun of yesterday packed it down into wonderful shape and everything favored fast times. There was the slightest breeze blowing at the backs of the sprinters, but not enough to create any doubt in the minds of the judges about allowing records, and the crowd which collected in the Stadium to the number of fully 15,000 was the largest in years and could hardly have been more appreciative of the great performances done by the competitors.

First Record to Go.

The first record to go was in the shot-put, when on his first heave Joe Horner, the captain of the great Michigan team, put the weight 46 feet 5¾ inches, beating the former mark made by Krueger of Swarthmore in 1907 by a quarter of an inch. On his third try, however, he broke his own record with a put of 46 feet 7⅛ inches, which goes down as a record. It hardly seemed possible that the little chap from Michigan could be the holder of the intercollegiate record, for he is not a very tall chap, but his physique otherwise tells the story.

Just after Horner's performance his teammate, Craig, equalled the record in the [illegible] in the semi-final heat, and it was [illegible] there wasn't [illegible] who could beat him.

The [illegible] record to go by the boards was [illegible], which has been [illegible] of, and shortly after that Berna, the best two-miler from Moakley's camp, broke the two-mile record of the Intercollegiate Association and also his own mark, which was slightly more than a second more. The new record set by him was 9 minutes 25 1-5 seconds, beating by 2 2-5 seconds the old mark made by Taylor of Cornell in a heart-breaking race in the Stadium in 1909.

Berna [illegible] the field practically all the way and did not go to the trouble of [illegible] set the pace for him. At [illegible] fourth lap he broke into [illegible] and led alone like a young [illegible] bronze locks shining out bright in the sun light. From that point on he was never headed.

Behind him during these last four laps, Withington of Harvard, Haimbaugh of Michigan and Newton of Williams, scrapped it out continuously for position. But Berna just plugged along with a free [illegible] stride and galloped across in the [illegible] strong and fresh with a new [illegible] credit. Here again the [illegible] the other honors were hard [illegible] the next three men.

New Man in the Limelight.

In [illegible] a man who was practically unnoticed until yesterday sprang into prominence. This man was F. I. Newton of Williams. He had paced the crowd for some distance during the first part of the race and everyone thought, of course, that, being more or less unheard of, he would fade away toward the end.

But they reckoned with the wrong man. The faster the pace got toward the end, the faster travelled Mr. Newton. At the [illegible] turn, just in the bowl of [illegible], Haimbaugh and Withington [illegible] to pass him, but there was nothing doing. He lengthened out his stride and sped away.

Despite the fact that he had run a very hard race and had borne the brunt of pace making for some distance he did not lose his stride or freedom of the upper swing of his body. He had enough endurance left in him to simply beat it out and come across with the second place, being an easy victor over Haimbaugh of Michigan, who in turn easily beat out Withington of Harvard, who was tuckered out at the finish.

Every one of the men who were placed in this event did what had been expected of them, with the exception of Newton, and he did more than anyone had thought he could possibly do, for he, too, was easily within the old record and can be hailed as a record breaker.

The next and fourth record to go was in the half mile, made by Jones of Cornell, and then came the record in the pole vault.

Babcock of Columbia had been figured upon as a possibility for a place perhaps, but not much better than fourth. Apparently they have a way of keeping things dark down in Gotham for no one ever heard of this man going as high as even Gardner of Yale before, and it was generally conceded that the latter would win the event in a walk, although probably breaking the record in doing so.

When Gardner cleared the bar in breaking the record, he was hailed by the Yale supporters and everyone else as the man of the hour. Babcock was not even considered.

When the latter came across and cleared the height there was much excitement. Then the bar was raised three inches. Gardner tried three times but failed. There wasn't a man in the Stadium who wouldn't have given you odds that Babcock would fail, but on the last try he sailed up in the air and went over the bar with a couple of inches to spare, setting up a new record and one which bids fair to stand for many a moon. Above all others he was a "dark horse" in the meet.

A Great Group of Stars.

Never before and perhaps never again will there assemble on any athletic field in an intercollegiate meet such a group of star athletes. The wrecking and equalling of records yesterday is sufficient to prove this. It was a significant fact that in every straight running race the records were either broken or equalled.

Four years ago in the Stadium, when five marks were bettered, the meet was regarded as a wonderful affair, but the men who bettered these marks yesterday did even a greater thing, for they established new times and distances in events which it seemed impossible to do this. It will be many a long year before any of these new marks are bettered, unless, of course, Jones shows still better form next year, although it seems well nigh impossible that he should run better than he did yesterday. The human body hardly seems capable of doing more than he made his [illegible].

Chisholm of Yale and his performances in the hurdles deserve some word of praise. These were his last races in college and he exerted his last bit of strength to do himself justice in them and he did. In both the high and low hurdles he showed by his wonderful form and easy taking of the flights that he had no peer this year in these events, and in each race he won easily in fast time. He showed up much better in the low hurdles in which he lead by five yards at the finish after running one of the prettiest races ever seen in the Stadium.

Harvard's poor showing was a great surprise and disappointment to her supporters. Kelley had been expected to place in the quarter, but although he ran under fifty seconds he was outclassed, as was also Captain McArthur of Cornell, who had been looked upon as a sure winner.

Young of Amherst, who took third in this event last year, simply walked away with the race, running in great form while the other men were different runners from what they appeared to be in the trials on Friday.

Lewis of Harvard was easily outclassed in the high hurdles in which he won points last year, the pace being too fast for him, while Cummings had been looked to for at least a second in the low hurdles, but Stibolt of Cornell outdid himself and beat him to the tape on the last few yards.

The performance of Murden in the hammer throw enabled Dartmouth to take fourth place, Tilley winning the event with a fair throw, but the work of the men in this event was below the standard of the meet yesterday, as was also the jumping in the broad jump.

The work of Dalrymple in the high was a pleasing feature of the meet, and his tying with the two Pennsy jumpers, Burdick and Farrier at six feet was a good performance and gave "Tech" the only points she scored.

THRILLING RACES SEEN BY BIG STADIUM CROWD

The first race was the semi-finals of the 100. Craig won his heat after getting a poor start, easily beating Cooke of Princeton and Thatcher of Yale, who also qualified, the time being 9 4-5 seconds. This equalled the intercollegiate record.

In his first shot-put Horner of Michigan set a new record with a heave of 46 feet 5¾ inches, beating Krueger's put.

In the second heat of the hundred yards Minds of Pennsylvania won after a hard struggle with Thomas of Princeton and Reilly of Yale, in 10 seconds, the three being but inches apart at the finish.

Chisholm of Yale led all the way in the semi-finals in the high hurdles, winning easily in 15 3-5 seconds. Havens of Rutgers ran in great form, shutting out Lewis of Harvard and Griffiths of Pennsylvania, who was a poor fourth. Stibolt of Cornell, although tripping in the second heat, made a wonderful spurt at the finish and easily beat out Dwight of Princeton in 16 seconds.

Horner broke his own record in his second heave with a shotput of 46 ft. 7⅛ inches. Michigan was the star up to then, its men having broken one record twice and equaled another.

Horner of Michigan was an easy winner of the shot, with his record put of 46 ft. 7⅛ inches. Kilpatrick of Yale was second with 45 ft. 2⅞ inches, while Kanzler of Cornell was a close third, with a put of 44 ft. 4 inches. Bartlett of Brown scored the only point for his team in this event with a put of 43 ft. 8⅜ inches. After this event the score was Michigan, 5; Yale 3; Cornell 2; Brown 1.

There was a huge field of starters in the mile, including the collegiate stars Jones of Cornell, Paull of Penn and Hanavan of Michigan. Jaques of Harvard did not run, being saved for the half.

Curtis of Princeton set a terrific pace in the first lap, it being made in 59 2-5 seconds. Boyle then took the lead, Paull following with Jones fifth. On the third lap Jones and Hanavan pulled into third and first places, but Paull soon reduced their lead and set the pace.

Hanavan led at the start of the last lap, followed by Jones, Paull and Lawless. Jones drew away like a whirlwind at the last turn winning by 30 yards, and by a supreme effort Hanavan made a wonderful spurt and prevented Paull from forcing him at the tape, taking second by a foot. Lawless of Harvard was a good fourth.

The time was 4 15 2-5 seconds, a new world's amateur record, breaking the former mark by 1-5 second and beating Paull's record by 2 2-5 seconds made here in 1909. Hanavan of Michigan was well within Paull's old record, while the latter made a wonderful finish, but the Woverine had too much left. The time for each quarter was 59 2-5, 2.58 1-5, 3.15 1-5 and the record.

Thus far two records had been broken, and one equalled, Michigan athletes figuring in each.

Great Race in Quarter.

The quarter was a heartbreaking race. Kelley, of Harvard, and Hough, of Penn., fought it out for first place to the 300-yard mark, when both weakened and Young of Amherst tore down the stretch, winning easily by four yards. Sawyer, Gamble and Hoff, the Princeton and two Michigan runners, being bunched for the last three places. McArthur of Cornell almost caught Hoff at the finish, but was boxed out. The result was a surprise and the time was wonderful, 48 4-5 seconds, equalling Taylor's intercollegiate mark made in 1907.

The 120 high hurdles went to Chisholm of Yale by a foot, Stibolt of Cornell leading until the last flight, when Chisholm's superior form and strength told. The time was remarkable—15 4-5 seconds—within 1-5 second of the record. Havens of Rutgers and Dwight of Princeton finished in that order, ten yards behind the winners, but Dwight was disqualified for fourth place for knocking down three hurdles.

Craig won a wonderful race in the 100. He was 5 yards behind at the 50-yard mark, but his terrific finish landed him a winner by two yards, fairly shooting ahead of the others, who finished within a foot of each other. By great sprinting Cooke of Princeton took third, Minds of Pennsylvania got second and Thomas of Princeton was fourth, Yale being shut out.

The time was 9 4-5 seconds, equalling the record. Minds' spurt at the finish was terrific and gave him second by a hair. Craig's stride and form were perfect and stamped him as one of the greatest runners of the age.

By this time Michigan was leading in the score, with much strength still in reserve. The standing was: Michigan, 16; Pennsylvania, 11; Cornell, 10; Yale, 8.

Of course at the start the most promising men in the two-mile were, Berna of Cornell, Walle of Pennsylvania, Withington of Harvard, and Haimbaugh of Michigan. The first lap Newton of Williams set a fast pace in 1 minute 4-5 seconds but Berna then took the lead, the four favorites being bunched and running easily. The second lap was won in 2 minutes 11 2-5 seconds.

Newton of Williams was a surprise, running close up. Hunger of Cornell proved a disappointment, being left far in the rear. At the start of the fifth lap the order was: Berna, Haimbaugh, Newton, Withington and Walle, and while there were continued attempts to jockey for positions, the relative situation was the same.

At five laps the time was fast in 5 34. The leaders were beginning to show the fast pace, but Newton was holding his own in third place, and striding out. The time at seven laps was 7 minutes 10 seconds.

On the last lap Berna, Newton and Haimbaugh tore ahead, Newton passing Haimbaugh at the ⅞ lap. Berna finished strong and easy, 50 yards ahead, Newton second, while Haimbaugh of Michigan trailed 20 yards behind, with Withington of Harvard in fourth place the same distance in the rear.

Newton's running was a surprise, as he had not been expected to do much, while Haimbaugh was a disappointment.

Another New Record.

The time was a new American amateur record, being 9 minutes 25 1-5 seconds, beating the time made by Taylor of Cornell two years ago by 2 2-5 seconds. Newton was within the old record and Berna could probably have gone faster if he had been pushed. This made three records broken and two equalled.

In the first semi-final in the low hurdles Chisholm of Yale and Haydock of Penn qualified easily, the time being 25 2-5 seconds.

Cummings of Harvard and Stibolt of Cornell qualified in the second heat, Dwight and Smith being far behind, the winners running a dead heat in 25 seconds.

The performance was good in the high jump. First place was a tie between Burdick and Farrier, the Quaker jumpers, and Dalrymple of Tech at 6 feet even. Enright of Dartmouth jumped 5 feet 11 inches.

The score was then: Mich., 18; Cornell, 16; Penn., 11 2-3; Yale, 8, with seven events gone.

The open race of the South Boston Yacht Club at City Point, Memorial Day, will be the big yachting event around Boston and will put the season into commission with a boom. From the talk around the various clubs, the Class P boats will be watched with considerable interest.

The regatta committee of the New England Engine and Boat Association which holds its annual motor boat races July 4 in Boston Harbor, is endeavoring to interest a number of owners of hydroplanes in a special race on that day. Several of the New York and Western owners of this type of boat have responded and it is more than likely that a race with the speed limit around thirty miles an hour will be sailed. Experiments have convinced yachtsmen that the future development of the hydroplane will reveal wonderful speed. In fact, forty-five miles an hour, the present record, will undoubtedly be smashed before the Summer is over.

Marston Harding, owner of the power cruiser Kemoh, is having a wireless outfit installed on the boat at the Charles River basin. The Kemoh is about forty feet long and will be one of the few boats of her type with a wireless outfit. The Kemoh will make its headquarters at York Harbor, Me., during the Summer, but Mr. Harding will cruise probably to Labrador in the boat.

GREAT DRIVE OF A MOTOR TRUCK

A most emphatic and valuable demonstration of the practicability of a motor truck was furnished when the Pierce-Arrow five-ton truck, loaded with five tons of oil, arrived in this city yesterday afternoon. It had made the run from New York to Boston in less than twenty hours of driving time, covering the distance with credit to itself and its operators. The car left New York on Friday morning and without any endeavors to establish a speed record made Springfield that night, a distance of something like 120 miles. This was the first time that the Pierce-Arrow truck has been given a demonstration in New England and much interest was attached to the same owing to the fact that the Pierce is a worm gear drive, such as is in great use in foreign countries.

The gear worked most admirably throughout the trip, and fully sustained the opinions and beliefs of the Pierce Co., as in climbing hills it proved exactly what was needed, taking the load up without the slightest difficulty. In the run to Springfield the truck made admirable time, but her best work was done between Hartford and Worcester. The poor roads through the Connecticut Valley region proved no hindrance to the Pierce, it going along in good shape, never once hesitating, but taking everything as it came. From Hartford to Springfield the going was particularly bad, but not enough to delay the truck.

Yesterday morning the truck started from Springfield and, by good work, was in Springfield by the eleventh hour of the day. The progress of the truck up Spencer Hill was watched with a great deal of interest, as it was here, if anywhere, that the sceptics said she would experience her greatest trouble. If, however, the truck never had any greater hardships to experience than was had on this part of the trip [illegible] do everything imaginable. Spencer Hill is generally conceded to be [illegible] between New York and [illegible] and has in the past proven a bad place for more than one motor. However the Pierce took hold of the climb in grand manner, taking the load up the deep grade without the slightest bit of difficulty, the worm gear proving entirely adequate for the work of the hill. At Worcester the truck was met by J. W. Maguire, the Boston agent, who escorted it to this city, where it arrived at Mr. Maguire's business establishment about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was in the best condition possible and showed little or no results of its hard work from New York. The truck will remain here for several days before returning to New York.

George Davis of the factory, who accompanied the truck all the way from New York, said: "We could not possibly have had a better demonstration of the ability of the truck than we had on this trip. We experienced all sorts and conditions of roads, from the fine macadam to the thick, slimy mud, and not once did the truck fail to easily perform its duty. I am confident that she could have carried twice the load that she did on this trip, although, of course, as you understand, we object to overloading of trucks. Our time made between the two cities was most satisfactory and not only that, but we have proven the entire practicability of the worm gear drive which the Pierce company has adopted, because it is and has for some time been convinced that it is the best drive that has yet been devised. We believe that it is much better than double-chain drive, and, of course, actual practice has demonstrated that the shaft drive is most impracticable for a motor truck. The truck has now covered something like 1,000 miles, having been in demonstration in many cities in the East, and we have yet to discover a single defect."

BUICK TROPHIES.

Fine Display of Valuable Prizes Now Being Made.

Ever since the Park square salesrooms of the Buick Motor Company were redecorated this Spring, wires have been steadily pulled to secured a portion of the famous collection of trophies won by the Buicks in last year's speed, endurance and hill-climbing contests, but the demand from other branches and large agencies throughout the United States for the loan of the collection for exhibition purposes prevented.

During the past week, however, a number of the loving cups, shields and trophies which comprise this extensive and valuable collection, representing some of the greatest winnings in the history of automobile racing, were shipped to the local branch, and now form a rich background for the 1911 Buick cars on display at the salesroom.

While "Wild" Bob Burman will not be in the Buick team at the Indianapolis speedway races Tuesday, those who are familiar with the ability of Arthur Chevrolet and Charlie Basie are confident that the 100 Buicks will be well at the fore when the long race is over, and that another rare trophy will be added to the collection.

Jordan Breaks a Tire Record

Makes a Quick Change at the Indianapolis Speedway.

At Indianapolis yesterday R. W. Jordan of Boston broke the world record for the quick change of tires by changing a Firestone tire with a Jordan rim on Disbrow's Pope "hummer" in the remarkable time thirteen and three-fifths seconds.

The best previous record was established at Savannah in 1909, when Duray broke the established world's record at that time.

This record as established by Jordan is official, as the timing was done by S. M. Butler, Fred Wagner and F. F. Edwards. Disbrow in the Pope sped down the track and in front of the judges brought the car to a stop.

THE NEW METZ.

New England Distributing Point Established.

In taking over the New England agency for the Metz car the American Simplex Company of 169 Huntington avenue feel that they have got a proposition which will prove a veritable winner.

The 1912 Metz is a particularly good looking car, built along lines that are well established and of proven ability, sold at a comparatively small price.

In speaking of this car yesterday Mr. George N. Phelps of the American Simplex Company expressed the belief that it would prove one of the best low-priced propositions on the market. He said: "Not only is it a well-built, substantial car, but it is a lightweight, with over one horsepower to every fifty pounds, which makes it more economical on gasoline, lubricating oil and tires than any car in or near the same class." He says it is a strictly high grade, light car, constructed of the finest material, built for service and at a minimum operating cost.

New Four Passenger Touring Model Creating Much Favorable Comment.

The most recent arrival in Boston is the new four-passenger, Penn No. 30, touring model, which is being exhibited with pardonable pride by the Croxton Motor Co., at their salesroom, 16 Columbus avenue.

This model is graceful in design and has low gravity centre preserving the popular straight line body effect of advanced engineering practice. An unusual amount of foot room is provided in both front seats and tonneau, which, together with its being supported by long, flexible springs, insures the highest degree of comfort in touring.

This model was especially designed for the Croxton Motor Company to meet New England conditions. The construction is light, yet unusually strong, the motor is specially powerful and all minor details have been worked out in a manner intended to win the approval of tourists over the hills and soft roads of our Northern States.

RETURNS FROM THE E. M. F. PLANT

Manager Kinsman of the E. M. F. Studebaker Company returned from the factory in Detroit on Friday last thoroughly satisfied with the result of his tour of inspection. He was very much pleased to find that the factory was working night and day in its efforts to catch up with the orders already received.

He said that the E. M. F. factory was one of the few large plants in the country which was kept [illegible] at work and was behind its orders. The company [illegible] to catch up with [illegible] the next two months.

MOTOR TRUCKS

The success of the Demonstration Trip of the PIERCE-ARROW Five Ton Truck, carrying a full load, from New York to Boston proves the absolute practicability of the Worm Gear Drive.
The Worm Gear Drive was adopted for PIERCE-ARROW five-ton Motor-Trucks because of the impracticability of the bevel gear and the undesirability of the chain drive. The chain drive is noisy, requires constant attention and is lacking in efficiency. The worm gear has none of these objections.

OLD WHITE MOUNTAIN RECORD HAS BEEN BROKEN

Boston Party Makes the First Trip of the Season Over the White Mountain Circuit.

It was at the witching hour of night when the bright lights on the White Way are twinkling their brightest and New Englanders are peacefully sleeping that a party of daring men started from Boston to [illegible] the White Mountain circuit, breaking the best previous record.

To be precise it was exactly 12.02 a. m. on Thursday morning that W. A. Charles, W. A. [illegible], W. P. Reed and the famous "Dick" Sears, comfortably ensconced in an Inter-State Torpedo, left Boston on a tour of exploration from Boston to Bretton Woods and return.

This was the first attempt of the year to make the round trip within twenty-four hours. It was considered a daring attempt for the very reason that so far as is recorded no motor vehicle has made the trip through the mountains since late last Fall.

It was twenty-four hours and twenty-nine minutes later that this same party arrived back at the Inter-State establishment on Massachusetts avenue, having covered the 383 miles without the slightest mishap either to the machine or its tires.

While the elapsed time is 24 hours and 29 minutes, the actual running time was 20 hours 22 minutes, as 4 hours and 7 minutes was taken out for rest and meals. This beats the best previous record by 2 hours and 23 minutes.

It was two years ago that Mr. Charles and a party of friends made a similar trip through the White Mountains in an Inter-State, then securing the record. This record has been surpassed by the one made last week, and one which it is believed will remain standing for some little time to come.

The honor of being the first through Bretton Woods is one that carries with it considerable distinction, for the reason that it is not everyone who cares to push his car over roads that have not been tried out since early Winter. Mr. Charles, however, hesitated not to take the chance, and at the time specified the party started over the road.

To Concord, N. H., everything was lovely; the going was splendid and the weather was overcast. At Concord the heavens determined to cry and amid the [illegible] mud and slush that abounded on every hand the explorers forced their way through Franklin, Tilton, Laconia, Meredith, Plymouth, Profile and on to Bretton Woods, where they arrived at 1.20 p. m. Thursday, making 13 hours and 7 minutes for the outward trip.

Despite the fact that the roads were thick with mud, that the hills were soft and the going was hard, there was not the slightest difficulty experienced, nor did the car at any one time fail to respond to the call of the master.

At Bretton Woods the rain ceased, the weather cleared and the snow-capped Mount Washington stood out in bold relief. Sears wanted to make the climb to the summit, but he was ruled out and informed that if he didn't behave he would have to walk home.

The trip from Bretton Woods back was a veritable sleigh ride. The roads through Crawford Notch were not the best and care had to be exercised in making the descent to Bemis, and thence the going to Intervale was of the best.

From Intervale through Conway and down to Rochester the road had been improved immensely and especially through the Ossipees, where the soft sand of previous years had disappeared before the more up-to-date macadam.

At Rochester a rest was taken and lunch enjoyed, and then "Ho! For Boston!" Through the streets the car traveled without any trouble whatsoever, finally arriving at the Inter-State establishment at 12.31 a. m. Friday.

On the road between Nashua and Manchester, N. H., while the car was proceeding at about twenty miles an hour, the headlights showed a large deer coming towards them. Thinking that the deer would take the ditch before reaching the car, Mr. Charles did not turn out. When within four feet of the deer, however, he determined that discretion was the better part of valor and ran into the ditch rather than take a chance by arguing with the two-year-old denizen of the woods.

There was not the slightest tire trouble, the Shawmut tires with which the car was equipped not even receiving a puncture, and at the finish showed no signs of extraordinary wear.

It is impossible for those who are most vitally interested in the forthcoming outing for the blind and crippled children to make it a thorough success unless they have the united support of the individual automobile owner. It is planned to take every blind and crippled child in Boston as well as hundreds of little orphan children who have never had a glimpse of the beautiful green country on this outing that means health and pleasure to them. To do this, however, means that at least 150 more cars must be available for that day. Last year the outing was an unqualified success and over 1,200 children, and 250 attendants were taken out. Added to the [illegible] nearly 2,000 were fed, and when it is considered that nearly 2,600 children of every creed and color are to be carried this year, which with attendants and drivers will mean a total of about 3,000, the magnitude of the undertaking may be realized. Dr. M. R. Deming of Tremont Temple has full charge of the children and the preparations regarding the feeding of this small army, and he has had so many requests that unless strong [illegible] many will be disappointed.

[illegible] Chester I. Campbell of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, [illegible] director on the outing, is [illegible] every dealer in Boston has loaned every available car they have [illegible] large cash donations for other expenses and it is hoped that now those who have not already donated their cars will respond at once as the time is growing short. Mayor Fitzgerald has been invited to take the eighteen miles run to Sharon on the morning of the fifth, and it is hoped that Governor Foss will be able to get out [illegible] day and say a few words to the children. It is also hoped that as far as possible the [illegible] and [illegible] accomplished, and any [illegible] the day will [illegible].

Possible Purchasers Much Confused by Various Claims.

"The average purchaser of an automobile after listening to the several talks of salesmen representing different cars, is more or less undecided as to which machine is really the best, and I fully appreciate the difficulty that the average purchaser has in arriving at a decision, and in connection with this will say that one of the most important things that a purchaser should consider is the service he will receive after he has paid his money," says N. H. Halliday of the Thomas.

"The Thomas Company has adopted as its slogan, "Nothing Counts Like Service," and intend to build their business with this as a foundation. I mean by this, we intend that each and every purchaser shall be guaranteed satisfaction.

"Another important thing that a purchaser should consider is the company behind the car and the reputation of the men composing same. Of course the car itself should have the most careful consideration, and I would advise every purchaser to get in touch with the owners rather than taking a salesman's word."

The Interstate Car Overcomes All Obstacles on Its Record Run.

SENSATIONAL WORK WILL MARK GREAT 500-MILE CONTEST

By J. C. KERRISON.

Forty-six speed machines! Forty-six daring drivers! Forty-six fearless mechanicians! Each striving to attain the desired end. Each keyed to the highest pitch, will, without regard to life and limb, battle for supremacy in what is admitted will prove the greatest race that has ever been ridden.

A mad, daring and, yes, even a reckless struggle for speed and glory will be that witnessed in the 500-mile Sweepstake race at Indianapolis on Tuesday next.

The annals of the motor racing world show not a struggle, which in point of number and character of contestants, in value of the prizes offered, or in the promise of brilliant work was as great as this promises to be.

It brings together the recognized leaders of the motor racing world, the majority of whom are men of experience, capable and daring enough to drive, as more than one of them has said, even through a knot-hole, if such were necessary to gain the victory.

Will Present Picturesque Appearance.

These cars and these men, when lined up on the broad track, awaiting the signal which shall send them off on their 500 miles of driving, will present most picturesque appearance.

The roar of more than 200 cylinders will shake the earth. The exhaust therefrom will rise like a veritable cloud through breaks in which glimpses of drivers and mechanicians, hooded and begoggled, waiting crouched in their seats with every nerve taut and every pulse throbbing in expectancy, will occasionally be seen.

There will not be the slightest bit of foolery. It will be stern, real business. The thoughts of the forty-six drivers and the forty-six mechanicians will be bent not so much upon the occupants of the grandstand, as upon the condition of their car and the best way of securing the lead. Each of them is determined to win. Each has proven in practice—not later than Friday last—that he can drive his car at the rate of 75 miles an hour.

The practice work on Friday was, however, a much different proposition from that which is to be experienced on Tuesday. Then it was a matter of but a short distance. Tuesday it will be a matter of 500 miles. To drive 500 miles at one sitting is a task in itself. To drive 500 miles in one sitting at the very height of speed, to suffer all the mishaps, handicaps and hardships that is to be encountered during the five centuries is another matter.

It requires not only generalship but physical stamina. It requires an absolute disregard of one's own comfort and in many cases safety. In fact it can be said that if there ever was a race which gave indications of serious mishaps, held in this country, then the one of Tuesday is the one.

The wearing out of tires, the blowing out of the side, the slightest little break in mechanical construction may turn the race into a harvest of death. The hopes of the people throughout the country are, however, that no serious accident shall occur to mar the day, that the National Circuit of 1911 shall be opened under the most auspicious circumstances and with a reaping of records and not disasters.

In view of the fact that each and every car that is eligible to compete on Tuesday has already shown an ability to do seventy-five or more miles per hour, there is a feeling that records will be lowered all along the line from the 100 to the 500-mile mark.

Numerous drivers have made statements to the effect that better than seventy-five miles an hour will be averaged, some saying that they will beat it from the first bomb, disregarding the fact that an 80-mile an hour speed will burn tires up pretty fast on the 2½ mile vitrified brick track. It is my opinion, however, that the speed attained by the winner will not be greater than seventy-three miles an hour if it exceeds seventy miles.

Sensational driving will mark the contest. No race, barring possibly the grand prize in Savannah, has ever been run in which headwork will count more than in this event. Headwork, generalship, or whatever else you may call it, will cut a tremendous figure. The man who starts determined to beat it every inch of the way places a handicap on himself. He becomes unmindful of the thought and attention which a motor requires on such a long journey, and once the motor is neglected it is a question of how much further they can continue.

Those who concentrate their mind on one thing, speed, and neglect their cars and to think about their competitor are, to quote Ralph De Palma, "stacking up against a hard thing."

It is, of course, impossible with any degree of accuracy to select a winner. Winners in long distance motor contests are not determined before the running of the event, as is fully proven by the last big race in this country, namely, the Savannah contest, when Bruce Brown captured the trophy by a very, very small fraction of a minute.

One can no more pick a winner in this contest than he could in the one in the South. The fact that the men and cars are in the very finest of trim, that the prizes offered are more valuable than has ever been offered in a single race in this country, indicates conclusively that the race will be a battle royal and that none will give quarter.

Each is determined to win, not alone for the honor of having won so much as to gain possession of the $10,000 offered by the race management for the first place and the additional prizes offered by various accessory manufacturers.

The Mack Truck in Boston.

The great success of the Mack truck in New England has been such as to induce the Mack Motor Truck Company of this city to establish its office, salesroom and service depot in a building of its own at 201 Pleasant street.

The establishment of these quarters is entirely in keeping with the ideas of progress mapped out by the local concern as it places them in closer touch with their customers, making it possible to give better service than otherwise.

The Mack truck is about as well known in this section as is any one other truck, owing to its established reputation and the fact that there are now in use in Boston alone no less than fifty Mack trucks of from one to seven tons capacity.

MOON IN FAVOR.

Great Demand for Car of Ability.

"There seems to be no depreciation of interest in matters relative to the motor vehicle," says Charles G. Andrews of the Moon Motor Company of Boston. "Never in the history of the industry," continued he, "has there been greater interest or keener consideration shown as there is at the present time. The business all along the line is of the very best, and we are experiencing our share of the prosperity. People realize that in the Moon we have a car of exceptional ability, and the result is that we are doing better business than ever at this season of the year. I might say we have sold our entire allotment of cars, but that is not exactly so, as we have a few cars left for immediate delivery.

TRAVELS BY CAR.

Star Performers Tours From City to City by Motor.

Motor cars as a means of transportation for theatrical stars are supplanting the trains. Much time is saved by the traveling in motor cars in rehearsals and motoring is gaining in favor in theatrical circles all over the country.

Edgar Atchinson Ely, who takes the part of Paul von Gervais, the impecunious baronet in "The Kiss Waltz" at the Shubert Theatre, recently purchased a Velie touring car in New York to use as a means of travel. The trip from New Haven and New York was made in rapid time, with Mr. Ely at the wheel. He was accompanied by the Misses Winifred Browne, Nan Pankhurst and Winnie Winters of the company. Mr. Ely spent many hours in touring through the suburbs of Boston in his Velie.

BURGLAR ALARMS ON BARNS TO PROTECT PROPERTY NOW RESORTED TO BY FARMERS

Vigilance of Police and Offers of Reward Fail to Check the Traffic in New England Towns; Tracks Are Cunningly Covered by Gangs in Quest of Prey in the "Softest" Section of Country—Crooks Seldom Caught

MORE horses are stolen in New England every year—carried out of farmers' barns at night or driven off'n Main street at noon—than are taken by theft in the same period in all the States west of the Mississippi River! So say the detectives.

The police, active and alert against every other sort of criminal, appear to be stricken with mental and official paralysis when it comes to dealing with the men who steal horses.

The Sunday AMERICAN, making what can by no means be called a thorough search, has compiled a list of twenty-six horses stolen within a very small district in New England in less than that many weeks. In south central New Hampshire—eastern Hillsborough and western Rockingham—farmers are mighty careful to leave a portion of the house lighted at night. Some of them hang lanterns at the barn door. The lantern may indicate that the farmer is still at work about the place, or that somebody from the farm is "out" and may return at any moment. Other farmers are putting in burglar alarms. Few places are molested where the thieves can see a telephone line.

There is, of course, no place in this chronicle for those cases, occurring every day in New England, wherein the local bad boy, or near desperado, drives off with Dr. Blank's team or Farmer Dash's wagon only to bring it back at dusk to the place he started from; or desert it twelve miles out of town and disappear for six months or so.

It happens only semi-occasionally, too, that the police have any clew to the identity of the genuine horse thief. The police of Providence last February sent abroad a warning for the apprehension of one George E. Boyse, alias Everett Priest. It was represented in the bills that Boyse, or Priest, whichever his name is, was wanted for the larceny of a horse and carriage.

FARMERS STILL LOOKING FOR "SKINNY" CLAY.

Two months later the police of Newmarket, N. H., were advertising far and near for the arrest of one Irving Clay, known to the folks at home as "Skinny." John Hobbs, a Lee, N. H., farmer, had driven into Newmarket that day behind "June Belle." When Mr. Hobbs came out of one of the Newmarket stores the bay mare was missing. The local Sherlock Holmes went to work and by the process of deduction, or something, found that nobody else was missing except "Skinny" Clay. It is understood that "June Belle" was sold to an unsuspecting resident of Manchester. "Skinny" Clay has been indicted, and everything is ready for him at Newmarket, but he won't come back and let them do it to him.

Cases like these, however, are few and far between. Usually it is the Mysterious Stranger, and only infrequently do they get him. They have got one or two of him, however, besides Mr. Joe Bloom.

Up at Hudson, N. H., near Nashua, on the night of February 6, the barn of John Wentworth, the game warden, was broken into and a $200 horse and wagon belonging to B. F. Willoughby stolen. Peter Nault of Lowell was arrested for this job and, found guilty at Manchester, has been sent to the New Hampshire State Prison at Concord for not less than three nor more than five years.

The third and only other arrest was made by the police of Lawrence. Strangely enough, all three of these arrests have taken place within the present month.

Four weeks ago next Wednesday George B. Millen of the Franklin House stables at Lawrence reported to City Marshal O'Sullivan that a man of about twenty-eight years, who had hired a rig from him, had failed to put in an appearance. The horse was a valuable bay, newly clipped, seven years old and weighing 950 pounds. The young man turned out to be Mr. George L. Uman. They found George at Lowell offering the Millen rig in a sales stable. Mr. Uman is now in jail at Lawrence. The police say it won't be long before he follows Joe Bloom and Peter Nault.

Once in a while the police get the stolen horse, though they fail to see the thief. "Jim" Stanley, superintendent of the City Home up at Lawrence drove down town on St. Patrick's day and left his driving horse at the corner of Franklin and Common streets. When the "super" came back the rig was gone.

The police "telephoned around," as is the police custom in such cases, and the job printer got busy with postal cards. Some time on the following day, however, Alcide Kirock, a farmer at Danvers, drove up to the Lawrence police station leading the Stanley rig.

"When I got up this morning," the man from Danvers said, "I found this strange outfit in my dooryard. The horse appeared to have been driven pretty hard. I put him up and gave him some breakfast and when I read the morning paper I knew where he belonged."

In the good old days, the New England horse thief had but one formula. He came into town, registered at the hotel, went around to the livery stable, represented himself to be a commercial traveler, asked for the best rig in the place and drove off never to be seen again.

The telephone has put this old-fashioned horse thief pretty much out of business. He shows up once in a while, as in the case of that "Mr. J. Levey" who got a rig on the 21st of last month from the stable of L. S. Knowlton on Manchester street, Manchester, N. H., to be traced through Amherst and Brookline, N. H., and there lost sight of, but speaking broadly, he has followed the green goods man and the man who sold patent cure-alls on the town square, under the combined glare of a gasolene light and his own diamonds.

The telephone has put the livery stable thief out of business because, for one thing, he had to work in the daytime. The horseman saw him face to face. Then again, livery stable keepers are fussier than they used to be. Most of the drummers they do business with are old customers, who had to be properly introduced at the beginning. The new man has to "show cause." He can be looked up through local business men. In cases of grave doubt, it is always possible to call up his "house" in Boston, for a 25-cent telephone fee.

The modern thief has two bets. He breaks into a barn at night, or he picks his team on the broad highway, in the light of day, while its owner is at dinner, calling upon his attorney or his doctor, or attending to a pleasant little business in the bank.

Bolts and Bars no Protection.

The record for six months compiled for the Sunday AMERICAN indicates that the professional horse thief favors neither one style nor the other. One would naturally suppose that even the professional would hesitate at breaking and entering in the night time, probably with arms, when he can just as easily pick his team on the highway, but such is not the fact.

So far as is known, nobody, at least in New England, has yet caught the barn breaker in the act. He has shown wonderfully good luck in steering clear of those barns in southern New Hampshire which, in the past two years, have been equipped with electric burglar alarms. He comes and goes. His tracks are seen in the morning.

Usually, as in the case of B. L. Corey's loss at Auburn, N. H., on March 22, the barn floor and sills are found to have been covered a foot deep with straw, in order that the horse may be taken out noiselessly. Ordinary bolts and bars are of no avail against this grade of thief. He finds a way into the barn cellar, comes up through the scuttle, carpets the floor with straw, gets his horse and chuckles, most likely, as he quietly shoves back the bar which was set against him the night before.

A sample case of this kind occurred March 6 at Westford, near Lowell, when Henry O. Keyes found just such a condition of affairs. The Keyes horse was one which, the average citizen would say, ought to have been recovered. The animal was a dark bay mare of rangy build, with a cut on the tip of the right ear and partly blind. It was seven years old and weighed 1,400 pounds. The Massachusetts State Police interested themselves in this case, but without success. The animal has never been heard from.

Stolen From Street Corner.

Of the other class is the experience of O. M. Flye of Methuen, who drove his chestnut mare "Viola" down into the marts of Lawrence late last month and left the rig standing at the corner of Broadway and Lowell streets while he attended to some business. When Mr. Flye came back "Viola" and a new democrat wagon were among the missing. [illegible] where they are to day.

But no New England case for many years got so much advertising of one kind and another as was given to the dark brown bay mare "Tillie," belonging to the J. B. Blood Company of Lynn and stolen from Oxford street in that city on the ninth day of January.

"Tillie" was twelve years old, but nevertheless President Blood promptly offered a reward of $150. Two-thirds of this amount was held out as an inducement for the return of the horse and $50 for the apprehension of the thief.

"This reward is not offered," the circular explained, "on a basis of the value of the horse, as she probably would not bring over $150 in an auction, but because she is a pet family horse to which the owners have become much attached."

"Tillie" hadn't been left alone five minutes. J. H. Rollins, her driver, had stepped into an Oxford street harness shop. He had hitched "Tillie" to a weight. The weight was found lying on the sidewalk.

Considerable money was expended in the effort to recover "Tillie." There were advertisements in the metropolitan newspapers, as well as in the leading journals of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. Superintendent Rollins traveled about New England to the big sales stables. "Tillie" has never been found. She weighs about 950 and has a notable white scar under the saddle and a white star on the forehead.

Work the "Softest" Section.

If you are interested in horses, or fearful of horse thieves you will notice that in this section of New England most of the horse stealing takes place close to the cities of Lawrence and Lowell, in Massachusetts, and Manchester, N. H., including the towns in between. Why this section has been picked out as the "softest" has never been explained. It may be because the drive to Boston is not too long, or because somewhere in that region the thieves keep their "transformation" barn. Keene, in southwestern New Hampshire, seldom or never loses a horse. Concord and Laconia, to the north, are almost equally exempt. Haverhill and Newburyport are immune.

The district around Nashua has been practically free from annoyance since one night in October last, when two men broke and entered the barn of Frank Bancroft, in Litchfield, and drove off with Bancroft's horse and buggy.

A neighbor, attracted by the noise, saw the men driving away and jumped to his telephone. In Hudson, just below Litchfield, the police took a few shots at the men, but missed them. Further south the thieves left the wagon to cut telephone wires. The horse, unstrung by its unusual experience, ran away, took to the railroad tracks and was killed by the engine of a freight train.

Chief of Police Walter H. Dresser of Portland, whose own section has been practically unmolested for some time, says that within a year the police of the Maine metropolis have been notified of 21 cases of horse stealing in Maine, seven in New Hampshire, two in Maine, one in New York and two in New Jersey.

This One Never Came Back.

"In the past six months," Chief Dresser said the other day, "Portland has lost only two horses. One of these was hired, old style, at a livery stable. The other case was somewhat unusual.

"A stranger, plainly enough a foreigner, came into the stable one day to engage a team for 'some weeks.' He explained that he was starting out to peddle fruit. They let him have the team. And whatever the reason, whether the stranger lost the road or what, he has never been heard from. Stolen horses, in my experience, are recovered less frequently than almost any kind of booty."

Only a day or two ago State Detective Obed F. Stackpole of Maine recovered in Boston a dapple gray horse 16 hands high and weighing 1,550 pounds, said to be the property of N. Goodkowsky of Biddeford, through a mortgage.

The case of the Goodkowsky horse is peculiar to itself, like a certain popular medicine, but it has at least one element found in nearly all cases of genuine horse-stealing. When the Goodkowsky horse was found, in the yard of a fruit company in Charlestown, the dapple gray was much changed. The handsome tail had been picked out, the mane had been cut, and in other ways the horse had been "made over." Two Portland men, wanted for shipping a mortgaged [illegible], are said to be away from here at present.

$30,000 Thefts Yearly.

The happiest man in New England last Monday was probably Police Inspector George W. Patterson of Boston Headquarters. Patterson is the active gentleman whom Captain Joseph Dugan has assigned to the horse-stealing industry. He has two patrolmen assistants.

Patterson sat on Monday in one of the rooms of the Suffolk County Court House and heard "Joe" Bloom sent away for not less than four years or more than five. The sentence was imposed by Judge Stevens.

Bloom, according to the Boston police, was at the very head and front of local horse thieves; at least, that is to say, of the field force, the men who were active either in getting the horses or disposing of them. In horse stealing, as in other "industries," your big men are in the background or "higher up."

Officials of the Boston police department figure that stolen horses to the value of at least $15,000 are brought into Boston every year from New Jersey and New York and shipped out of Boston to Portland, Bangor and other points in northern New England.

Nobody seems able to estimate the number of horses stolen in New England and shipped back to points in New York and New Jersey. The AMERICAN, with no other resources than the unofficial ones open to newspapers, has compiled a list showing the number of horses stolen in New England to be not less than one a week, on an average, throughout the year. It may easily be two a week. New England's business in stolen horses, therefore, is not less than $30,000 a year. The police believe they could practically put a stop to it if they had the sympathy, the cordial good will and the fullest confidence of big and little stablemen. The authorities think it is altogether too easy in New England for "anybody" to sell a horse and a carriage.

New York "Headquarters."

In New York city—to take up first the case of Mr. Joseph Bloom and the horses brought into New England for sale—Inspector Patterson discovered a "headquarters" for horse thieves in Ridge street on the lower East Side.

It didn't take the Boston police very long to discover that the horse picked up throughout New York and New Jersey at least one horse disappears every day are usually shipped by rail or boat to Boston.

The next step was to find the Boston headquarters. Inspector Patterson believes it has been found in Chambers street. It was here "Joe" Bloom held out.

There were always two or three of the gang over here to attend to the receiving of the horses and look after their sale in New England. Others of the gang were stationed at the New York and Jersey end to pay strict attention to the supply.

Bloom, who was known as "Harry Finn" when it suited his purpose to wear an alias, is forty years old and 5 feet 4 inches tall. He was born in Russia. Before he took up the [illegible] end of the horse business he had been hard at work as an expressman. Inspector Patterson has no doubt that B[illegible] mixed up in the larceny and sale of thousands of dollars worth of [illegible]. Patterson has had the freight receipts to show Bloom's amazing activity here under the name of "Finn."

Thieves' Method Simple.

The methods of the thieves are simplicity itself. [illegible] the horses [illegible] by the thieves. Here identifying marks are [illegible] are [illegible]. In some cases the color is changed. Bays become blacks; whites are driven away as [illegible]. Tracing the stolen animal becomes the next thing to impossible.

Figures compiled by the Sunday AMERICAN and the list is necessarily far from complete [illegible] that cases of horse stealing [illegible] a week. The police [illegible] fewer than one a [illegible] this is [illegible] thefts in New York [illegible] Bayonne and near [illegible].

In [illegible] year fifteen horses were stolen in Passaic, a New Jersey city of less than 60,000 people. Newark lost seven in a single week. Five thousand dollars' worth of horses were shipped from Passaic to Boston.

Just as the loot of most larcenies is removed to remote points before it is offered for sale, so in the case of stolen horses. More than 90 per cent. of the horses stolen in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Maine are brought to Boston.

When the game had become a scandal, Chief Inspector Dugan assigned Patterson and his patrolmen aids to the task of driving the active men out of Boston. Hardly a day passed that a consignment of stolen horses and equipment wasn't received here to be disposed of in New England.

Members of the gang are known to the police. Patterson and the other policemen are continually at railroad stations and docks; the Boston authorities have forty photographs and as many descriptive cards, but despite the Bertillon system, notwithstanding the Rogues' Gallery, regardless of police inspectors and patrolmen, horses are being stolen, dyed, trimmed and shipped to Boston every day to be disposed of in New England.

How to put a stop to horse stealing in New England is the serious problem of heads of police departments. Most suburban policemen will tell you, privately, that the detection of one horse thief through the electrical burglar alarm, and his prompt punishment, will do more to wipe out the New England horse thief than anything else the police can think of.

With the incarceration of "Joe" Bloom, alias Harry Finn, at Charlestown, Inspector George Patterson believes he has made a big hole in the industry of shipping stolen horses from New York into Boston.

May 3.—Lawrence; George B. Millen, of the Franklin House stables, reports that he has let a team to a young man who hasn't come back. Later the team is located at Lowell, where a young man, giving the name of George L. Uman, and claiming to belong in Boston, is arrested while trying to dispose of the rig at a sales stable. Anti-Reciprocity Plot Arouses Boston

Senate Amendment Scheme Denounced

THERE is a senatorial [illegible] to kill the Reciprocity [illegible] by amending it that [illegible] reciprocity with Canada is almost achieved. The Underwood bill has passed the House [illegible] before the Senate. President [illegible] presented the Republican Senators [illegible] opposing it, but they are now planning to stop reciprocity by amendments.

The Paper Trust demands that there be no exchange of wood pulp and paper products until the Canadian export tax on wood pulp imposed in certain provinces be removed. Senator Root and his friends want to so amend the Reciprocity bill.

The present bill contains everything that Canada will concede to the United States. Root knows it, and knows that the amendment will prevent reciprocity. Senators Lodge and Crane of Massachusetts are said to be actively working with Root.

Massachusetts wants reciprocity. Governor Foss was elected upon a reciprocity platform. Opposition to reciprocity almost defeated Lodge for re-election to the Senate.

Every business organization in the State has recorded itself in favor of this proposition. Boston's future depends upon securing it. Both Republicans and Democrats in this section are for reciprocity.

Indignation at the attitude of the Massachusetts Senators and determination that trickery shall not defeat reciprocity now that its enemies have been defeated in the open is expressed on all sides.

The AMERICAN has interviewed scores of leading merchants, business men, professional men and public officials, both Republicans and Democrats, and found all alike convinced of the necessity of reciprocity and opposed to any amendments [illegible] Reciprocity bill now before Congress.

New England Must Act.

CHARLES S. HAMLIN, Democratic leader.

I consider it essential that the reciprocity bill become a law without amendments. The moment the question of amendments arises discussions ensue, which are endless. The bill in its present shape is a very good one, it is moderate and should be acceptable to all except those who are hostile to reciprocity in any form. I believe that every effort should be made by New England to secure the passage of this bill. Reciprocity will be of incalculable benefit to us and we do not want to lose it because the bill providing it is amended beyond recognition.

Must Have Reciprocity.

ELWYN G. PRESTON of the S. S. Pierce Company, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee on foreign trade.

I am too much in haste to go into this matter at any length, but we must have reciprocity and I strongly favor the bill now before Congress and hope it will become a law without further delay.

Means More Business.

JOSEPH H. O'NEIL, President of the Federal Trust Company.

Congress can't pass that reciprocity bill quick enough. It is a measure so beneficial to the whole country that nobody dares say he is against it, and its enemies should not be allowed to kill it by improper amendments.

As far as New England is concerned this section must have reciprocity. As a banker I favor it because it will help business tremendously, and what helps business is good for [illegible]. I have always been strong for closer connection with Canada. It is a great and growing country and its interests are our interests.

Senate Must Be Shown.

JAMES H. DOYLE, State Senator.

You can line me up with those who want reciprocity and who see in the bill now before Congress the best way to get it. The people must show the Senate of the United States that they won't stand any fooling with this measure. It must go through and be a reciprocity bill when it comes out of Congress, not something else.

Realty Men Urge Bill.

[illegible] anything [illegible] the matter with the reciprocity bill and there isn't [illegible] of tinkering with it or amending it. Just as sure as a lot of [illegible] start amending a bill [illegible] killing it. Every business [illegible] is in favor of reciprocity [illegible] will give it to [illegible] want it and we [illegible] amendments [illegible].

The M[illegible] Real Estate Exchange [illegible] president, is on re[illegible] and nobody [illegible] would be likely [illegible] and oppose [illegible] The only [illegible] is from [illegible] would delay [illegible] and change [illegible] glad [illegible] going to [illegible] of the Senate [illegible] to get reciprocity.

Should Prod Congressmen.

B. R. WRIGHTINGTON, secretary of the Manufacturers and Merchants' Committee on Tax Laws and chairman of the Publicity Committee, Chamber of Commerce.

I believe that the reciprocity bill now before Congress is good legislation and should pass. Boston needs reciprocity with Canada and should see that her Congressmen try to get it for her. I think that the bill needs no amendments but should pass just as it is and as soon as possible.

Urges United Demand.

CHARLES V. DASEY, steamship agent.

Of course we should have reciprocity. I cannot see how men can be so blind as to wish to continue on hostile terms with their next door neighbors. I am told that Lodge and others are trying now to kill the bill by amending it in such manner that its purport will be changed. That should not be permitted. We must have real reciprocity and right away. New England should be united for it and should not tolerate any of her Senators or Representatives opposing it.

Not Partisan, Says Tinkham.

GEORGE HOLDEN TINKHAM, State Senator.

You can put me down as for reciprocity strong. I think the bill now before Congress is all right and I don't see any need for amendments to it. It is no longer a partisan question. Republicans and Democrats can both vote for reciprocity and ought to do so.

Dark Lantern Methods.

JOHN MACK, State Senator.

Out in Pittsfield, where I come from, we are all for reciprocity and we do not view with patience the attempt of people who are afraid to come out into the open and fight the bill, but who are trying to kill it with amendments.

Jerome Jones Against Delay.

JEROME JONES of Jones, McDuffee & Stratton.

Delay means disaster. If one amendment is admitted they should admit others. And so the matter will go until it might reach the stage of a trade and dicker scheme. The bill should be passed just as reported. It is most excellent measure. Its passage would do more to help business and create trade than anything now in sight. Those who insist on amendments want to block it and put off any revision of the tariff.

Adheres to Rule.

ROBERT WINSOR of Kidder, Peabody & Co.

I am never quoted for publication on anything. It's a rule of mine. Sorry, very sorry, but thanks for being remembered.

Filene Praises Taft.

EDWARD A. FILENE.

The bill as suggested by President Taft should be passed in its entirety. It is an admirable measure and the President deserves to be commended by men of all parties for having it presented. Attempts to amend it now are intended to defeat it. Clear sighted men of business will not tolerate any efforts made in an underhand manner to knife this bill. Legitimate amendments, amendments made from an honest motive are proper enough, but those intended now have the ulterior motive of stabbing the bill in the back. The bill should be passed in its present form.

Ex-Gov. Long for Action.

JOHN D. LONG, former Governor and Secretary of the Navy.

The plain duty of Congress, in the interest of the country, is to pass this bill just as the President has recommended. Amending it means delay and possible defeat. The bill is admirable and will justify its sponsors from the very moment of its enactment. It should not be amended in any particular.

"An Entering Wedge."

R. H. LONG, shoe manufacturer.

The bill should be passed in its present form even though it is not so favorable to the United States as it might be. It will be an entering wedge for freer trade relations with our neighbor and can readily be amended after it goes into operation. But amendments now to the pending bill would have the effect only of delaying its passage, if not preventing passage altogether.

Heed Taft, Says Curtis.

EDWIN U. CURTIS, Collector of the Port of Boston.

I believe that the suggestions of President Taft should be heeded by the Congress. The bill is an excellent one, not only for New England but for the whole country. Its passage should not be hindered by amendments.

McCALL POINTS OUT DANGER OF AMENDING RECIPROCITY BILL

THERE are two dangers incident to amending the reciprocity bill. The first would result from creating a difference between the two houses, and while this difference might be adjusted in conference it is desirable if possible to avoid it.

The other danger is more serious. Any amendment affecting at all the substance of the agreement would throw the whole subject again into negotiation between the two countries, and the Canadian Minister of Finance, Mr. Fielding, has expressed the opinion that in that case the situation would become perilous. There is determined effort made in Canada to defeat the agreement, even as it now stands, and if negotiations were reopened the situation would become more complicated and the danger greater.—Congressman Samuel W. McCall to the Sunday AMERICAN.

Gov. Foss Says Reciprocity Bill Should Pass

By GOVERNOR EUGENE N. FOSS

My position on reciprocity is well known. I was one of the first to appreciate how necessary it is to the welfare of New England. The whole country to-day believes in reciprocity, and I am glad that a Republican President has championed it and a Democratic House of Representatives has recorded itself for it.

The reciprocity bill now in the hands of the Senate is a good bill. It is the best that can be secured at this time. There is no excuse for delaying its passage or amending it so that it will not be acceptable to the Canadians. Amendments will put off the coming of reciprocity several years longer, which is why they are being offered.

I believe, however, that if the Senate does not pass this bill in its present form it will mean a Democratic Senate as well as a Democratic House, and the sure election of a Democratic President.

'Reciprocity Is Watchword,' Says. Gov. Pothier

By GOVERNOR ARAM POTHIER OF RHODE ISLAND.

I believe the question of reciprocity between the United States and Canada one of the broadest commercial and industrial movements of our time.

I have not had time to study minutely the reciprocity bill now before Congress, but from its issue I am convinced will accrue great commercial, industrial and social advancement to the peoples of both countries.

Canada and the United States are geographically placed before the world as one entity, and it is only natural that reciprocity should prevail between them.

I think our people are ready for reciprocity and the time is at hand to secure it. Opposition, of course, is to be expected, but it must be overcome. The farmers of the Middle West should realize that it will not be many decades before home consumption of food products will eclipse production. When that time comes, who is so well situated as Canada to supply us with what we need? The Canadian railroads and steamships will then pour into our ports such a stream of foodstuffs and merchandise as the world has never seen.

Reciprocity is the watchword. The United States is on the threshold of a new era for the advancement and progress of its 100,000,000 people.

RECIPROCITY URGENT NEED, SAYS MAYOR

By MAYOR JOHN F. FITZGERALD.

Twenty-five years from now, when another generation has grown up, the wonder will be that any tariff law had ever existed between Canada and the United States. It must be obvious to anyone who knows anything about the history of the United S[illegible] that the largest freedom of trade between both countries is the best possible thing for the inhabitants of both nations. If a line is drawn from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the northernmost point in Maine to the northernmost point of the State of Washington—and this ought to be the natural border line—the principal cities of Canada will be included within our domains. Montreal, the principal city of Canada, is but 350 miles from New York or Portland, while Chicago is about 1,000 miles. New York and Boston are hundreds of miles nearer Montreal than Halifax or St. John, and ought to be the natural ports of Canada, particularly in those months of the year when the St. Lawrence river is frozen over.

These two nations have now the long boundary in existence, extending from ocean to ocean, they have lived in peace and mutual respect without a fortress, a soldier, or a gun on either side of the boundary. Each country has about 3,000 square miles of territory, the United States with a population of 100,000,000, and Canada with but 7,000,000. According to the best authority, the United States will have reached its ability to supply its population with food products in a few years, while Canada is just commencing to export these articles. The United States has just reached the point where its exports consist of manufactured products, while Canada is being settled by a population which will not only develop the wheat fields but produce pig iron and coal and minerals of all kinds for use in the development of the great manufacturing establishments of this country.

When one analyzes the history of our country to find reasons for the marvelous industrial and commercial success it has achieved in the last one hundred years, it will be found that the greatest factor in its development has been the freedom of trade that has existed between all the States of the Union. The map of the United States placed over Europe would cover all that country outside of Russia. More than twenty nations are included in the map of Europe, each one armed against the other, supporting millions of soldiers in time of peace, speaking different languages and with different tariffs.

The United States with its forty-eight States, without fortresses, without tariff walls, with cotton in the South, wheat in the West, manufactures in the East, the [illegible] of the West, the East and the South, all these factors have [illegible] opportunity for the development of trade unparalleled in the history of the world. While the United States was forging ahead, Canada was stagnant. Recently Canada has awakened to her advantages; her statesmen and her business men have come to realize the marvelous riches that her soil possesses, and the people are turning to them, with the result that the last ten years has witnessed a prosperity unexampled in history.

It is utterly foolish for two nations [illegible] both in their infancy [illegible] in trade matters, and I think the fair minded citizens of both countries will bless the day that Sir Wilfred Laurier and William H. Taft agree that both should adopt a trade policy for the mutual benefit of the people of these governments.

TOPICS OF INTEREST IN CITY AND STATE POLITICAL CIRCLES

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

Governor Foss [illegible] Police Commissioner [illegible] to the Executive Council [illegible] ment has set the wise [illegible] ing their brows and w[illegible] how much truth there was [illegible] tip" that Mr. O'Mea[illegible] appointment is settled. The [illegible] commissioner's present term expires [illegible] week from to-morrow.

Next Wednesday [illegible] opportunity the Governor [illegible] nominate a police commissioner before the expiration of Mr. O'Meara's term. A nomination made next Wednesday would have to be confirmed at once, under suspension of the rules, in order for a new incumbent to take office on the day the new term begins.

A rumor which gained considerable headway yesterday, but which could not be traced directly to the Governor's office, had it that the Governor may withhold the appointment of a commissioner for the new term for several weeks, possibly until after the Fall elections. The statute of 1906 which created the police commissionership, provides an incumbent of the office until his successor is appointed and qualified.

Lake Quinsigamond For a State Reservation.

Picturesque Lake Quinsigamond with its shore and approaches, is well on the way to becoming a State reservation, thanks to a young man who wasn't afraid, despite the fact he was serving his first term in the Legislature, to enter into combat with the older and supposedly wiser legislators.

The young man is Representative John C. Mahoney of Worcester. He came to Beacon Hill this year after making something of a mark in civil life through dint of much hard work. He is one of the "self made" type of man. He achieved a bit of legislative fame by splitting with his associates on the Committee on Legal Affairs and taking up the fight in behalf of amateur Sunday baseball.

But his real effort was saved for his Lake Quinsigamond resolve. Early in the year Representative Mahoney had filed a resolve providing for a commission of three persons to investigate the advisability of making Lake Quinsigamond, with its shores and approaches, a State reservation. His motive was to afford protection for the thousands of persons who visit the lake for boating and bathing. There have been many drownings which might have been averted if the place had been properly policed. Part of the lake lies in the city of Worcester and part in the town of Shrewsbury. The inevitable results of divided authority in a place like Lake Quinsigamond followed.

Mahoney got his resolve safely through the Committee on Harbors and Public Lands. This committee permitted the commission to be a fund of $500. Then the resolve went to the Committee on Counties. Counties thought so well of it that it increased the appropriation to $1,500. The resolve went through the House without a word of protest from anyone.

Awaits Governor's Signature to be a Law.

When it reached the Senate the Ways and Means Committee took it. Ways and Means couldn't see any reason why the State should spend money in an investigation of this sort, so it reported against the bill. Most first-year legislators would have laid down in their tracks and quit after an adverse report from the leading committee of the Legislature. But Mahoney didn't know what quitting was. He hustled over to the Senate chamber and persuaded Ways and Means Chairman Greenwood to have the measure sent back to his committee.

A few days afterward the resolve came back again with another adverse report. Mahoney did another bit of hypnotizing on Greenwood, and the resolve was again recommitted. Last Sunday there was a drowning fatality up at Lake Quinsigamond. Mahoney waited for the Ways and Means members at the door of the State House Monday morning, armed with newspaper clippings telling how the divided police authority at Quinsigamond was responsible for the drowning. Mahoney told the Ways and Means folks some things which the papers hadn't printed. He was at the lake when the drowning occurred, and had assisted in the attempt to rescue the person who was drowned.

Result: A favorable report from Ways and Means, with an appropriation of $500. All that remains now for the Governor is to sign the resolve and appoint the commission.

Henebery Trolley Bill Goes to Its Rest.

The Henebery trolley bill, which gave promise earlier this year of giving cities and towns something they much need, is at rest in the graveyard of the Massachusetts Senate. It was kicked into its grave with the help of seven Democratic Senators from Suffolk County, who were supposed to be pledged by Plank No. 9 of the last Democratic State platform to support measures of the home-rule-for-cities type.

The seven Democrats who snapped their fingers at Plank No. 9 were Martin P. F. Curley of Roxbury, James H. Doyle of Boston, Edward F. Grainger of Winthrop, Joseph P. Lomasney of Boston, Michael J. Murray of Dorchester, James F. Powers of South Boston and James P. Timilty of Roxbury.

It is worthy of mention that Senator James H. Hatton of Charlestown, who has acted this year pretty much as a Democratic Senator is expected to act, was the only member from Suffolk County to vote on the "home-rule" side of this measure.

The Henebery bill aimed to strike out of the present street railway law two provisions which were inserted [illegible] dark lantern methods in 1907. One was the clause giving the Railroad Commission the power to over-rule refusals by cities and towns to grant franchises to street railways to carry freight and express through their streets. The other was the clause making all such franchises granted by the Railroad Commissioners perpetual instead of limited.

To say that the Republicans are elated over the action of seven Suffolk County Democrats on the Henebery bill would be putting it mildly. [illegible] gives them valuable campaign material for next fall. They [illegible] Plank No. 9 of the last [illegible] State platform pledged [illegible] as Democrats to support [illegible] measures, that Plank No. 17 [illegible] attention to the way 'our Senators and Representatives support [illegible] pledges' and that Governor Foss in his inaugural address [illegible]:

"I regard home rule for the cities as an essential part of popular government [illegible] the responsibility for good government [illegible] municipalities must [illegible] upon the citizens, and [illegible] sovereign in the affairs [illegible]."

Another State House Secret Is Discovered.

Another State House secret has come to light. The full name of the young man who represents Ward 13, South Boston, in the House of Representatives has been discovered.

Listen: William Lawrence Vernon Newton.

A stranger, on hearing that name, might imagine that it belonged to a long-haired actor who had a fondness for playing "mad" scenes. If said stranger happened to stroll into the House chamber some day while Mr. Newton was making one of his characteristic speeches, he'd tell himself that his guess was correct.

But to return to Mr. Newton's full name. Seems that one of Mr. Newton's South Boston friends was interested in the fate of a bill which fixed a maximum on the size of holes in Swiss cheese, or something like that, and he decided to call Mr. Newton up and ask him where the bill stood.

The telephone in the House corridor was answered by "Handsome Jack" Leary, one of the pages. "Hello," said Jack. "What's that? Yes. I'll get him for you in just a moment. Hold the line, please."

Down the corridor at full speed came the Ward 13 legislator. "Did the person on the other end tell you to ask for me in that way?" he asked Leary.

"Sure," said Jack.

Newton grabbed the telephone receiver. Those lounging on the sofas in the corridor heard this:

"Say, you big piece of cheese, what do you think I am, anyway? What're you trying to do? Make a goat out of me, eh? In the first place when you want to speak to me, you ask for 'Mr. Newton of South Boston' and let it go at that. See? And in the second place, William Leo Vincent ain't my name. My name is William Lawrence Vernon Newton, and I got the 'Lawrence' through being able to fight like John Lawrence Sullivan, and don't you forget it, either. I don't know where your old bill stands, and I ain't going to look it up now, either, but if you want to know about it you can write me a letter, just for being so fresh, and if it's addressed to me properly, maybe I'll answer it. Good-bye."

BANG!—Signifying the way the telephone receiver went back on the hook.

Councillor Smith Ever Ready in Debate.

Councillor Earnest E. Smith, although a first year member of the City Council, holds without dispute the distinction of being the most verbose member of that body. When the double chamber system of government prevailed, both branches invariably held members who kept the official reporters of the proceedings constantly employed. The new member from the Back Bay yields nothing to those who have gone before. He is ever ready to debate and his opinions thus far spread on the city council minutes occupy more space than any other three members combined. Withal he is one of the hardest working members of the present city government and apparently thoroughly enjoys the working out of big municipal problems.

Funny how a habit grows on one. Clerk of Committees John Dever observed Tom Hurley, his former assistant, come into a public hearing in the aldermanic chamber the other day and immediately called on him to assist in reporting the hearing. Tom had to smile because he has been an employe of the street commissioner's office since the new charter went into effect.

At another public hearing, ex-Alderman Giblin called on City Messenger Leary to procure him a copy of city council minutes for 1900. Ned smiled but didn't move because the gentleman from East Boston ceased to be a city father in January, 1910.

The recent forced resignation of two employes holding responsible positions in the city service is concrete evidence that the administration does not propose to longer deal leniently with those who are unfortunate enough to land in the clutches of the "money sharks." It is such a comparatively easy proposition for the average city employe to visit one of the loan offices and obtain money that the practise has grown to proportions that seriously embarrass the force in the city treasurer's office. Numerous cases where employes have become involved with a number of companies are now on the books, and warnings have been issued that these financial obligations must be entirely cancelled within a short time. Several attempts have been made to eradicate this evil, but the present crusade is the only one where evidence has been shown that the order means business.

Council President Collins' Opportunity.

President Walter L. Collins of the City Council will have a real opportunity to see how it feels to be Mayor when the regular chief executive sails for Europe the latter part of June. Generally the heaviest job an acting-Mayor is called upon to do in the short respites that the real Mayor is absent from the city, is to hold down the chair. Mayor Fitzgerald will be gone for over a month on this trip, however, and the member from Dorchester will have the opportunity to affix his signature to papers that mean something and to solve all municipal matters that will not admit of delay. Proxy Collins will not practice any great reforms during his incumbency of the Mayor's office, as Dick Field and Eddie Moore will be on the job, and if the new chief looks dangerous the cables will get busy.

If the municipal dance to be held on Dorchester Day, June 10, is a success watch out for a series of municipal hops in the Fall and Winter of 1911-1912. Chairman Walsh and Trustee Curry of the Bath Department were very much impressed with the success of the dances run in the public gymnasiums in New York, and it would occasion no surprise to see the innovation introduced in Boston. The dances are attended by the gymnasium classes and they serve to stimulate interest in the athletic work.

A RINGLING CIRCUS EQUESTRIENNE AND HER ARABIAN HORSE

MISS LOU COTTRELL

STORK IS BUSY IN RINGLINGS' CIRCUS

Lion Cubs, Baby Llama, Infant Giraffe, Little Camels and Elephant Added.

The odd thing about Ringling Brothers' circus, which hits Boston to-morrow, is that one of the principal features of the whole show won't appear at all.

No, no, you're not going to be cheated. None of the cats or animals has been "canned" for the Boston engagement.

But the stork will not appear. He never does appear to the public in a regular circus.

One infant llama (three weeks old.)
One babe giraffe.
Two camels.
Baby elephant (smallest in captivity, etc.).

Nursery Force Busy.

Ever since the Ringling outfit pulled out from Winter quarters at Baraboo, Wis., the stork has been constantly on the job. Consequently the nursery department of the circus jungle has been rushed to death. Even now the head animal keeper is yelling for a bigger appropriation for his department. He claims, with some justice, that his part of the show is growing by leaps and bounds and that he can't maintain his family on its present allowance in these days of high grub.

Does the circus welcome these animal babies? Does a fish swim? Circus men know how humanity loves a baby, animal or otherwise. From the time when a boy or girl first sees a roly-poly pup or a mewing kitten, they love all animal young.

A camel is odd. A giraffe is a queer piece of Nature work. A llama is a sort of a high-brow sheep. An elephant is an elephant. Some are more elephantish than others.

But all these animals, in their infant days, are just animal babies, dear little, cunning little blinky-eyed, wobbly-legged pets that appeal to everyone with a soul above stewed prunes.

Oh, Very Well, Mr. P. A.

The Ringling press agent is probably saying as he reads this:

"Great Rhinoceri! Why doesn't this chap say something about the rest of the show, too—about our unparalleled, unequal, unequivocal, unexpressible, unutterable, unsoforth—about our acts and our troupes and our novelties and all that?"

Very well, if that's the case.

Ringling Brothers' circus will arrive to-morrow from Albany. It will show on the new circus grounds, corner of Ipswich and Lansdowne streets, Back Bay Fens. The show will be here one week. There will be performances afternoons and evenings at 2 and 8 p. m. The doors will be open an hour before the circus begins, to let you see the animals. Don't forget to stock up on peanuts for the elephants.

There will be a parade to-morrow morning. This parade will be over two miles long. It will number 1,286 people and 700 horses. There will be ten bands.

Fifty Clowns, Too.

Ringlings banks particularly this year on foreign novelties. There are 200 Europeans among the 375 performers. Chief among the new imported acts are Alfred Loyal's acrobatic and equestrian dog, William Emery's troupe of baby elephant actors, the Alex family of aerialists, the Delno troupe of high-air bar performers, the Phillis dancing and jumping horses, the Dietorelli family of Hungarian clowns, the Abreau family of Spanish acrobats, the Bonsetti company of gymnasts and Mijarez, the Mexican wire walker.

Clowns? Fifty of 'em. There is Spader Johnson with his barber-shop scream, Al Miaco, the dean of sawdust comedians, Jules Turnour, the pantomimist, whose life story has recently been written under the caption, "Autobiography of a Clown"; Carl Milvo and his clown gander; and George Hartzell, the grotesque man. Clowning is one of the features of the show.

The circus menagerie, in addition to those the stork brought, includes droves of camels and dromedaries, zebra en stripe, a bi-horned rhinoceros, a hippopotamus bigger than a load of hay, several ton of elephants and other queer brutes from "furrin parts."

Nothing will be missing, not even a peanut.

Here is the parade route:

Leave the show grounds by way of Ipswich street to Boylston road, to Boylston street, to Massachusetts avenue, to Park square, to Columbus avenue, to Massachusetts avenue, to Boylston street, to Boylston road, to Ipswich street and back to the grounds. The grounds are located on Boylston street, west of Massachusetts avenue. The parade will start from the grounds at 9.15 o'clock.

Heat Kills Seven in Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 27.—Seven persons died as a result of heat prostrations in Chicago to-day. At noon the thermometer registered 94 degrees. The weather forecaster declared that the heat wave would be broken by to-morrow.

'HOT DOG' DAYS ON RUBBER MILE ROAD

"Frankfurts Forever" Is New Business Slogan of B. & M. or Lunch Cart Line.

"Tom" Lawson invented "Frenzied Finance."

But the Boston & Maine goes him one better. "Frankfurter finance" is the B. & M.'s latest and best act. It's a scream, too, a 'doggone" scream—a "hot doggone" scream, in fact.

What really finances the Boston & Maine?

To be honest about it—and you may repeat this, too, if you wish—the B. & M. needs the money. Remember what President Charles Sanger Mellen told the Boston Chamber of Commerce at that banquet in the Hotel Somerset on April 13, last. He talked about great things to be done, about vast improvements, about large alliances and other expensive things.

Getting That $14,000,000.

A few weeks before that Frank Barr, third vice-president and general manager of the B. & M. outlined some hefty expenditures, which the road was to make in the near future. The figures deftly tossed off by Mr. Barr amounted to the neat sum of $14,000,000.

The public listened and chortled, saying: "Great! Great! That's an awful bundle of cash but cash is what railroads have in bales. Hurray for the improvement."

'Tis well enough to speak lightly of railroad cash and corporation wealth. But who thinks of how painfuly that cash is scraped together? Who is aware that the lunch cart rental at Fitchburg Union station is one of the important assets of the B. & M.?

Did it ever occur to you, Mr. Reader, how much that lunch cart rental means to the railroad? No, it never did.

Nor did it occur for a second to the Fitchburg Board of Trade and Merchants' Association. Else the F. B. T. & M. A. would never have forced the B. & M. to come right out in the open and reveal one of the secrets of frankfurt finance.

Trailing the Dogs.

It was thus: The Fitchburg Board of Trade and Merchants' Association started early this Spring to see what could be done about improving the appearance of Main street.

One of the first things they thought of was the lunch cart which had been in operation for a year at the Union station. The improvement committee reasoned as follows:

"This lunch cart is an eye-sore. The station premises are too, for that matter. Strangers coming into town gaze about them and say: 'Poor old Fitchburg.' This lunch-cart, standing right opposite the station, but on railroad limits, shuts off the view of the little flower park maintained by the city and is generally undesirable.

"Mr. Mellen has said so much about improvement and about big money to be spent that we'll ask the road to remove the lunch cart first of all."

So they went to it.

This lunch cart is owned by a private party who pays an annual rental to the B. & M. for the privilege of using railroad land as a location for the cart.

The B. T. & M. A. went straight to the railroad officials. Two months ago President Frank H. Foss, Herbert E. Jennison and Industrial Secretary Ernest L. Waitt of the Board of Trade came down to Boston. They waited on Frank Barr, the third vice-president and general manager. Mr. Barr, the committee says, took the lunch cart, "under advisement."

Time passed. Nothing doing. The lunch cart continued to dispense "hot dogs," "Trilbys" and such delicatessen and to sustain the B. & M. by its annual ground rent.

Dogs Linked to B. & M.

A month later Mr. Waitt came to Boston. He saw the assistant general-manager, who said blandly:

"The lunch cart has been ordered away."

Time kept on passing. But the lunch cart stuck. A week ago Mr. Waitt wrote to Mr. Barr, reminding him gently of the lunch cart treaty. Now Mr. Waitt is in receipt of the following letter from Mr. Barr:

Boston & Maine Railroad.
Office of the Third Vice-President and General Manager
Boston, Mass., May 22, 1911
Mr. Ernest L. Waitt, Industrial Secretary, Fitchburg Board of Trade and Merchants' Association.—Dear Sir.

With further reference to yours of the 11th.

The lunch cart you refer to brings to us a fair rental, and under existing business conditions and the endless demand of employes and the public, we are forced to use every honorable effort to increase our revenue, and at least until business revives we feel that every dollar possible must be earned. Under the circumstances, therefore, I trust that you will bear with the annoyance for a time. Yours truly
(Signed) FRANK BARR,
Vice-President and Gen. Mgr.

Mr. Waitt had the following comment to make yesterday over the phone:

"I suppose the road gets as much as $10 a month rental for that lunch-cart stand. The railroad property is in a disreputable condition here, especially the building used by the New York, New Haven & Hartford for its terminal freight offices. The whole place is slovenly. It seems as though the Boston & Maine might survive without the rental of that lunch-cart."

Frankfurts Forever.

There is only one ray of hope. Mr. Barr, in his letter, said: "We are forced to use every honorable effort to increase our revenue and, at least until business revives, we feel that every dollar possible must be earned."

When times get better and the B. & M. is on its corporation feet again and dividends have been restored to normal and freight "rubber miles" have been put in, then the road can get along without the lunch-cart rental.

But until then the line must be financed by frankfurter cash and the "dogs" will keep on barking.

It's the "Hot dog" road, the B. & M.

BROCKTON SHOES FOR TAFT.

BROCKTON, Mass., May 27.—President Taft will soon be presented with his first pair of shoes to go through a Brockton factory. The shoes are being made from measurements. They are of tan moose leather, of high cut and rubber soles, and expected to make an ideal golfing shoe. They are size 11, EE width, which is some shoe, the manufacturers say. Another pair in the process of construction, with considerably less area of leather, is to be presented to Major Archie Butt, the President's military aid.

FINANCIAL

"HIGH ROLLERS" HOLD CONTROL IN WHEAT

Can Dictate Values or Reap Handsome Profits on Their Holdings.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, May 27. There are two sides to the wheat market at the present time, and the man who moves slowly is not likely to have cause to regret such action. All that the bulls have behind them is the drought in sections of the Winter wheat belt and the fear of damage to that plant.

A man with a big long line of wheat would suffer severe losses in cases of heavy rain overnight. Every one in the wheat trade has gone home at one time or another with the sky clear and no sign of rain. Before daylight the next morning thunderstorms and fierce precipitations have been in order, and the blackboards in the visitors' room on the Board of Trade has shown that moisture where needed has fallen.

Wheat advanced sharply in the week just closed, May selling from 94¼c. up to 99¾c. July from 87⅝c. to 89½c., and September from 86¼c. to 88⅜c. These advances have been made wholly on the dry weather and fear of losses.

At the close last night there was no one in the trade who cared to put out short lines of any size. As long as the rains fail to put in an appearance, daily advances will be seen. There is a lack of moisture all over the Winter wheat belt. That plant is now in a condition where moisture must be had at once in order to prevent heavy crop losses.

Many Shorts Forced to Cover.

Many of the big men in the wheat trade at Chicago have been forced to cover short wheat and take losses during the past few days. The "high rollers" in the wheat market who accumulated big lines of the July and September at a much lower level than that now prevailing are now in a position not only to dictate values, but they are in a position to secure handsome profits at any time they may wish to dispose of their holdings.

Just who these large speculators are only a few men in the trade seem to know. They commenced to take on a line of July and September some weeks ago. They have been taking profits the past few days, but have at no time shown a disposition to force their holdings on the market.

Where one has had enough moisture for germination the present hot spell cannot do it any harm. Corn needs high temperature in order to start it onward and upward, and with rains later on, a crop is assured for the man who mows down the weed and ploughs thoroughly.

Corn in Promising Condition.

There are many farmers on the Board of Trade, and they as one man pronounce the crop in a promising condition. The price of this commodity has advanced during the week just closed, May selling from 51⅞ up to 55, July from 51½ to 54¾ and September from 52⅜ to 54¼.

Considerable strength has been gained by corn owing to the abnormal strength shown by oats. The country has refused to sell its cash corn for some little time, but heavy sales were reported Thursday and to-day.

Oats have attracted the attention of the speculative world in a marked manner during the last week. Sharp advances have been established. May sold at 33¼ to 36⅛, July at 33¼ to 36⅜ and September at 33⅛ to 36¼.

Not only have the larger shorts been driven to cover by the high temperatures and reports of drought throughout the oats country of the Southwest, but investors of the more conservative kind have bought quite freely and willingly come in on the advances which were established. Cash oats have sold more freely on Eastern shipping accounts.

While Patrick Cudahy, of Milwaukee, is still believed to be a big short on ribs for the deferred months, he is putting out additional short lines in the belief that prices are likely to work still lower. Cudahy believes in much cheaper hogs before snow flies, and this means much cheaper provisions. There are many in the provision mart, however, who differ with Cudahy in his ideas, and they, too, are backing up their opinions with their money.

The demand for cash meats and lard has improved wonderfully in the last two weeks, and this is likely to help values more than anything else now to be seen as an influence.

STOCK MARKET IS FACING DULLNESS

Coppers Giving Good Account of Themselves and Sentiment in Favor of Them.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, May 27. The stock market is again facing a Supreme Court decision and a dull period over the coming [illegible] American Tobacco case is expected to be handed down Monday, and in financial circles the general belief is that it will be in favor of the company. The purport of the decision is at least indicated by the one rendered on Standard Oil, and any deviation from that can only be favorable.

It is noteworthy that the $40,242,400 of outstanding common stock of the American Tobacco Company, or the 402,424 shares, sold at the record price of $520 per share a few days ago, or over five times the par value. With an annual distribution of 40 per cent. it is easy to see why the stock could attain such a price in the market, especially as it is pretty closely held and the company has a surplus of over $61,000,000. Even if the company should be cleared of being an "unreasonable" one, surely it is a monopoly of the most formidable kind.

Reasonable or Unreasonable?

It is going to require some very clever legal talent to discover which is a reasonable combination and one that is unreasonable with undue restraint of trade. Justice Harlan's dissent from the other members of the Supreme Court in the Standard Oil case wherein he says that it will throw the business of the country into confusion and invite widely extended and harassing litigation, the injurious effects of which will be felt for many years, may come to pass. In the meantime, however, business is getting a respite from the depression caused by the awaiting of this verdict and the stock market has taken on life and buoyancy.

The cut in steel prices ought to serve to stimulate the trade. It cannot hurt the big Steel Corporation to any great extent, as this company can procure the raw material as cheaply as any of its competitors and can produce the finished article at a less cost than the independents. The initiative taken by one of the latter in reducing prices ought to serve the U. S. Steel Corporation in the investigation at Washington by putting it on the defensive. The plea that "we are not in restraint of trade" can be strengthened by pointing out that the so-called independents really control the market for steel products and "we had to follow suit" in cutting prices.

Copper shares have given a good account of themselves and present conditions clearly indicate that there is a substantial basis for it. There is a quickened demand for the metal and at better prices. Both domestic and foreign deliveries are much larger than they were during April. With sentiment on the mend, which it surely is, the share market for these securities should lead. The American Tobacco decision out of the way then the managers of the copper merger will have good clear sailing and will speedily shape up the $1,000,000,000 combine.

There is still some fear that the Calumet & Hecla merger will not go through. Both Ahmeek and Osceola minority interests will fight it to a finish and in the event of the defeat of this combine some sharp upward moves would follow. The departure of Colonel Higginson, of the firm bearing his name, to Europe some time ago is believed to have been for the purpose of rounding up holdings of some of these securities abroad and to get a line on the Calumet & Hecla notes which the firm of Lee, Higginson & Co. placed a few years ago.

Spectacular Showings Free Gold in New Camp

Former U. S. Geological Survey Member Believes There Will Be Big Rush to Porcupine.

Dr. Walter Harvey Weed, formerly of the U. S. Geological Survey, has just returned from Porcupine where he has been engaged in examination work. He states that he is satisfied that the camp is going to make a large producer. He also believes that the spectacular showings of free gold will cause a great rush to the district when the railroad begins operating. Ultimately, however, he believes that Porcupine will resolve itself into a very large low grade proposition. He states that in all the developed properties, in addition to vein carrying free gold, that the wall rock is impregnated with pyrite carrying payable values in gold and readily amenable to cyanide treatment.

Regarding the fire which recently took place, Dr. Weed states that the principal damage was confined to the Hollinger property, where all the buildings were destroyed except the hay barn. The mill building was completely burned, the heavy machinery was damaged but little, but the electrical machinery was almost entirely destroyed. At the mine the hoist burned and the shaft was damaged slightly. The management at once started to repair this and by the following Sunday, work was well under way and new machinery was being brought in. A director of the company has placed the total damage at $175,000 and the delay at four months' time.

Dr. Weed stated that there are probably as many as 5,000 men in and about Porcupine, and that notwithstanding the present difficulties of reaching the camp, owing to the swampy condition of the country that large numbers of men are going in daily. In fifteen minutes' time he counted thirty-five men walking the track in the direction of Porcupine. Trains are now operating from Kelso to Frederick House River, a distance of twelve miles. The route is then by launches to Hills Landing, from which point there is an eight mile walk to the camp along the railroad grade.

STOCK "KITERS" NOW RESPECTABLE

Sugar, Tobacco and Other [illegible] Issues Now Dominated by Ordinary Investors.

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, May 27.—The importance of the small stockholder is growing by the force of his increasing numbers. And yet he is powerful without being influential simply because he has not tried his power or indeed is aware of it. There are already several huge corporations which he controls unconsciously. Perhaps it is not altogether fair to personify the stockholder as masculine. The roster of shareholders of the American Sugar Company shows 45 per cent are women. That this organization, of all others, should now be in the ownership of what is known loosely as the "average investor," is at once illustrative of public participation in corporations' affairs and of the strange changes wrought by the public in share lists.

As late as a decade ago the Havemeyers dominated the American Sugar Company absolutely. [illegible] was suspended at [illegible] when, for example, a [illegible] James R. Keene would catch the Havemeyers short of their shares they would make terms with him; make a settlement with the operator which would involve the taking over of the enormous amount of shares he had acquired while the officers of the company had gone short.

"Respectability" Grows.

The dividend record of the trust, however, gradually attracted investors who are to-day in possession of the $45,000,000 preferred and an equal amount of the common; that is to say, issues which were once the high sport of the stock exchange are now distributed in small lots among people who hardly know what dealing on margin means.

American Tobacco has gained the same respectability in a different sphere. About the same period when American Sugar was inoculating the financial district with a mental St. Vitus dance, tobacco certificates were imparting mental anguish of joy to blue chip speculators. In those days Tobacco directors did not scruple about making points.

Dividends would be passed or increased according to the exigencies of the situation on "change." A little move like declaring an extra payment of $20 a share—when the directory was long and the street short—seemed quite in order.

Those emotional sessions passed when it was officially discovered that much more money could be made in developing the company than in manipulating the company's stock. No manipulation could have accomplished what trade methods have achieved—advance the shares from under par to well above $500.

Small Stockholder Wins.

The insiders naturally saw the trend first. They bought Tobacco stock to keep and in keeping it conferred respectability on the organization. There has been no coup in the issue for years. But here the control is oligarchic.

American Telephone & Telegraph is like the American Sugar Company in the democracy of its constituents. The stockholders number about 50,000, an increase of 60 per cent. in four years, with women largely represented. The Harvester, the Steel Corporation, the Pennsylvania Railway, the Union Pacific, have enhanced their miscellaneous adherents since 1907 immensely, although the actual control still is with the wealthy few.

However, public representation is mounting irresistibly and inevitable. Soon it may be a test of the question whether the wealthy few are the fit few. There is a theatrical company in Germany known as the "Duke of Meiningens." The Duke some forty years ago conceived the idea of making supernumeraries—"supe," in terse American—of more importance than the salient roles. He thought the chorus should be restored to the honor in which the Greeks held it. They who saw the Meiningen performances can never forget them. The supernumeraries were really the luminaries. They actually dwarfed the so-called leading characters. The presentation of "Julius Caesar" was what Shakespeare really meant by the psychology of the mob. It was the same in "Jack Cade," in "Wallenstein," in the "Robbers." The growing ascendancy in America of the "outside" stockholders in big public corporations tempts the analogy of the Meiningen troupe who dominated the performance. All they need is hard drilling—sturdy experience. Then they can dispense with the services of the very wealthy stockholders.

Boston's Wool Market Has Emerged From Rut

Trade Now Realizes That New Clip Cannot Be Purchased at Old Clip Prices.

The wool market seems to have passed the rut and manufacturers are showing more interest in the local market than has been seen for a long time. Many reasons are offered by the trade in explanation of the more cheerful feeling, but the most plausible is that purchases have been made because of recent duplicate orders on goods. Some dealers are inclined to believe that the buying has been more or less speculative, because of manufacturers believing that bottom prices have been touched, and that the cheapest market in the world is in Boston to-day. Furthermore, old clip wool is to-day selling in Boston on a free trade basis.

Total volume of sales this week has been pretty close to 4,000,000 pounds, as compared with 2,000,000 pounds on an average for the past two weeks. Transfers have been fairly well distributed. Buyers for several prominent mills have been in the district shopping and prospects for further sales are deemed good.

So far the increased activity has been without much effect upon prices. The trading is, of course, still in the old clip, and as most of the houses are anxious to get rid of their holdings there has not been much quibbling over quotations. Prices are also several cents out of line with what is being paid for the new clip out West, which is moving very freely.

It has become evident that the new clip cannot be bought here and sold at the same level at which remaining supplies of last year's wool can be had. The old wools are to-day a little cheaper than the new ones and this fact is at last impressing the manufacturers, few of whom are at all well supplied with wool. As to [illegible] the cheapness of the old wools, the danger of any immediate change in the wool tariff seems to be passing. Mills are quoting very low prices on all their lines, in fact, the prices are so low that the margin of profit for the manufacturers is exceedingly slim. It is essential, therefore, that they get their raw material at prices that will enable them to hold at these prices, since an advance might hinder any improvement that might follow postponement of action on the tariff.

The market has been fairly active, with sharp fluctuations in Hollinger and Rea Mines. The former declined to 11½ as a result of a fire which destroyed the company's buildings. The damage is estimated at about $175,000. The stock rallied and closed the week practically [illegible] from last Saturday. The decline to [illegible] in Rea was due to a report that the fire extended to this property, which was not true, and the stock quickly advanced to [illegible] and finishes the week at about the same as last Saturday. Foley O'Brien advanced to $1.50 on the belief that new interests have gained control of the company, thus ending the forced selling of the past few weeks.

The ease with which the market absorbed the large block of steel sold [illegible] and skeptical financiers [illegible] at the real [illegible] of the steel makers in reducing prices.

There are certain alliances between the controlling interests of the Republic Iron & Steel Company and a group of stock market operators who have recently [illegible] It was [illegible] to explain the attitude of the Republic Iron & Steel Company [illegible] was [illegible] one that the [illegible] was a manoeuvre for the benefit of Congress.

Toward the end of the week financiers expressed [illegible] that at the [illegible] but for steel because it is an initial step in the direction of prosperity and will encourage the railroads to put in their orders for material, which have been so long delayed.

Offerings Rapidly Absorbed.

Weakness of Steel caused sympathetic selling of other standard issues. All offerings were absorbed rapidly. This reassured traders and investors who had "missed their market" and were waiting for a reaction. Their purchases, together with those made by the leading bull interests, advanced the market to a level within a point or two from the final price of the previous week.

One reassuring development of the last week was the marked improvement in connection with the market for copper metal. Large sales of the metal have been made at 12½ cents a pound, which is [illegible] cent above the price prevailing [illegible] the Standard Oil decision was handed down.

Improvement in the copper metal market is due to the disposition on the part of leading copper producers to get together and work for the upbuilding of the selling end of the trade instead of devoting all their energies to the curtailment of production.

All Copper Shares Strong.

Because of this improvement in copper, all copper shares have been strong, both on the inside as well as the outside market.

Leading railroad officials have decided the time is opportune for a resumption of improvements that were stopped [illegible] [illegible] Commerce [illegible] Missouri Pacific [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Speyer & Co., which [illegible] been very quickly.

The Union Pacific quickly followed with the sale of $25,000,000 of Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation company 4 per cent. first and refunding mortgage bonds to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Baring Brothers & Co., Ltd.

A decision in the American Tobacco Company case more favorable than that handed down in the Standard Oil is expected by Wall Street, and the stock has [illegible] it the past week by advancing to the highest price in its history, or $520 a share.

M'INTYRE (peeking out door)—Come in heah, niggah, come on in heah. Ah beg of yo' fo' to come in. Ah beg of you to come in. Ah say to you, Ah hab drawn mah trusty razuh and Ah insis' on mah pleasure. Again, Ah begs of you to come in.

HEATH (entering)—Did Ah heah a call?

M'INTYRE—Yass, you done heerd a call, de las call you ebber am to heah.

HEATH—What seems to be de trubble—are you sick?

M'INTYRE—You ask me dat, you loud lookin' niggah? Dog gone but you a loud lookin' niggah! Ah beg of you to tell me where you got 'at loud lookin' horse blanket you got on. Dem's de loudest looking checks Ah ebbah see on a coat. Golly, you mus' hab to wear two of dem coats—one check one day and de other check de nex day. You ax me what am de trouble. Ah done gone tell you after Ah carve mah name in yoh 'natomy.

HEATH—Befo' de obissquees begin, Ah wish to instruct my man-in-waitin'. Pahdon. (Looks out door) "John! Oh, John!! Hold dat hearse dere a lil' while longer—we will hab one mo' passenger." (Turns to McIntyre) Now, you sickly lookin' smoke, what am yo' pleasure?

M'INTYRE—It am no question of pleasure—dat you know. Ah was standin' by de corner grocery sto' dis mawnin', smokin' mah seegar and a solil'quizin' in mah thots. All de world seemed gay and chippuh. All of a sudden Ah looks down de street, an' lo, to mah surprize, who do Ah see comin' down de street but mah finance, Ruth Anne Morgan, and hooked to her aam was de loudest lookin' niggah Ah ebbuh see. Dog gone, he was loud! Dat nigguh was you.

Ah said nuthin' dat any one could take 'ception to. Evahbody know she's mah finance. Ah wuz mort-m'fied beyon' measuh, but all Ah do was say, "Oo-oo! OO-OO!" An' den what did 'at nigguh do—dat loud-dress nigguh? He reaches down an' picks up a tomata.

HEATH—I do remembah such a thing comin' to pass. Ah also remembah tossin' it at a fellah. Was dat you?

M'INTYRE—'At nigguh nebbuh rush things. He was as deelibrate as anythin' Ah evah see'd. He picked out a tomata—not de first one 'at comes to han;' he selects a veteran tomata, he shove all de youthful tomatas away from dis choice ob his—an' den he picks up a ancient, feeble-minded tomata and heaves it at me. Oh-h-h-h!! Ah thot Ah see stahs—but dey wuz only tomata seeds. Dat nigguh was a regular professional tomata tosser. Ah hab been hit by evah veg'table in de mahket, but nebbuh wif a tomata. Ah had no idee what a long, lingering sensation it would leave behind. And dat tomata struck—full on mah ches'. Dat tomata was so sickly dat it was bound to collapse.

HEATH—Why, Ah noticed 'at stain Ah had a idee it was fruit stain. Ah wondered where yo' got it

HEATH—Is it indelible?

M'INTYRE—No, it am not indelible; it am a stain on my ches' 'at nuthin' can wash out

HEATH—An' you say you discovered the identity ob dis tomata tossuh?

M'INTYRE—Yass, an' you know how Ah discovered it—by his loud clothes—dats how Ah keeps dat nigguh in mah mind.

HEATH—An' you say this young woman is yo' finance?

HEATH—Well, is de match off?

HEATH—What fo'?

M'INTYRE—Oh—just simply

HEATH—Simply fo' what?

M'INTYRE—Simply fo' cause

HEATH—What was de cause?

M'INTYRE—Cause I didn't spend all de money Ah ain't got on her. She N. Y. anyhow

HEATH—You mean coquette.

M'INTYRE—I mean croak ket—croak—croak — let her croak! She hab got a haht in her bosom no bigguh dan a mustard seed Do you know what she got 'stead of a haht? Ice house! Ice house'! It am now mah idee to do a lil' carvin' on de pussun of mah hated rival in love.

HEATH—Do you direct yo' remahks to me, suh?

M'INTYRE—Dat Ah do, an' Ah beg ob yo' fo' to be on yoh gahd.

HEATH—Dere am little danger. Dat's a safety razuh you hab dere—besides, just pahdon me again fo' a moment (looks out door), "John! John! Just trow mah biggest lion ten buckets ob raw meat, and add some horse radish to it."

M'INTYRE—What yo' all am, lion tamuh?

HEATH—The greatest livin'.

M'INTYRE—Well, dere am no use quarrelin' 'bout 'at tomata. As long as dere was nobody badly hurt wif de impact ob de tamata, it am bes' to say no mo' 'bout it.

HEATH—Whatever yo' pleasure, suh.

M'INTYRE—Dat am my pleasure. It am mah pleasuse to say no mo' about Ruth Anne Morgan and dat tomata!

Grin's Modern Fairy Tales--The Sleeping Beauty

ONCE upon a time there was a Multi-millionaire who had a very beautiful daughter. Her Mother had been a poor girl, and so, when she married the Multi-millionaire, she became so proud and distant and haughty that she was the biggest Arctic proposition in the whole hemisphere.

Myrtle, for that was the daughter's name, was educated at home and then in a private, ultra-select school. When she made her debut they had to put weather stripping along the folding doors to keep from freezing the banquet, in preparation in the culinary department.

To those in her set she was always frigidly polite, accompanied them to balls and theatre parties with her chaperon, thanked them graciously, but never for a moment did she loosen up with a smile or otherwise give evidence of being human.

One by one the young men gave up in despair. If they talked of love she appeared bored; if they talked of riches she looked scornful; if they talked of marriage she frowned disdainfully.

Then came a trip abroad. She visited the great European capitals, met Barons, Dukes, Earls, Lords, Grand Dukes and even Princes. To all of them she was ever, cool, frigidly polite, unsmiling and ready with the negative answer to their proposals.

When a certain young Prince asked for her hand and she refused, her Mother appeared a bit worried, for the first time.

"Do not be rash, my dear daughter," said her Mother, "remember there are few Princes to be had. With this one you might form an alliance with a royal family. I do not want to urge you, but had you not better reconsider? You are already called the 'Sleeping Beauty,' because they say your heart is asleep."

"I know I have been called the 'Sleeping Beauty,' dear Mother," replied Myrtle, "but I cannot help it. I am as I am. There is nothing to awaken in me. Young men have pleaded love, have even kissed the tips of my fingers, but I cannot awaken to a responsive feeling of love."

"She is still the 'Sleeping Beauty,'" sighed her Mother, "and she might have married a Prince, or an Earl."

"You let her alone," said her father, the Multi-millionaire, "if she doesn't care to marry why should she?"

"Yes, but old maids get so foolish when they get to be about forty, and run away with the ashman or something," complained Myrtle's mother.

"Bah!" was the Multi-millionaire's tender response.

One day, when Myrtle had become known on both hemispheres as "The Sleeping Beauty," when the papers had pictured her as such and everyone alluded to her by that title, her father sent his new secretary up from the office to get some papers he had left. The servants had to ask Myrtle about them. Myrtle had to see the curly-haired, red-cheeked young secretary about them. Then she went to the phone and asked her father about it. Finding it was all right, she got the papers and handed them to the secretary.

"You are decidedly clever, Miss Myrtle," said the secretary "few young ladies would have the brains to telephone and find out if they were being bunked, as you did."

"Thanks," said Myrtle, for the first time in her life a bit abashed. "I—I do thank you. You are the first person who ever credited me with brains."

The young secretary bowed and left the house. Not long after that he came again on an errand, and, as he was leaving he stammered: "Really, Miss Myrtle, when I told you you had brains I did not mean that you lacked beauty. Will you forgive me?" and the handsome young rascal had the audacity to clasp her hand. Then he squeezed her hand, then he clasped Myrtle in his arms and kissed her full upon her proud, red lips. Again and again he kissed her, expecting every moment to be thrown from the house, but as he showered kisses upon the startled Myrtle, the first she had ever known, she returned his embrace, and when he ceased kissing her she pouted her lips in invitation for him to resume.

"I am no more the 'Sleeping Beauy,'" she told him, in rapture, "you have awakened me," and again they clinched.

It was true. For years the mush-headed young men in society had paid court to her as one would pay court to a cactus blossom, at a distance. None had had the courage to embrace her or to kiss her until along came her Multi-millionaire father's handsome young secretary. Being an impetuous and brave youth, and knowing a good thing when he saw it, he rushed in where the mush-head wooers had feared to venture.

The next day there was an elopement, the papers were full of the story of the awakening of the "Sleeping Beauty," her mother was full of anguish and temper, but her father—dear, rough old Multi-mililonaire dad—he just grinned and said: "By jinks, I'm glad some one woke her up."

"How did you do it?"

"Let me put you wise," answered the sec. in a rather intimate but sapient manner; "if you hold a cake of ice in a fond embrace long enough it will surely melt."

Whereupon the multi-millionaire smiled and breathed confidentially into his cuff.

"Now I've got him where I want him. He won't dare win any of my stenographers from me."

Trackless Tracy-The Delectable Detective

The Delicatessen Detective Library--Price One Cent

CHAPTER I.

"BOW-WOW!"

No, the scene is not laid in Siberia. This bloodhound was raised in Saugus, Massachusetts, but he is a perfectly good bloodhound and just now he is in Pittsburg, trailing a—but hold, not so fast. All in good time you will learn what he is trailing.

CHAPTER II.

"COME Pansy, Pansy, Pansy!"

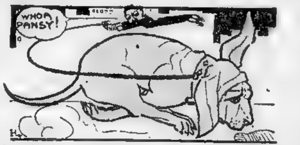
In dulcet sound-waves the words come echoing and reverberating through the dense smoke of Pittsburg's most exclusive residential district.

It is our rugged and stern hero. Trackless Tracy the Delectable Detective.

He is calling the Siberian bloodhound.

You laugh, Gentle Reader, because the author spoke of the Siberian bloodhound in the last chapter as a "he" and now calls him "Pansy," but, alas and alack, the Siberian bloodhound was named "Pansy" by a little child in his (the bloodhound's) puppyhood.

Pansy comes to his master, prancing gaily and wagging his tail as is the wont of Siberian bloodhounds.



CHAPTER III.

"PANSY," it is our stern hero talking, "Pansy, you must bark louder here in Pittsburg, else I will lose you and also myself.

With these words Pansy set forth again and his joyful barking as he went about his awful task of running down a human soul could be heard through the thick atmosphere for a block.

Every once in a while and sometimes twice as often Pansy would pause as though in doubt, when Trackless Tracy would hurry forward and surreptitiously slide from his pocket a worn tennis shoe.

It was the shoe of the poor wretch they were trailing.

With a sniff of this to freshen his memory of the scent Pansy would dash away on his terrible task.

"Never fear, William Squabington, I will track your son!" hissed Trackless Tracy, gritting his teeth and shaking his clenched fist until it seemed the purple seams in his yellow gloves would actually burst with the pressure.

CHAPTER IV.

I'M DISGRACED

"MEET me at our rendezvous at a quarter after the hour," whispered our hero into the alert ears of Pansy.

The noble dog understood. With a yelp of gratification he dashed off and was soon lost to view behind a cloud of ebony-hued smoke.

"My man," said Trackless Tracy, to a taxi driver, "hurry me to the station."

In a few moments our hero was at the railroad station. Making his way hurriedly to the ticket office he was greeted effusively by the gentlemanly ticket seller.

"Don't stand there like a hen with the pip. If you don't want nothing in the way of tickets, beat it and give some other poor boob a chance," said the courtly ticket seller, in the usual pleasant manner of such employes.

"Squabington," said Tracy, smiling haughtily to the ticket seller, who paled perceptibly through the haze—because Squabington controlled that railroad.

"Well, what of it?" asked the ticket seller, in fear and trembling.

"Has his son Percy just bought a ticket for New York?" asked Tracy.

"No," said the ticket man, at great length.

IT was a terrible blow.

Trackless Tracy, the Delectable Detective, had staked his all on that chance and he had failed.

CHAPTER V.

WHAT devilish plot is this?

Are they putting up a plot to run down the old man's only son?

They are; but pray be calm.

"Get him. Get him if it takes six months," snarled old Squabington. "I want to know about this. I want the whole truth, no matter how horrible it is, and even if it is my own son."

"I will get him within six months and you shall know all," asserted our stern hero, taking up his blue felt hat and pink enameled cane.

"See that you do, and here is a check," were the terrible words of the stern old steel magnate.

Distasteful as it was, Trackless Tracy summoned up his iron courage and took the check; also his departure.

CHAPTER VI.

FOUR months have elapsed.

Is he not brave?

Every day for four months Trackless Tracy and Pansy, the terrible Siberian bloodhound, have tracked Percy Squabington from one dark corner to another of Pittsburg.

Over and over that fair brunette city our wonderful hero and his Saugus-bred Siberian bloodhound have tracked Percy. From his home to the golf links, thence to the ball grounds, to the club, the theatre, a pretty house on a nice street and back home again.

Finally our stern hero has completed his daring case.

Four months—the same four mentioned at the opening of this thrilling chapter—from the time he had visited old man Squabington in his private office to a day, and the case was completed.

CHAPTER VII.

"THE time has come," muttered our rugged hero, patting the bows of his oxfords into shape.

"I will see him and I will tell him all," and Trackless Tracy, the Delectable Detective, stepped into a drug store and drank three orange phosphates to calm his nerves and give him courage.

"He will see you," said the office boy, trying hard not to giggle as he ushered our hero into the presence of William Squabington, the great steel magnate.

"Well?" snapped Squabington.

Trackless Tracy sighed.

"I will, I will. For four months I have followed him. Not once has he sent a note to a chorus or burlesque girl." Not once has he spoken to one. He has not left the city except to take a little automobile trip into the country on innocent pleasure. He has not even written to New York. And—and"——

Our hero paused. Old Squabington, pale and cringing from the terrible message, said: "And what?"

"He is going to marry a perfectly respectable, good, charming Pittsburg girl!"

With a cry of despair, old man Squabington sunk back into his morocco desk chair. Finally he sat up, wrote a check for our brave hero, and, as he motioned him to the door, he cried brokenly:

"Merciful margins, this is awful! You are right. My boy is no true son of Pittsburg!"

TY-GER COBB played some great baseball again the other day against the Yankees. He scored three runs and spiked only two men in doing it. Mr. Cobb is regarded as the fleetest base runner in the league. If he continues spiking all the others, the chances are he will maintain that eminent position

Cobb's methods in baseball are an innovation. He is the first to perfect a system of cutting down an opponent's lead by cutting down their best players. When he made his debut in the big league the critics said that Cobb would leave his mark in baseball. He has, and he's left it on many a player.

When the average base runner tries to steal second it's merely an athletic feat. But when Cobb tries it is a cross between manslaughter and mayhem.

The reports of a Detroit victory usually contain more casualties than the reports of a Mexican insurrecto conquest.

Where the Detroits play and Cobb is in the line-up the box score, in addition to base hits, runs, putouts, etc., should also contain a list of the maimed, wounded, killed and missing.

In the future, when the Detroits are billed to play ball, an announcement like this should be made:

"BATTERY FOR DETROIT: MULLEN AND STANAGE."

"ASSAULT AND BATTERY: TY COBB"

AN authority claims that the happiest marriages are those in which the woman made the advances. So, young men, be careful. If you want to be happy don't marry the woman you want to propose to, but wait for the lady who wants to propose to you. Then if the marriage is a failure you can blame it on her. And it's no more than right that women should do the proposing. With tight trousers coming in again, proposing is likely to be a tear-ble thing for the men. A man won't be able to go down on his knees without ripping his trousers, while a woman can propose without going down on her knees.

KANSAS has discovered a new tipple, the principal ingredient of which is the prune.

This discovery is quite the most important step that has yet been made toward the reduction of the high cost of living

It will give the hitherto much despised prune a new importance. No more will the finicky boarder jibe and scoff when the prunes appear at dinner. With this liquor in general use the prunes, instead of being flouted and rejected, will become a permanent feature of boarding-house fare, for which, when served with a syphon, the boarders will be charged extra.

And hereafter it may frequently occur that when a man is arrested and brought into court, and the Judge demands what the prisoner has done, the officer will reply, "He is full of prunes, Your Honor."

A man, when telling his friends of a big night, instead of saying, "I had a peach last night," he will have to say, "I had a prune last night."

And if that new tax on champagne goes through and makes the price prohibitive, instead of inviting our friends to a "wine supper," we will have to invite them to a "prune supper."

Unfortunately, it may cause complications. For instance, a lady in an unguarded moment may innocently observe that she is fond of prunes, whereupon her friends will immediately remark, "It's too bad—she drinks."

INSTEAD of city-paid bands the Mayor wants volunteer bands to play in the parks this Summer. That's a very good idea. The parks are overcrowded in the Summer and this would be an effective means of eliminating that evil. With amateur bands playing in all our parks we could be assured of plenty of breathing room for anybody who wanted to go there.

Of course if the Mayor's plan for amateur bands is put into execution there will be a storm of protest, because some citizens believe that our parks are places for pleasure and not for torture. They want to go to the parks to get the "air," not to hear it ruined. There are enough murders occurring daily in this town without giving those who are homicidally inclined a further incentive.

The Mayor well knows that we already have too many citizens whose "heads are filled with vice and crime," but with the installation of amateur bands we fear that there would not be a citizen whose head and heart would not be filled with murder the day that those bands would first disport themselves.

There is little enough harmony in our civic life without forcing discord upon us.

As the Mayor says, we can easily organize a number of bands. There would be no trouble about that We have enough wind instruments drawing salary down at the City Hall to supply more than we need. And the idea could be developed with profit in many directions. For instance, we could organize a number of police bands. The police don't seem to be able to get within hailing distance of the crooks any other way, but if our policemen were to assemble in the parks, in shady nooks and leafy bowers and there discourse sweet music, perhaps the crooks would be tempted to come within range.

Bands of White Wings might be organized and drilled so effectively that they might for once be able to sweep the town playing "White Wings, They Never Grow Weary."

The Directors' Band of the Carnegie Trust Company would make an awful hit by playing overtures from "The Robbers."

The Board of Estimate, if carefully rehearsed, would be a knockout with "Please Go Away and Let Me Sleep."

The Tammany leaders of the Bronx would be a riot parading past Murphy's wigwam playing "I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard."

CHARACTERS.

Far-i-na-ceous,* her father, who sings in French, 230 pounds.

Indian girls and boys, not less than 200 pounds each; kings, couriers, villagers, cottagers, apartmenters, two-family-housers, bungalow-brows, suburban developers, and others.

[* If we are to go by the story writers, the Indians beat the English to the hyphen in their names.]

PROPERTIES.

Large rock, of re-inforced concrete; dagger, suitable for stabbing a fat man; bushel of unpawnable diamonds; costumes of great cubic contents; one artificial grape, to be plucked by Far-i-na-ceous during the vineyard scene; voices; salaries in large baskets.

I AM ASLEEP
OH HUSH-SHE SLEEPS

NOTE.—Owing to the extreme length of the performance, only extracts can be given here. Persons desiring to obtain complete copies of the book, or the entire score, should send a four-horse dray to this office.

The first extract is taken from Act I., the scene being the forest near the Indian village of Bella Vista, on the banks of the Ohio, Wisconsin, N. Y., U. S. A. An-at-o-my is reclining upon the concrete rock, like a pumpkin on a trellis. Pietro Joblots, the villain of the piece, is an Indian who weighs 315 pounds. He is seen approaching with stealthy footsteps, making no more noise than a stove falling down the cellar steps. As he approaches he sings in a terrific bass. His songs are here freely translated into the vernacular.

PIETRO [in a thunderous roar]:

But hush, she sleeps,
But hush, she sleeps;
I have o'ertaken her,
But shall not waken her
Oh, hush!
Oh, hush!!
Oh, HUSH, H-U-S-H!!!

AN-AT-O-MY [reclining on rock]: I am asleep.

PIETRO: She is asleep. [Voice from the gallery: "It ain't his fault."]

CHORUS: She is a—SLEEP!

PIETRO [with great difficulty kneeling by the rock and gazing upon the lovely Indian maid who overlaps it, breaks into the famous serenade]:

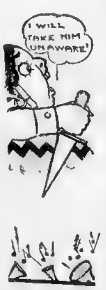
Sleep on, girl, who in my heart nestles,
I am he who with love of thee wrestles,
Of thy heart I will cross the trestles
My kid of candy!



I WILL TAKE HIM UNAWARE!

CHORUS. His kid—
PIETRO: My—
CHORUS: —of—
PIETRO: —kid—
CHORUS: —CA-A-A-AN—PIETRO: —OF—
CHORUS: —DEE-EE-EE!
PIETRO: CANDY!

AN-AT-O-MY: I sleep,
I dream. [Voice from gallery. "I don't wonder."]

The next extract is taken from the same act. Far-i-na-ceous is lumbering gracefully through the forest—the trees being fortunately wide apart—when he catches sight of Pietro Joblots, who is almost as invisible as an elephant in a potato-patch.

PIETRO [looking at Far-i-na-ceous as fiercely as a well-fed eupeptic cat]:
Ha! there he is!

FAR-I-NA-CEOUS:
Ha! there he is!

PIETRO:
I will steal upon him like the panther,
the panther,
I upon him my vengeance shall wreak,
But silence, I must not speak,
I must not speak,
must not speak,
not speak,
speak!

CHORUS: SPEAK!

PIETRO: [drawing large dagger for which Big Tim Sullivan would require him to have at least two licenses]: I will take him unaware. [Voice from gallery: "Take his underwear!"]

CHORUS: He will take him unaware.

PIETRO: [confronting Far-i-na-ceous]:
I am about you to kill,
I am about you to kill,
I am about you to kill,
Without your knowledge.

CHORUS Without his knowledge.

FAR-I-NA-CEOUS: You are about me to kill,
You are about me to kill,
You are about me to kill,
Without my knowledge?

PIETRO. Yes, you know it not,
Yes, you know it not,
Yes, you know it not,
But I am about you to kill.

CHORUS: KILL.

FAR-I-NA-CEOUS: You are going to kill me,
And I don't know it

[Voice from gallery: "Well, he's tellin' you, ain't he?"]

PIETRO [stabbing Far-i-na-ceous]: Die, die, die, Die, die, die,

FAR-I-NA-CEOUS: I am dead. [Voice from gallery: "We knew that long ago."]

The next extract gives the famous duet between An-at-o-my and Pietro Joblots. The scene is laid in an Indian tepee, which is simply furnished in the style of Louis Cans. An-at-o-my is partially dressed in a jupe-culotte, which is considerably more culotte than jupe. She arises from a pink silk buffalo robe, as Pietro rolls in through the surf.

PIETRO: By all the stars, I love thee, sweet—

PIETRO: I love you more than I love to eat—

AN-AT-O-MY: Lee lee lee lee lee lee lee lee lee.

CHORUS: Lee lee lee lee lee lee lee lee lee

PIETRO: I am wasting away from love of thee—

AN-AT-O-MY: Lee lee lee lee lee lee lee lee lee.

PIETRO: I only weigh three hundred and three—

ALL: Lee lee lee lee lee lee lee lee lee!

The Adventures of Harold Hangover

By William F. Kirk.

In Which Harold Introduces the "Beer Ball."

CHAPTER XI.

IT WAS noon in Cincinnati. Shimmering heat waves rose above the level of the asphalt pavements, and in the distance the breweries reared their proud, purple heads. Save for the snores of a tired German taking his siesta in a vacant vat, all nature was at rest.

Everybody who went to the station to see the train come in—and many still cling to that quaint old custom in the Ohio city—became galvanized into new life and energy by the sight they saw as the New York Giants piled from their private car and paraded toward their waiting taxicabs, led by Manager McGraw and Harold Hangover. The tall, handsome pitcher from Oshkosh was attired in a suit of some soft, clinging material that just wouldn't hold its creases, and the natty little manager of the team was dolled up to the minute. The contrast between our hero and his leader occasioned some comment, which passed unnoticed.

"Gee, but it's hot!" exclaimed McGraw. "Where is your friend Raymond?"

"He has passed me up," replied Harold. "I had three hundred dollars in gold when I left Oskosh, and I promised Raymond that I would leave it in his care for safe keeping. Not long after I had made the promise, I lost the three hundred, and since then Mr. Raymond has treated me kind o' cold."

"I begin to understand," said McGraw.

CHAPTER XII.

THE game was about to begin, and McGraw was pacing up and down in front of the visiting players' bench like one possessed.

Mathewson, the peerless blonde hero of a hundred or more wars, had not put in an appearance, and he had promised to be on the job promptly at game time.

"Maybe he's playing checkers with the Mayor," suggested Latham.

CLOUD
IT IS GETTING DARK

"Say, Mac," suggested Raymond, "give me two dollars for car fare and I'll find him for you—honest I will."

"Cut the comedy!" snapped McGraw. "I don't want a comedian—I want a pitcher. Who will volunteer?"

"I will volunteer!" came from the low, deep voice of Harold Hangover. "One week ago to-day, Mr. McGraw, you insulted me because I showed up late at the grounds over in Boston. To-day the anniversary of that never-to-be-forgotten afternoon, to-day I choose to heap coals of fire upon your head. Mathewson is later to-day than I was a week ago. You called me brutally. You will not call Mathewson, because he is an actor. I was a nobody from the West. He is the idol of the East. But let me tell you one thing, Mr. McGraw, many an honest heart beats under a Vest—I west—I mean under a Western vest. I pitched yesterday—I pitched Wednesday. My arm is numb with extra exertion right now. But I, I, Harold Hangover, I will pitch the Giants to victory!"

CHAPTER XIII.

AT the beginning of the seventh inning the score was tied, neither team having counted. A nasty looking cloud was traveling rapidly up from the horizon, and it was getting dark.

"Boys," said Umpire O'Shay, "it is getting dark."

"That's the only good decision you have made for a year," said McGraw. "What do you care if it is? You can see just as well in the dark as you see in the daylight."

"The game will be called at the end of the seventh," said Umpire O'Shay, ignoring the unkind slur. "Now, play ball!"

The Cincinnati pitcher, cheered on by the plaudits of the local fans and the encouraging words of his manager, Clarke Griffith, was pitching wonderful ball. Only two hits had been made off his delivery, both of which Harold Hangover had made with his birch bat. With two men out in the seventh, Chief Meyers walked, stole second, stole third and waited for the signal to steal home. It was not necessary. The birch bat of Harold Hangover crashed against a fast shoot, and the ball went over the centre fielder's head like a porch climber going over the wooden scrollwork of a veranda. TWO RUNS! The next man up struck out, but Harold was happy. He had saw his duty, and he had did it.

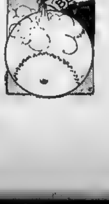
"That ought to win the game for us," muttered Harold Hangover, as he strode to the pitcher's box to pitch the last part of the seventh inning and have everything over with. "If the worst comes to the worstest, I can always use my new ball."

Little did Harold know that trouble was looming up on the horizon, but it was. The first man up, a stolid German named Valentine Vatt, bunted an easy grounder down toward Devlin, and that usually reliable infielder kicked it a mile with his new baseball shoes. "I heard the coacher hollering 'bunt it!'" he explained afterward to McGraw. "I thought that it was your voice addressing me and saying 'punt it!' Then the memory of my old football days at Georgetown"——

But what Devlin said to McGraw by way of explanation, and what McGraw said back to Devlin by way of exclamation, is neither here nor there.

With Vatt on second base, Harold put a little extra snuff on the ball and the next batter sneezed out, but, unfortunately for the visitors, Meyers, the catcher, also sneezed, and the ball went to the stand, Vatt taking third base.

"The snuff isn't working well to-day," said our hero. "I guess the only thing left is a gamble. Now for my new 'Beer Ball.' If it doesn't work in Cincinnati, it won't work anywhere."



Reaching into his pocket, Harold Hangover produced a handful of foam which he had brought out to the game from the rathskellar where he had luncheoned. "Three Germans in a row for me to take care of," he mused, as he rubbed the foam on the horsehide. "But, with this stuff on the ball they'll go after anything I throw, no matter how far outside I keep it."

Sure enough, the next three batters swung at the first ball pitched, and all three popped up easy fouls.

* * *

"That new 'Beer Ball' is a great thing, Harold," said Manager McGraw, as the Giants were riding back to the hotel. How did you keep the foam in your pocket?"

"When I used to drink," said Raymond, without waiting for Harold's answer, "I used to just breathe on the ball."

THRILLING PLAYS IN BASEBALL-- As Told by Well-Known Characters on the Diamond

By FRED SNODGRASS.
Centrefielder of the Giants.

THE play in baseball that will always linger in my mind as the greatest was the one made by "Red" Murray of our team when we were playing in Pittsburg against the Pirates. It was a black, threatening day, and it looked as if the clouds would burst any moment. The score was 1 to 0 in the Giants' favor. The bases were full of Pirates with two out, and, just as the skies seemed to get darker than ever, old bow-legged Hans Wagner strode to the plate, swinging two huge bats.

It looked like dark doings for us. It was so black you could hardly see an arm's length before you. Hans took a cinch in his belt and a tweak at his cap and squared away for the first ball. They needed one run to tie, and two to beat us. Murray and I were straining our very eyes out trying to keep track of the ball as it left the pitcher's hand. I can just remember seeing Wagner's big body twist as he swung at that first ball.

Bang went his bat and away went the ball. Murray and I started after it with our hearts in our mouths. Murray must have eyes like an eagle, for he soon outdistanced me and was making for the centre field fence. Then there came a terrific flash of lightning and the worst roar of thunder that I ever heard. It nearly scared me stiff, but not Murray. The flash lit up the grounds like a sunny day, and with the flash I saw Murray's bare hand go out as he leaped into space. I do not know which made the most noise, the thunder or the fans. But in that one flash we could all see old "Red" rolling in the grass, holding the ball aloof. It was the most glorious catch I ever saw.

Hans Wagner will swear to that, too.

By CONNIE MACK,
Manager of the world's champion Athletics.

I DON'T know whether you would call this a remarkable play or not, but as an example of daring base running, amounting almost to impudence, I've got to tell of the shortest three-base hit on record. Wee Willie Keeler made it. We were on the Hilltop playing the Yankees, about three years ago. Willie was at bat. He had been fussing around trying to pick out a good one to lay down along the baseline for a bunt. Finally, as if to fool everybody, Willie swung at one with force enough to send it over the fence if the bat had met the ball squarely.

But it fooled Willie a bit. The ball struck the bat close to the handle, flopped down in front of the home plate and spun around like a top about six inches in front of the home plate, where it remained. Willie made a mad dash for first base. Our catcher turned to the umpire and said:

"That struck foul."

"It struck fair," returned the umpire.

"I say it struck foul," said our catcher.

"Being as my eyes are perfectly good, I say that it struck fair," came back the umpire.

There they wrangled, like two school boys, and all the time Willie was tearing up the dust for first. He took one peek over his shoulder as his foot touched the base and he took in the situation in a flash. Right on to second he bolted while our brave catcher and the ump were saying: "I say she struck foul," and "I say she struck fair." Willie took another sly glance over his shoulder as he rounded second. Not a stop did he make. Like a deer he darted for third. By this time we had taken in the situation, and some one rescued the ball, which still lay six inches in front of the plate. The ball and Willie arrived at the same time but the nervy little fellow by taking a wide slide made third safely. I thought the crowd would go mad. I want to hear of a three-bagger that can beat Willie Keeler's.

FOR the entertainment of of the millions of baseball enthusiasts throughout the country, The City Life Section will print during the season, short, snappy and interesting accounts of the most phenomenal, decisive, and unique plays in recent years, as told by popular, well-known players. These little stories will be interspersed with humorous incidents that have occured on the diamond. No fan can afford to miss this series.

By ED ZMICH.
Pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals.

IT was my good fortune to witness the now famous "quadruple play" made by our shortstop, Houser. We were playing the Cubs at St. Louis. The Cubs were at bat, with men on bases. Little Johnny Evers was on second, Sheckard was on first and Schulte at bat. Schulte waited out a few and then suddenly he saw one that he fancied coming across like a white streak. He met it smack on the nose, and it went like a bullet over our pitcher's head. Huggins, our second baseman, started for it just as Houser did. They went up in the air after it like one man. Houser got it, and came down on second.

That made two out, with Sheckard still to be tagged. There's where Houser lost the opportunity of a lifetime. Schulte was out on the fly, and Evers had been nailed off second. Sheckard ran almost up to him, turned and started back to first, as, of course, he had to do. Instead of running after Sheckard, Houser tossed the ball to first, thereby putting Sheckard out. If Houser had run after him five feet he could have caught him and made a triple play, unassisted, and he would have been the only man outside of Neal Ball to accomplish that feat in the big leagues.

But here's where the joke comes in, and why we call it the "quadruple play." Huggins had his foot on second when Houser landed with the ball, and one of Houser's spikes tore through Huggins's foot. He was put out of commission, and that's why the boys tagged on that extra "out." But we all weep when we think that our team might have had the honor of making the only quadruple play, unassisted, ever made.

By JOHN J. M'GRAW.
Manager of the Giants.

ONE of the funniest home runs I ever saw was made by Arthur Irwin. The bases were full and Arthur was at the bat. He tried to draw a base on balls, but finally had to take one that was coming right over the plate. No batter ever hit a ball any harder. It sailed out for the fence like a rocket, and when it hit the fence we all thought that it had stuck there, for we saw the fielder standing looking up at it with his arms akimbo. I could swear that I saw the ball sticking to the boards. Irwin made the circuit of the bases, shooting in three runs ahead of him.

And now comes the funny part of the story. The ball hadn't stuck in the boards of the fence at all. The round white spot we saw was daylight. When the ball hit the fence it had pushed a knot out ahead of it and gone right through.

By HONEST JOHN KELLY.
Famous Player and Umpire.

I THINK the greatest bit of ball playing that I ever looked at was pulled off by foxy Hughey Jennings, now manager of the Tigers. He was playing third base for Baltimore. The game was on the Chicago grounds, between Baltimore and Chicago. It was a big holiday, and the place was packed till it bulged. Ground rules were in order. The crowd back of third, twenty deep, was roped in and solid as a wall. Chicago was at bat. There was one out and a man on third. Some fellow walked up to the bat and sent up a little pop fly over third base. It looked as if it were going to land on top of that wall of people, and it did. And so did Jennings. He took a flying leap right over the heads and caught the ball. There he lay sprawled out on top of the crowd, with the ball safe in his hand.

But that wasn't all, by any means. The fellow on third touched his base again and made a dash for home. Hughie saw him start, and even as he lay flat on his back on top of the crowd, he whipped the ball home and nipped the runner at the plate. I think it was the most sensational double play ever made.

A FANCIFUL maiden called Fan
The name of that man
Was Mr. Du Fanne;
And now she is Fannie Du Fanne.

AT the gate stood an umpire named Finn.
Said St. Peter: "My friend, come right in.
After all you've endured,
You can be quite assured
We'll repudiate all of your sin."

AN ardent young damsel called Mayme
Had gone crazy about ev'ry game.
When the parson just missed
A stray fly with his fist,
Right in church she yelled: "Strike one! Our game!"

A FUNNY old maid on the bleachers
With antique but well-preserved features,
Said home runs and strikes
And diamonds she likes,
But men are such reticent creatures.

A TIMID young lassie named Fretz
Once pitched for the "Fair Suffragettes";
But a ball came so fast
That she let it go past;
And the gentlemen won all the bets.

TO his son said a miser called Asche:
"I consider it sinful and rash;
E'er on baseball to bet—
But if winnings you get,
Be sure that you bring home the cash."

AT a baseball game young Willie Dorman,
When asked by his boss, Mr. Norman,
How so many grandmothers
He'd buried, and others,
Answered, "Grandpa's an old-fashioned Mormon."

A WEALTHY young lady named Fitt,
Who captured the Baron de Witt,
Declared to her brother
And father and mother
'Twas only a sacrifice hit.

JUDGE SUGGESTS DIVORCE INSURANCE

Jurist Who Has Passed on Many Cases Thinks Plan Would Mitigate Evil.

What is the average length of the marriage that is ended by a divorce?

How long a duration of years is necessary before a marriage may be called happy?

"The recipe for a happy marriage is compounded of just two things—self-forgetfulness and work. Let husband and wife simply forget their individual vanity and self-love. An let them avoid idleness as they would the plague, and seek some healthful employment for mind and body. It is among our idle and unemployed classes that the divorce roll is longest."

A Philadelphia society woman has been compiling a list of successful marriages in her own set, and has excluded all save those who have enjoyed a dozen years of marital felicity. She has arrived at the conclusion, from studying the divorce courts, that in the course of a decade the husband or wife finds out the matrimonial mistake, if it exists, and seeks the courts. If they continue together two years over the ten it means, to her mind, that they have been convinced that the affection is lifelong.

"Since there is no such thing as marriage insurance," he said, "it is impossible to predict the period of 'risk' with statistical accuracy. You know in Italy parents take out insurance for their daughters on the day of their birth that they will marry.

Marriage Insurance Policies?

"From the hit-or-miss state into which the prevalence of divorce has brought married people in our country, I sometimes wonder why there is no such thing as marriage insurance, to be taken out on the wedding day, to indemnify the contracting parties for not staying married! Then we would have a fine row of statistics on the 'average age of divorce.'

"Seriously, though, in my experience I have found that the majority of divorces occur during the first five years of wedded life. If two people live together ten years the chances are that they have decided that their union is happy.

"Divorces come so soon after wedlock because at first the newly wedded couples are too much and afterward not enough. Between the two stools of adoration and indifference they fall.

"No man and woman should marry unless each feels that happiness is impossible without the other. But the worshipful adoration of courtship and the early days of married life is a condition above concert pitch that cannot in nature be maintained. It is as if we tried to carry on all our conversation on the note of high C, instead of talking in ordinary tone.

Comradeship Is Needed.

"The happy marriage must for the most part consist of loyal, equable comradeship, not in a state of exaltation. It is in this readjustment to the comradeship plane that the trouble is likely to come.

"Perhaps the husband is inclined to become 'boss' instead of lover. Perhaps the wife would like to continue a worshipped queen instead of becoming a real 'help mate.' In either case outraged vanity is at the bottom of the trouble.

"I believe that wounded vanity on the part of both men and women is the great reason for most divorces.

"Each party feels a lack of consideratoin on the part of the other. Therefore they quarrel and perhaps finally agree to disagree.

"Incidentally, you may see just here the real reason why, if they can keep together for the first five years their happiness is likely to be lasting. Young people are inordinately vain. As they grow older they must get it taken out of them. After a few years of grating and supersensitiveness they suddenly realise that they do care more for each other than for their own silly selves. Then the way is clear.

Defends Mother-in-Law.

"The American mother-in-law has been very much maligned. In the case of a marital dispute the more offending party likes to shelter himself or herself—behind the convenient fiction of the mother-in-law. But I have generally found that person to be on the side of right and justice, even if she had to take a stand against her own flesh and blood. The mother-in-law is a sensible American woman, you must remember.

"Now about the 'other man' or the 'other woman,' that person is a symptom, not a cause, of unhappy married life. It's a sign of wounded vanity cropping up again. Husband or wife, not receiving sufficient attention at home, seeks it elsewhere. The 'other man' and 'other woman' need not trust much in the 'love' they are getting. They are frequently only mental and moral sofa pillows.

"A childless marriage is often an unhappy one for this reason. When a woman is continually occupied with thoughts of her children's welfare she has little time to nourish grievances. The average healthy mother with plenty of hard work to do indulges but seldom in self-contemplation or the consideration of fancied wrongs.

"Then, of course, children are always a common interest for both mother and father, and their very existence creates one bond between their parents. They often constitute another safeguard to married life after the first year or two.

"The growing lack of domesticity in our women has suggested as a cause for their frequent divorces. It is another symptom of unhappy home life. The vain, selfish woman will not give the necessary thought and care to the making of a happy home, or to the husband's comfort. She will not even try to learn how to perform the household duties. So he goes out of the home that is not pleasant enough to hold him, and she goes to the courts with her 'grievances.'

"Personally I think divorce is always to be deplored. It means the uprooting of the fibres that run deepest in life, the severing of ties that unite not merely husband and wife but all who have come into intimate relationship with them. Still, under present social conditions, divorce does not seem to be at all times avoidable."

READ THIS AND LAUGH.

It's a Joke on Mr. Tibaldi and His Fiddle.

Soon after Arturo Tibaldi, the violinist, came to this country he was invited by a friend to spend the week end in a small town in Pennsylvania. The friend took Tibaldi and his violin on Saturday night to call on his country cousins. After the supper dishes had been cleared away Tibaldi played Caesar Franck's Sonata, a most flowery, colorful and difficult composition, and he felt rather hurt that when he had finished no sign of applause greeted his effort. The family sat in polite silence, with hands folded, wearing an expectant smile. As Tibaldi placed his violin back in its case the good lady of the house leaned over to the violinist's friend and in a penetrating voice whispered: "Won't he play something for us now if he is through tuning his fiddle?"

LAWRENCE WOMEN WAR ON PROFANITY

Seek Aid of Mayor and Police In Strict Enforcement of the Law.

LAWRENCE, May 27.—One thousand women in this city are banded together in an anti-swearing crusade. They are determined to stop profanity in Lawrence streets. Their representatives have sought City Marshal James T. O'Sullivan to ask him to have the police vigorously enforce the law and an effort has been made to have Mayor John T. Cahill lend his official aid. By virtue of his office he is the supreme head of the Lawrence police. The police have not, and city officials the women say, have not joined the crusade yet, but there may be something done which will obtain their support when the special committee of ten takes action at its next meeting. Mrs. Seth Kincaid of No. 443 Broadway is chairman of the committee.

Petition the Mayor.

The 1000 women in the crusade are those who signed a petition to Mayor Cahill and the aldermen, stating that the practice of using profane and impure language on the streets is increasing and asking for the enforcement of the law, which is section 29, chapter 212, of the revised laws of the state, against swearing.

The petition also asked Mayor Cahill have the law and penalty printed in the languages of the different people who make up Lawrence's cosmopolitan population. The petition came up before the Board of Aldermen, who referred it to the city marshal. The request, in regard to having the law printed in different languages was complied with. It is claimed by the women that ended police activity so far as the crusade is concerned. The signers of the petitions are members of the various Protestant churches in Lawrence.

It is understood that the special committee of ten will devise a plan whereby the signers may organise into a permanent body, to be known as the Civil League of Lawrence. Mrs. Kincaid and Mrs. E. M. Lake, wife of Rev. Elisha M. Lake, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, who lives at No. 4 Knox street, are among the leaders in the crusade.

Law Must Be Enforced.

"It is time that profanity is stopped, but in this movement we are aiming at no class or sect," said Mrs. Kincaid. "It matters not what station in life the offender occupies, he should be prevented from using impure language on the streets. There is a law on the books and it must be enforced."

Mrs. Lake said: "It is hard to understand why any official, sworn to enforce the law, should have to wait for further instruction. But evidently there are wheels within wheels. We have heard of nothing more being done. We hear of no arrests although the ordinances are very plain."

Mayor Cahill and City Marshall O'Sullivan says that if no arrests have been made profanity is decreasing, and that the police are watching for violations of the law. They commend the women for their crusade.

MORISON "CLEANS UP."

The Summer season of the Lindsay Morison stock company will not lack for novelties, as far as stock presentations go. Manager Morison made a flying trip to New York last week and returned with an armful of contracts for "The Chorus Lady," "Wildfire," "The Rose of the Rancho," "Arizona," "The Importance of Being Earnest," "Zaza," "Where the Trail Divides" and "Is Matrimony a Failure," most of which have not been offered here by a stock company.

COMING EVENTS.

Mr. Craig announces a revival of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" at the Castle Square Theatre next week, during which Miss Henrietta McDaniel will return to the company to play the title role. Few plays of the generation have made so strong an appeal to the human heart as Mrs. Burnett's story of the delightful little American boy who became an English lord.

* * *

For the fourth week at the Majestic Theatre Lindsay Morrison will present his company, beginning June 5, in "The Chorus Lady," by James Forbes, who wrote "The Commuters," now on its third month in this city. In "The Chorus Lady" Miss Eleanor Gordon will play Rose Stahl's old role of Patricia O'Brien.

TAFT WILL BE IN BEVERLY ON JUNE 20

North Shore Again Will Float the Flag Denoting Nation's Summer Capital.

BEVERLY, May 27.—In another month Beverly, the Garden City of the North Shore, will again float the President's flag from City Hall in token of its third season as the nation's Summer capital.

"Parramatta," the home of the President for the next two Summers, was never more attractive than it is to-day. The new office and the reception room which have been built at the Peabody cottage will give the President an office at his house, but it will not in the least interfere with the privacy of the family.

The President is expected to come to Beverly on June 20 with Mrs. Taft. If Congress has finished with its business he will remain, but if it is still in session he will join the ranks of commuters and will make week-end trips between Beverly and Washington.

The cottage across the way from Parramatta will be used as living quarters for the executive offices staff, but the real working quarters will probably be down town in the Board of Trade rooms where they were until last year.

Major A. W. Butt, the President's military aide, will have the Woodbury cottage on Ober street this Summer. The genial major pronounced untrue the story that he was engaged to Mrs. T. K. Laughlin of Pittsburg and the romance with a Beverly end was rudely shattered by the denial. Mrs. Laughlin was here much last Summer and will be here again this Summer as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Taft.

HASSELL AN AMERICAN.

English Actor Who Lived in Australia Will Play Mississippian.

Unlike many English actors, George Hassell can act an American to the life. And he will have a chance to do it at the Castle Square this week, for Mr. Craig has cast him for the title role in that best of latter day American comedies, "A Gentleman from Mississippi." This part was created, it will be remembered, by the rotund and jovial Tom Wise, and while Mr. Hassell is not so rotund as that comedian, he is no less jovial. He will make a real Senator Sheldon, with the true languid Southern manner and accent.

Mr. Hassell may, as a matter of fact, lay claim to the title of cosmopolitan actor and globe trotter. He was born in England, went out to Australia when scarcely more than a boy, started in there at sheep ranching, and wound up by becoming an actor. With the outbreak of the South African war, he loyally enlisted, served among the colonial troops in the British army, was wounded by a bullet through the shoulder and after convalescence and recovery went back to Australia and the stage. He has been several years in this country, and three of them have been spent at the Castle Square, where he is still as welcome as he was on the day when he first joined Mr. Craig's forces.

BE LITLE; IT'S CHEAPER.

Read About Tiny Miss D'Armond if You Don't Believe It.

Out in Spokane, Washington, they have a street railway line which observes a difference in fare. Children under ten years of age pay three cents while older children and adults pay five.

If there is one distinguishing feature of Isabell D'Armond, other than her cleverness and daintiness, it is her diminutive stature. She has been playing Spokane of late and sends word to the effect that she has been enjoying herself to her heart's content riding on the street cars.

"I do nothing but ride on these cars when not engaged at the theatre," she writes, "and the reason is that the first day I arrived, when I boarded a car, I handed the conductor a nickle and he gave me back two cents. I almost fell off the seat and probably would have done so, but it looked like a long fall. Then I discovered the implied compliment.

"Since then I have traveled a lot and the conductors always hand me back two cents change when I give them a nickle. This allows me to ride twice as much. I am only afraid that if the story gets back to New York, when I return the Gerry society may not allow me to appear."

LOTS OF HANDICAPS IN THE WAY OF BECOMING AMERICAN CITIZEN, THINKS MR. TOURS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

WHILE hundreds of our native American actors are at this time hastening across the ocean to spend several months in the cultivation of an English manner of speech and a few eccentric fashions in waistcoats, a native Englishman, well known in the musical drama, is facing constant difficulties in a laudable attempt to become an American citizen. Frank Tours, who directs the orchestra for "The Kiss Waltz," has been the unhappy victim of his own endeavors to embrace the Stars and Stripes as his national emblem, and is almost ready to abandon us and again swear allegiance to the Crown.

With his first papers carefully tucked in his pocket, Mr. Tours felt he was on the safe road to citizenship, but he was reminded that no real American ever wore a moustache turned up at the corners after the style of German army officers. It was thus driven into Mr. Tours's mind that Americans, as a rule, wear their faces clean. True to the land of his prospective adoption, and patriotic to the core, he paid twenty-five cents to one of the artists in the Touraine barber shop to remove the last outward sign of his foreign birth. It was one of the few real successes of the season. A mirror told him he was a new man and he set out to test the effect of the change. The first acquaintance he met was Charlie Bigelow, with whom he had sat around a green covered table the night before. Bigelow would have passed him with cold disdain if Mr. Tours had not touched him on the arm and asked the way to the nearest subway station. "Ask a policeman," snapped Bigelow.

"But, say, old chap," persisted Tours, "you know me; can't you help a fellow out?"

"G'long or I'll call a policeman," and Bigelow hastened on.

But the saddest of moments was to follow. Mr. Tours apeared at the Shubert Theatre to conduct a morning rehearsal. Inasmuch as he was a few minutes ahead of the chorus—which is always late—he sat on a piece of scenery and waited. He attracted the attention of Harry Lewellyn, stage manager of the show and a personal friend of the hairless-lipped conductor. "What do you want in here?" demanded Lewellyn.

"Waiting for the chorus," answered Tours.

"Oh, I guess not," said Tours; "I think I'll wait."

Lewellyn thought differently, but as Tours had a hammer in his hand and looked formidable, he thought he would take a little advice from one of the theatre employes. "Who's that man?" asked Lewellyn of the stage carpenter, pointing to Tours.

"It looks like an electrician that has been hanging around here hunting for a job," was the answer. That settled the question with the fuming Lewellyn, who told Tours plainly to get out of the theatre or be arrested for trespass. What might have occurred if Manager Evans of the company had not appeared on the scene is too dreadful to contemplate. He believed Tour's story of the last mustache, but said he would have to demand proof before Lewellyn could be satisfied. Tours displayed the scar of a dog bite on his arm and Lewellyn acknowledged his mistake.

But Mr. Tours is far from being satisfied. Apologies do not console him and he threatens never to speak to Lewellyn again. "What a blooming lot of idiots you Americans are," he declared; "I've a good mind to let the beastly moustache grow again, what?"

"LORD FAUNTLEROY" REVIVAL.

The announcement that Mr. Craig will soon produce "Little Lord Fauntleroy," with Miss Henrietta McDaniel will be welcome news to a multitude of children and grown-ups, too. It was this pretty little play that gave the American stage several of its most promising child players, most of whom grew to manhood and womanhood in the service of the drama. In those days there were no State Police and ugly laws to interfere with the work of talented children, and those who remember the youngsters who were familiar to playgoers in the eighties will agree that they had a helpful influence in theatrical entertainments. Elsie Leslie, who was one of the most conspicuous of the early Lord Fauntleroys, only a few days ago spoke of the child actor and used her own experience as an example of the advantage of a stage career when compared to other kinds of employment open to poor children.

"Had not gone on the stage when a child," she says, "it conceivably would have been to go through the public schools to the age of sixteen, to have taken an extra course as a shorthand writer, or something of that sort, to have made a fight to preserve possible neutral ideals against such surroundings, and at length, to have become the wife of a nice bigoted sort of man to whom Jefferson would have meant simply the third President; who would have bought Mark Twain and Washington Irving on the subscription plan, to let them lie in the bookcase, so that the nice, red and gold covers might not be soiled, and to thank God every night of his life that his wife had no nonsense in her regarding the stage."

Much Promise in Stock

The approach of Summer has never yielded such promising values in stock productions as may be found at the Castle Square and Majestic Theatres at this time. With "The Rivals" and "The Man of the Hour" running a strong race all last week, there is little indication of any lessening interest in either company the coming six days, for "A Gentleman From Mississippi" will be seen at the Castle Square and "The Warrens of Virginia" at the Majestic. It was only a few years ago that the local stock season drifted steadily down hill after the first of May which is easily understood when you consider the ready feeble attempts that were made to keep interest [illegible]. Plays demanding the royalties that Mr. Craig and Mr. Morison are now paying were formerly regarded as too expensive, except for occasional production at the height of the season. The prosperity that has followed Mr. Craig for three seasons at the Castle Square and which is now flirting with Mr. Morison is only the logical outcome of intelligent management.

It now appears that Mme. Bernhardt's recent farewell visit to the Boston is to be repeated briefly on June 10, when two performances will again be given in this city by the distinguished actress and her company. The matinee will be devoted to "Sister Beatrice" and "Jean Marie" and the evening performance will be "Madame X." It was hoped that Bernhardt would give "Madame X" during her other engagement here, but as the Henry W. Savage Company was in Boston at the time, and as Mr. Savage had certain American producing rights that Mme. Bernhardt could not overcome, the plan was abandoned. This recoming of Bernhardt gives added proof that farewell appearances may be on the instalment plan.

After two weeks of "A Country Girl" the Tremont will enter the second section of its Summer season to-morrow with Valeska Suratt in "The Red Rose." Miss Suratt has acquired a large measure of fame on the American stage through eccentricities that have shocked nice old ladies and filled all the front seats with rah rah boys. We are told that modesty in its most alluring form pervades Miss Suratt's work in "The Red Rose."

BILLS OF THE WEEK

Colonial Theatre.

Ralph Herz in "Doctor De Luxe" will enter into his second week at the Colonial to-morrow. There will be a special matinee Tuesday, Decoration Day, and the usual matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Evidently Boston theatregoers have accepted Mr. Herz as a star, judging from the large audiences that have been attending the performances of "Doctor De Luxe" and the abundant amount of applause that this new novel musical piece is receiving at every performance. Mr. Hoschna has provided some excellent music, and already in all the hotels and cafes they are playing "For Every Boy That's Lonely There's a Girl That's Lonely Too."

Castle Square Theatre.

For a limited engagement of only one week, "A Gentleman from Mississippi" will be Mr. Craig's offering at the Castle Square, beginning Monday afternoon. This comedy by Harrison Rhodes and Thomas A. Wise is genuinely American in scene and character, and its plot tells what happens when a genial rural Southerner who has lived for years on his plantation forty miles from a railroad, is suddenly raised to a position of political prominence and becomes a United States Senator.

The humor of "A Gentleman from Mississippi" is its strongest feature, and it radiates good nature from beginning to end. The title role of Senator Langdon will be played by George Hassell, who will bring to it the stature and personal magnetism that one associates with such a character. Donald Meek will be seen as Bud Haines, a New York reporter, and there will be a long cast that will include Mr. Craig's entire company. This will be the first production of "A Gentleman from Mississippi" in Boston at popular prices.

Hollis Street Theatre.

When the curtain fell upon the performance of "Judy O'Hara" at the Hollis Street Theatre last evening it marked the close of the regular dramatic year at that playhouse. The season has been a long one and one full of interest, and there have been a number of plays given here for the first time in Boston. David Warfield gave the actual premiere of his new play here, and William Gillette and Mrs. Fiske had engagements in revivals which were remarkable for the attendance and the enthusiasm manifested. The house will now be closed for the Summer months, opening again, as usual, the first of September.

Majestic Theatre.

Manager Lindsay Morison announces still another well known play for the first time "in stock" to be presented by his stock company at the Majestic Theatre this week, beginning with the Monday chocolate bonbon souvenir matinee. This time it is William C. DeMille's "The Warrens of Virginia," secured by special arrangement with David Belasco, who held it at a high price for the first presentation in Boston by a stock company.

Miss Eleanor Gordon will be seen in "The Warrens of Virginia" in the role of Agatha Warren, which was originally played at the Majestic by Miss Charlotte Walker; and Wilson Melrose will assume the role of General Warren, played here in the Belasco production by Frank Keenan. The balance of the company will be assigned to important roles.

Tremont Theatre.

Valeska Suratt in "The Red Rose" is to be the Summer attraction at the Tremont Theatre, opening to-morrow. "The Red Rose" is an elaborate musical comedy by Harry B. Smith and his brother Robert, with music by Robert Hood Bowers. R. H. Burnside, who for the last four years has written and staged the massive productions at the New York Hippodrome, conducted the rehearsals, and Jack Mason arranged the numerous and various individual and ensemble dances. Miss Suratt has hitherto been famous as a more or less sensational young woman with a penchant for doing strange things at opportune times and for an ability to devise and wear wondrous sartorial effects when and where they could not fail to attract attention. In "The Red Rose" she makes her bow as a star and respectfully lays claim to all the honors and perquisites that go with the title.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

One of the most pretentious vaudeville bills ever offered at this time of the year is announced for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, a feature of which will be Little Billy, who is now offering an entirely new repertoire of songs and dances and has become a greater favorite than ever. A comedy event of unusual importance will be the Ryan and Richfield company in a new comedy by Will M. Cressy, entitled "Mag Haggerty, Osteopath." Another trio of favorites will be Louise Myers, Mildred Warren and Bert Lyon in a comedy sketch called "A Little of Everything," in which Miss Myers plays her famous character of the maid. Frankie Carpenter and Jere Grady, who are great New England favorites, will also appear in a comedy called "The Butterfly."

Park Theatre.

Last nights are near at the Park Theatre for "The Commuters," but there is still as great interest in the comedy of suburban life as ever. It has proved one of the liveliest pieces given at this house in a long time, and there is no question but that it might well stay here for as long a period as "The Man from Home" did a year ago. Certainly "The Commuters" has taken the Boston record of the present season, and has given no end of merriment in the engagement which is now past its one hundred nights mark and is attracting as large audiences as it did last February when it first came to town.

Shubert Theatre.

"The Kiss Waltz," the newest Viennese operetta, has caught on at the Shubert in great shape and is proving one of the best musical plays of the season. All of the numbers are dainty and melodic and they have been staged with more than the usual degree of novelty. The cast, one of the best seen in Boston in musical comedy for some time, includes Eva Davenport, Charles Bigelow, Van Rensselaer Wheeler, Christie Nielsen, who is now singing the prima donna role; Florence Nash, Edgar Atchison Ely, Edith Bradford, George Pauncefote, Oscar Schwartz, Harry Lewellyn, Lillian Wiggins, Nanon Welch, Alice Chase and a large chorus.

Globe Theatre.

A most interesting program of novelties has been secured for the holiday week at the Globe, and beginning at noon to-morrow one of the most varied bills of the season will be offered. The Schillings, Carl and Ada, a pair of Westerners, will offer a shooting act that is full of new tricks in "rifledom." Jackson Brothers and Johnson present a real minstrel first part and Lamb and Knowles the petite comedienne; John Philbrick, Jack Clabaue and Jack O'Donnell will also be seen.

Waldron's Casino.

"Fairplay in Pocatello," that picturesque little mountain spot in Idaho, has furnished the plot for two exceedingly novel and highly amusing burlettas, which will be the principal offering in the attraction presented by the "Ginger Girls" at Waldron's Casino this week.

Gaiety Theatre.

The season of pictures and vaudeville at the Gaiety theatre has started off brilliantly, and during the coming week many novelties will be shown that will furnish jolly entertainment to those who like light amusement.

Orpheum Theatre.

The new programme at the Orpheum theatre to-morrow will be made up of vaudeville novelties and motion pictures that will be appropriate to Memorial Day. Special acts have been engaged to make the holiday week one of the best of the season.

New Palace Theatre.

There is always variety in the entertainment offered at the New Palace theatre, and for the coming week a number of enlivening features will be presented. Both in the vaudeville and motion picture sections of the programme novelty will prevail.

Austin & Stone's.

The new features in the curio hall at Austin & Stone's Museum to-morrow will supply astonishment to the regular Monday crowds. A new show will also be given in the theatre.

Howard Athenaeum.

Pat White and his Gaiety Girls will continue for another week at the Howard with an entire change of burlesque program. The one to be offered this week will be extremely funny, and Pat and his girls will skip about in the most fetching attire.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

There will be the most snappy kind of vaudeville and educational and melodramatic moving picture program this week at the Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Scenic Temple.

This week's bill at the Scenic Temple promises to be exceptionally good and the motion pictures will be select and educational in character.

Hub Theatre.

The Nine Krazy Kids will play a return engagement at the Hub Theatre this week, and will be glad to meet all their [illegible] whom they impressed so favorably on their first visit.

Norumbega Park.

Norumbega Park has opened its fifteenth season with a first week that the management may well look upon with pride. The most popular new feature this season is the transformed restaurant, which has now become the Grape Arbor cafe. Its charm as a cool, leafy eating place with the splendid view of the [illegible] on the Charles and with [illegible] orchestra on the veranda is something patrons have longed for. There will be special features for the holiday, Decoration Day, next Tuesday, and Barrington's Ninth Regiment Band of thirty pieces will give concerts in Music [illegible]. In the open air theatre the coming week every afternoon and evening there will be a complete change of vaudeville program.

Lexington Park.

Lexington Park opens to the public for three days, May 28, 29 and 30, with everything new and now after a season of much improvement. The enlargement of the zoological exhibit will add much to patrons as well as the various amusement devices which have been installed. The offering at the theatre will be one of exceptional merit, presenting Davey and Everon, Edith Hutton, Billy Fay, Henry Meyers, McLaughlin and Stewart and motion pictures. There will be the usual Sunday night concert to-night by [illegible] Simmon's orchestra, which will also give concert programs during the day.

Bernhardt to Return

Two special performances will be given in the Boston Theatre Saturday, June 10, by Mme. Sarah Bernhardt and her company of players, who are journeying eastward on their way to New York after the most extensive and phenomenally successful tour ever recorded in the wonderful career of this wonderful woman. On Saturday afternoon "Sister Beatrice" will be presented, together with the ever interesting one act drama "Jean Marie." On Saturday evening Mme. Bernhardt will be seen in "Madame X," by Alexander Bisson. W. F. Connor did not originally intend to provide Bostonians and their neighbors with an opportunity of seeing Mme. Bernhardt after the close of her record breaking engagement at the Boston Theatre last Winter, but the work loving actress expressed a desire to stop in Boston on her return trip East and the two performances were immediately arranged.

The Friars' Frolic.

A. L. Erlanger will have full charge of the staging of the Friars' Frolic entertainment at the Boston Theatre June 7. The program will be divided into three parts consisting of a minstrel first part in white face, four or five turns, with a big girl number and an afterpiece written by George M. Cohan, in which all of the stars will appear. The complete plans for the tour of the Friars [illegible] annual frolic which will commence with the performance at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York, this evening, were [illegible] yesterday. The entire organization [illegible] about 100, has been rehearsing steadily for the past three weeks under the direction of General Stage Manager George M. Cohan.

500 to Play in Northampton's Pageant

To Portray Town's Life 200 Years Ago

D. A. R. Chapter to Give Great Open-Air Spectacle This Week.

NORTHAMPTON, May 27.—Five hundred persons will take part in the historical pageant of Northampton, to be given under the auspices of the Betty Allen Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, to be held on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The pageant will deal principally with scenes of 200 years ago and the direct descendants of the families who figured in the early history of the place will take the leading roles in the episodes. These start in Northampton, England, as far back as the days of William the Conqueror, and the general atmosphere of the boistrous times that lead to the emigration of the first eight families to Northampton, Mass., will be shown.

The court of William the Conqueror and Queen Mathilde comes first, with its array of gay clothes, romping ladies-in-waiting, valiant men-at-arms, court jesters, friars and carol dancers.

Some Old Morris Dances.

With Lawrence Washington, as Mayor the town of Northampton, England, in 1646, will be represented. Old Morris dances will be shown and the Mayor's proclamation which gave the citizens an idea of what they might do "of a Sunday" is read and arouses the anger of the Puritans, for it included dancing.

Milkmaids dance and fling their arms about and flip their handkerchiefs in the faces of the scowling Puritans, who walk with downcast eyes. Such frivolity being too much for the good folk they set out for other lands and thus start the opening of new homes among the then wilds of New England. Here are perhaps the most interesting scenes of the pageant.

The arrival of the first eight families who started a settlement at Northampton is depicted. The place they came to is first shown in its wild state, where Indians hold pow-wows and feather dances. The Ancient Order of Redmen of the city have taken this part of the program in hand and for several weeks have been rehearsing with braves, squaws and pappooses to give a telling portraval of an Indian village.

Puritans Build Homes.

The Puritans build their homes, erecting a meeting house which they attend regularly, and the colony grows larger. Land on which now stands Springfield and Holyoke is purchased from the Indians and those who take part in this episode are direct descendants of the founders of these two important Massachusetts cities.

Mayor Calvin Coolide, Judge John Mason, City Clerk Clarence Chase, Captain of Police Michael J. Lyons will have the roles of chiefs in the Indian nations and to these will come Samuel Chapin and Joseph Pynchon of Springfield and [illegible] Holyoke of the city of Holyoke to barter with the Indians for land, giving them bags of ripe corn in exchange.

This will be followed by several interesting episodes in the life of the Puritans. In the little meeting house which is attended by the colony, the men on one side, the women on the other, one young Puritan matron (Mrs. Rufus Stimson, wife of the director of the Smiths Agricultural School) is made to come forward and be shown before the assembling Puritans for having worn silk—a most dreadful thing to do.

Mary Parsons, a direct descendant of the Mary Parsons of witchcraft fame, will be the heroine of an episode at the little church. Miss Parsons now lives in Southampton, Mass. She is only a young girl of sixteen or so but she declares that she can be just as good a witch as her illustrious great great great-grandmother. And those who know Miss Parsons believe her story.

The First Tea Party.

Following comes the later Colonial period, the first tea party where the Colonial dames used to tea boil, a whole chest of it, and are thrown into "spasms" because it is so bitter. A dainty wedding is given, and for this Miss Helen Clapp of Northampton, daughter of Frank E. Clapp, will be the [illegible] bride and Carl Bradley the bridegroom.

In the Revolutionary period the ride of Seth Pomeroy to Bunker Hill and the Round Hill party of 1823 will be shown. Following the Civil War period comes the final review of the pageant by the two cities, Northampton, England, and Northampton, New England, which will bring the entire cast upon the stage. Two hundred or more children, each in the costume of some nation represented in the growing life of the city to-day, will take part in this spectacle.

Perhaps the most interesting figure to many is that of William the Conqueror. This will be taken by President Marion LeRoy Burton of Smith College, while Mrs. Burton will take the role of Queen Mathilde.

Wedding of Betty Allen.

In the scene "The Wedding of Betty Allen," Miss Betty Allen Smith of Northampton will be the bride. Miss Allen is a direct descendant of the Betty Allen of history. The minister who officiates will be Jonathan Edwards and this part is in the hands of Jonathan Edwards, a New York attorney, who has consented to come to Northampton for the pageant and to be one of the principal characters. He is also a descendant of the father of Northampton, whose name he bears.

LETTER CARRIERS TO DELIVER SURPRISE

THE letter carriers are going to deliver something [illegible].

When the annual reunion of the Boston Letter Carriers' Mutual Benefit Association takes place in Mechanics' Hall next Wednesday [illegible] will be treated to some novel features, which have been arranged by the committee in charge of the 1911 occasion.

Many of the carriers and their friends do not dance but they attend the reunions regularly, not only out of loyalty to the organization, but to enjoy the concert and to participate in the general good time. The Boston Letter Carriers' Band (Jacques Benevente, leader) will devote this year's concert program to operatic selections alone. The feature number will be the Soldiers' chorus from "Faust," sung by sixty voices from the Deutsch Belgian Singing Society.

Carriers Will Drill.

Another novelty this year will be the Carriers' Review, an intricate and beautiful series of military evolutions executed by 300 uniformed carriers under Captain W. J. Curtis of Hanover street postal station.

William W. Lindsay, floor director; and Frank W. Smith, president of the association and marshal of the dance, have gone over the details of this Carriers' Review with Mr. Curtis. All three, with the men in the review, are enthusiastic about it. They think that the reunion guests will be delighted at the spectacle. President Smith was the hearty co-operation of all members of the association and especially of Secretary Charles H. Norton and the other officers in making arrangements for the 1911 reunion.

The various committees have sent in final reports, all indicative of a record-breaking attendance.

The committee on refreshments decided

Will Have Buffet Luncheon.

The committee on refreshments decided to substitute a buffet lunch this year for the supper which previously was part of the program. It is thought that the buffet arrangement will prove much more satisfactory.

The proceeds from the reunion will be used to swell the sick and death benefit fund of the association. The association has been in existence for thirty years. It was incorporated in 1889 and has increased in membership until to-day it includes practically every letter carrier in Boston postal district. Every Boston postmaster has shown warm interest in the association, and Mr. Mansfield, the incumbent, is no exception.

Proof of the growth of the association is shown by comparative statements of sick and death benefits disbursed now and twenty-five years ago. In 1885 the association paid out a total of $1,019.85 in sick and death benefits. In 1910 it paid out $19,065 for the same items.

Here Are the Committees.

BALKY [illegible] BOAT FOILS ITS OWNERS

Sad Story of the Family Excursion Which East Dedham Street Officers Held.

The boys at the station house have christened the boat Innocence, partly because she is owned by members of the purity squad and partly because of her modest disposition when her owners are trying to show their friends how well she works.

Innocence has been either in the water or under water now for a week. She's a great boat—sometimes. She has made one trip this year without one stop of the engine. That was the day the chap who sold the boat to Hughes and Grant took them out, to show them what a fine craft she was.

Here Are the Sad Details.

The story of the boat's launching will probably be told to every visitor to the East Dedham Street Station for years to come. Seems that the owners planned to take her out of the cradle in which she had lain all Winter a week ago last Friday.

"Don't do it," said Lieutenant Michael H. Crowley, whom they invited over to the launching. "Friday's an unlucky day."

"Right you are," said Sergeant Hughes. "I guess, Pat, we'd better postpone the launching for another day."

The motion to postpone launching was carried on a voice vote. Friday night, Hughes and Grant invited Lieutenant Matthew J. Dailey to attend the launching on Sunday.

Too Many Children.

Sunday the boat was taken out of the cradle over at Lamb's shipyard in South Boston and put into the water. Innocence was very fond of water, so fond of it that she proceeded to drink in gallons of it through two big seams in her starboard side.

Hughes and Grant got her back into low water and then on the beach and had the seams mended. That took a couple of days. Then they prepared for a real sail. Each brought his family. Sergeant Hughes has ten youngsters and Patrolman Grant has six. The boat went down to the gunwales.

So they had to divide the party and make two trips around the harbor. Next day they bought a tender, and the two families can now enjoy a trip together, by having twelve ride in the motor boat and the rest in the tender.

What would the Umpire rule?

IF the fielder stop or catch a batted ball with his cap or any part of his uniform while detached from its proper place on his person, what would be the ruling in regard to the runner or runners?

CROWDS GO TO SUBURBS

The Demand for All Kinds of Property This Year Is Enormous.

By FRANK A. LAVELLE.

MEMORIAL DAY, Tuesday, will mark the real opening of the season for developers of and operators in suburban house lots and all those who are now offering their inducements to prospective home owners and investors are prepared for an exceedingly busy day.

The coming holiday is always taken advantage of by thousands of house lot buyers and the number this year is expected to be greater than ever because of the realization of numberless city dwellers of the many opportunities they may secure in the various suburbs for the foundation of a pretty and comfortable home at small cost.

The past week gave indications of what is to come, for hundreds of sales were closed out. Many of the sales the past week were of properties in various parts of the city proper, and such investment parcels are now in good demand.

Myer Dana of the Kimball Building sold for Goldie Swartz to Samuel I. Levine, the property at No. 366 Shawmut avenue, corner of Ball street, South End, which consists of about 1,700 square feet of land, with a brick four and one-half-story building. The building is divided into four suites and a store. Mr. Levine buys for investment.

In the West End the four-story and basement brick house and 1,048 square feet of land at No. 95 Poplar street, near Auburn street, all assessed for $8,100, have been sold by Rose Weinbaum et al to Levi Schleovitz. The land is rated for $2,600.

Charles P. Putnum has sold to William A. Hodday, title passing through W. Stanley Tripp, the brick house and 850 square feet of land at No. 59 Harvard street, near Tyler street, South End, all assessed for $4,000, of which $2,000 is on the land.

Sales by Henry W. Savage.

BEACON STREET—Henry W. Savage reports the sale of the lot of land at the corner of Beacon and St. Mary's streets, consisting of 6,108 square feet assessed for $15,800. Henry H. Partridge conveyed to William A. Davidson of Dorchester who intends to immediately erect a five-story brick and stone apartment house.

NEWBURYPORT—Henry W. Savage has sold the estate at the corner of High and Woodland streets, belonging to Mrs. Annie E. Shaw. It consists of a large mansion house of eighteen rooms, three bathrooms, a stable and 20,000 square feet of land. The house has long been known as one of the show places of Newburyport, being located in a commanding position in the centre of the best residential section, and has for many years been the home of the Hon. E. P. Shaw. The assessed value of the property is $18,500, but the price paid by the new owner, Albert Russell of Boston, is in excess of this figure. J. L. Nason Company represented the grantor.

NATICK—Henry W. Savage has sold the estate at No. 103 West Central street, consisting of a mansion house of fifteen rooms, hardwood floors and other modern conveniences. There is also a well-appointed stable and over 30,000 square feet of land, well laid out with shade trees, ornamental shrubbery and beautiful lawns, all carrying a total assessment of $4,500. This property borders on Lake Cochituate and is considered one of the finest properties in Natick. Blanche M. Bancroft conveyed to Charles H. Gosse.

FRAMINGHAM—Henry W. Savage has sold a lot of land containing about 35,000 square feet on the car line on Eastern avenue, Charles Morrill conveyed to Annie L. Goodwin, who has already commenced the building of a bungalow. Mr. Savage has also sold for T. F. Hastings 35,852 square feet of land on Eastern avenue to Charles A. Stearns, who bought for improvement.

Sales by Edward T. Harrington Co.

ROXBURY—The sale is reported of Nos. 58 and 60 Ruthven street, consisting of two brick apartment houses, containing 5,130 square feet, all assessed on a valuation of $17,000. The purchaser was W. A. Blumenthal, and the grantor Havagim Srabian.

REVERE BEACH—The estate of Jessie Cordingly of Boston has sold to Bopp & McGinness the property at No. 67 Boulevard, comprising a tract of land containing 15,000 square feet, extending from the Boulevard through to Ocean avenue. This is one of the few exceptionally desirable tracts of land in Revere available for amusement purposes, and is the largest transaction that has taken place at Revere Beach this season. The assessment is about $20,000.

WINTHROP—W. R. Comer of Wellesley has sold his estate at No. 12 Douglass street, comprising a modern seven-room house, with 4,000 square feet of land, all assessed on a valuation of about $4,000. The purchaser is William McGreece of Boston.

Adams, and lots 132 and 133, on Glendale street, containing 7,000 square feet, have been purchased by R. C. Williams. E. M. Harrington et al., grantors.

Boulevard Heights.

One of the most popular openings of the last season, which is now being closed out, was for those desiring a country home site handy to Boston, which overlooks the parkway running from Somerville in to the beautiful Middlesex Fells.

The opening of the new Spot Pond car line last year brought this property within eleven minutes of Sullivan square, and a five-cent fare to any part of Boston. This, combined with the many natural beauties of the property, the pretty little lake on the property, and a magnificent outlook, accounts for the popularity of this offering, where 101 lots were sold in the first thirty days after its opening.

Many cellars are now going in and desirable houses are under construction on this property. It is probable that the few remaining lots will be disposed of to-day and Memorial Day.

Two Popular Tracts.

A. A. Brand of the Old South Building, who is developing Nuttings Lake Park, Billerica, and Wilmington Square Park, Wilmington, reports many sales at each of these popular sub-divisions the past week and he states that so many inquiries have been received about the two properties he believes the coming week will close out many more sales there. He expects a large number of visitors and investors at each of the properties to-day and Tuesday (the holiday), and extra salesmen will be present to attend to prospective customers.

Overlook Park.

Overlook Park, Arlington Heights, the handsome property which J. W. Wilbur is developing, is being greatly improved by the erection of several bungalows and all-the-year-round homes. In addition to lots disposed of and already noted, Mr. Wilbur reports the following sales: Lots 50 and 51, on Wachusett avenue, to Alfred H. Down of Cambridge, lot 824, on Oakland avenue, to Guy B. Galand of Somerville, and lots 202 and 203, on Ronecliff street, to Lawrence J. Meaney of Somerville.

West Roxbury Terrace.

J. W. Wilbur reports a steady improvement at this tract, many new owners having erected homes, and others being in the course of construction. Lots disposed of during the past week are as follows: Lots 104 and 105, on Washington street; lots 293 to 297, on Dunbarton road, lots 274 and 275, on Willers street, and lots 75, 76 and 77, on Edgemere road.

Sylvan Terrace.

Sylvan Terrace, Melrose, another tract being developed by J. W. Wilbur, is rapidly being taken up, the following lots having been sold to parties who intend to make immediate improvements: Lots 40 and 41, on Beaumont street, to C. L. Bishop of Malden, and lots 144 and 145, on Sylvan street, to Ellen Crowley of Boston.

Atlantic.

Ocean Park, Atlantic, one of the latest developments of Brown & Stackpole of No. 101 Tremont street, is beautifully located, facing on Quincy Bay, and presenting an unobstructed view of the Harvard aviation field. Property in this vicinity is especially desirable, being supplied with electric lights, gas, town water, etc, and easily accessible to trains and electric car lines.

Pinehurst Manor.

Frank W. Coughlin with offices in the Old South building, who is developing Pinehurst Manor, reports the busiest week of the season, having sold 105 lots in two days. Mr. Coughlin intends to make this suburb the best in this section. He has just placed a contract with an artesian well contractor to install several wells on the property for the use of the purchasers. The building of the streets and avenues will be completed in a few days.

Lots sold, in addition to those already reported, are: Lots 327 and 328, on Cardington and Ellingwood avenues, to Robert H. Danielson of South Boston; lots 895, 896 and 897, on Glenvale avenue, to L. R. Harris of Roxbury, lots 744 to 747, on Chesterfield and Glenside avenues, to C. L. Kibby of Everett, lots 882 to 884 and 898 and 890, on Ridgeway and Glenvale avenues, to W. W. Crooker of Malden, lots 416, 417 and 418 on Allandale avenue to Fred Whittaker of Boston; lots 414 and 415, on Allandale avenue, to Alice Busby of Boston; lots 874 to 879, on Ridgeway avenue, to William E. Gray of Medford; lots 448 and 755, on Glenside avenue, to Annie M. Crooker of Malden; lots 612 to 623 inclusive on Ridgeway avenue, to William W. Crooker of Malden, lots 853 and 850, on Ridgeway avenue, to George E. Mariner of Cambridge, lots 1107 and 1108 on Endleigh avenue and Della street, to William Hogan of Roxbury.

At Bonair Heights, Cliftondale, another Coughlin tract, lots 28 to 33, on Felmont avenue, have been sold to C. Catalano of Cliftondale.

At Bay View Heights, Cliftondale, another of Mr. Coughlin's tracts, lots 101 to 25[illegible], on Beacham avenue have been sold to William B. Smith of East Boston.

At Felsmere, Wakefield, another of Mr Coughlin's tracts, lots 157 to 160, on Lotus avenue, have been sold to A. Cruge of Stoneham.

Riverton-on-the-Charles.

Already a residence neighborhood has been established at Riverton-on-the-Charles which has been successfully developed by the O'Connell Real Estate Company. Some of the lots are built upon and plans are in preparation for others to be constructed this year. Riverton now in its Spring dress is an alluring place, and the streets and the lots remaining unsold, some of them fronting on the boulevard, will surely find immediate buyers. Waltham and Watertown cars, taken in the subway, reach Riverton in twenty-five minutes, but the running time will soon be reduced to eighteen. The promoters of this development reside at Riverton and an appointment by telephone, Newton North, 167, or by mail can be made.

College Field.

The development of College field, Tufts College station, Medford, is proving one of the most important that the locality has experienced in years. It was recently purchased from the Fred L. Ames estate by the Fred C. Tobey Land Company, Tremont building. Mr. Tobey reports many sale closed and others under negotiation. Since the land was opened two weeks ago, he has disposed of thousands of dollars worth of lots. Several up-to-date bungalows will be started immediately, and everything possible done to make this the ideal section near the college. All of the streets have been named for New England colleges and work on grading has already been started. Mr. Tobey will hold a grand opening sale on Memorial Day.

Atlantic-by-the-Sea.

There will be a grand sale on Memorial Day at Atlantic-by-the-Sea, on the Metropolitan boulevard and owned by Charles M. Conant, Old South building. That it is attracting much attention is shown by the fact that in two weeks more than 125 lots have been disposed of and already several houses have been started, while others are erected on lots previously sold. Mr. Conant is also developing Fellsway, in the Middlesex Fells and has negotiations pending for several lots. Purchasers will develop their sites with modern houses.

Medford.

Warren F. Freeman of the Kimball building reports the sale for Adelaide V. Foster of Swampscott of lots 51 and 52, Eliot street, containing 10,224 square feet of land, assessed for $600. The purchaser, D. Cavera, buys to improve in conjunction with the 16 lots of land on Main, Eliot and Kerway streets which he recently purchased through Mr. Freeman.

West Roxbury.

Robert T. Fowler has sold his property at No. 217 Park street to Julia A. Kunzl, wife of Adolph A. Kunzl, who already occupies the premises. The property consists of a handsome colonial style, single frame dwelling and 5,000 feet of land. The house, being new, is not yet assessed, but it is understood that the purchase price was in the vicinity of $7,500.

Jamaica Plain.

Robert T. Fowler has sold for Charles R. Currier the property at No. 107 Hollywood avenue. It consists of a single frame dwelling and [illegible] square feet of land, assessed for $7,500. Nellie M. Dolan, wife of Thomas F. Dolan, is the purchaser and after extensive alterations will occupy the premises.

West Watertown.

Another valuable property that is meeting with great success in West Watertown, on Main street, is under development by the Park Land Company, No. 15 [illegible] street. The land is located near Watertown square and fronts 2,800 feet on Main street. It is also near schools, churches, stores, etc. Several houses of character have been erected at West Watertown, and since the land has been made accessible to the public, thousands of dollars' worth have been disposed of.

South Boston.

Theodore R. McCarthy has sold to John Murphy the brick house and 1,200 square feet of land at No. 306 K street, corner of Sixth street, all assessed for $7,300, of which $2,300 is on the land.

Dorchester.

The frame dwelling and 8,817 square feet of land at No. 632 Columbia road, corner of Hamlet street all taxed for $9,200, have been purchased by Marion E. Cook from A. Dustin Elliott. The land is rated for $4,200.

FINE CHANCE TO BUY LOTS AT SEASHORE

An attractive offer for the purchase of land and the acquisition of a seashore home is presented in the announcement of the sale of lots in Squantum Park.

Across the waters of Dorchester bay, Squantum presents an attractive picture, with its rising uplands and historic rocky promontories and fine sandy beaches. With Dorchester bay on one side and Quincy bay on the other, Squantum is always sure to get a cooling wind from some quarter.

The view down the harbor from the Quincy shore side, is a magnificent one, opening as it does a wide vista of water studded with islands, and in the evening time rendered more attractive by the flashing lights of the lighthouse sentinels of the harbor, and of the glow of the myriad lights along the Hull peninsula and over the bay the soft illumination of the Winthrop sky.

J. R. Nelson, with offices at No. 617 Tremont building, who operates Squantum Park, reports the following sales for the past week: Gustaf A. Johnson of Brockton, lot 9, 4220 square feet, on Dorchester street, $650; H. A. Seaborg of Worcester, lot 485, 3583 square feet, on Park avenue, $365; Felix McCann of Roxbury, lot 913, 5489 square feet, on Squantum street, $660; William A. BUNGALOW AND CAMP LOTS HAVE BIG SALE

The sale of bungalow and camp lots on Inglenook has begun with a rush. Inglenook is the newest development of the United States Land Trust, of which Charles E. Stephenson and J. Lefiro Martin are the trustees, with offices at No. 1 Beacon street. This property is situated on the west shore of Martin's Pond, with a frontage on the pond of over 2,000 feet.

One of the most remarkable facts about the opening sale was that the company sold every person two or more lots who went to it on the first excursion last Saturday.

Inglenook is one of the most accessible Summer properties around Boston, being only twenty-two minutes' ride from Boston and a less distance from Lynn, Lawrence, Lowell, Salem and Woburn.

It is just far enough from the city to be entirely removed from its environment and yet offering quiet country life and beautiful and congenial surroundings, necessitating no long and tiresome journey and absence from business.

Not only is Inglenook desirable for the pleasure seekers, but also for the seekers after perfect health, it being one of the most healthful locations near Boston.

OLD MORSE ESTATE NOW BUILDING SITE

One part of Boston which can boast of having the real country within city limits is the West Roxbury section, corner of Washington and Grove streets, reached by the East Walpole or Grove street via Washington street cars from the new Forest Hills Elevated terminal.

The large estate, formerly owned by Robert M. Morse, fronting on the new Washington street boulevard, after many years of quiet rest, has, during the past few weeks, been transformed [illegible] into 300 beautiful Summer cottage, bungalow and camping lots. Several miles of streets have been built and water pipes have been laid in every street, so that those desiring to build or occupy Summer places can have water immediately. The Securities Real Estate Trust has worked wonders with this immense natural grove, which is almost covered with maple, oak and pine trees, so that the property to-day looks like a modern park.

The property is reached by three lines of electric cars and is bordered by accepted, finished city streets being within the five cent fare to any part of the city.

The trust, with offices at No. 101 Tremont street, is now mailing free a descriptive circular, which gives full details concerning this property.

TWO POPULAR PLACES.

Wellesley Park and Weymouth Acres Attract Many Buyers.

Wellesley Park, [illegible], now being developed by Brown & Stackpole of No. 101 Tremont street, is considered by competent judges to be ideal for bungalow or camp sites or healthful permanent homes. Its easy accessibility to Boston by fast electrics and the rich, fertile soil combine to make it one of the most attractive and desirable of [illegible]. It will well repay a visit [illegible].

Weymouth Acres, [illegible] also being developed by Brown & Stackpole, supplies a long felt want for small farms suitable for poultry raising or market gardening within a fifteen-mile radius of the city. The [illegible] their extra time in getting "close to nature" and thereby [illegible] the rugged health and strength characteristic of people who live in the country.

Out-of-Town Sales.

J. W. Wilbur reports the following deeds passed during the week: [illegible] lots 4[illegible] to 405, on Main street, Bradford Terrace, Haverhill, [illegible] Pittsburg [illegible] 64, on [illegible] A. Wotton [illegible] street, Haverhill Villa Sites; George E. Minners, lots 111 to 115, on Hills avenue, at Bradford Terrace, Haverhill; Timothy F. Rearden, lots 63 and 64, on Bowker avenue at Liberty Heights, Lexington; Dr. Ernest E. Brooks, lot 5, on Wachusett avenue, Overlook Park, Arlington, and to A. Fred Wiggin [illegible] avenue at Mas[illegible].

Josiah F. P[illegible] Landell farm on the Boston road, Francestown, N. H. There are 80 acres of upland, frame house, large [illegible] outbuildings [illegible] bought for a Summer home.

The Cha[illegible] farm [illegible] road, West [illegible] Prescott to [illegible] fashioned farm buildings, live stock and other personal property.

A. E. Benny of the Pilgrim building has sold for E. J. Pratt of [illegible], his property bordering on Silver lake, Pembroke, consisting of 12 acres of land, a large modern two-story house, stable, garage and [illegible] boathouse, with other outbuildings. [illegible] J. W. Eck[illegible]brook of Boston was the purchaser; he will make extensive improvements and occupy for a Summer home.

V. B. Grover of Halifax has sold through the office of A. E. Benny a [illegible] market garden farm, containing nearly [illegible] acres of land with modern up-to-date set of buildings, valued at $5,000. Frank E. Tyler of Boston was the purchaser.

CAPE COD AWAKENS FROM WINTER SLEEP TO FULNESS OF SPRING BUILDING BOOM

CAPE COD has awakened from [illegible] long Winter's sleep and is [illegible] as a daisy. Cape Cod has awakened and got busy in one of the biggest [illegible] building booms ever seen in this section of the country. For proof of this a visit to the Summer colonies of the historic [illegible] the story of nearly [illegible] new Summer [illegible] valued at more than [illegible] dollars.

From the rock-bound shores of Wareham, from Cromeset Point, where empties the Weweantit River of old Indian lore into the bay, away along the high shores of Buzzards Bay, through to the sloping sandy beaches of the lower Cape on to the artistic sand dunes and beautiful [illegible] the same boom, boom, boom. Everybody is on the move, laying stone for foundations, building, painting and getting the landscape work ready for the greatest of Summer seasons.

Cape in Front Rank.

Cape [illegible] Summer [illegible] 300 and even 500 per cent and as the new [illegible] at least $500,000 worth of taxable property has been added to the Cape Cod section. Most of the beautiful highest priced [illegible]

The town of Wareham, which includes Swift's Beach, Long Neck, [illegible] Onset, Burgess Point and [illegible], many cottages have been built. They range from [illegible] to homes that cost [illegible] to the Summer homes there.

[illegible] cottages have been built by N. H. Cross of Everett, George McRae of Everett, L. J. Hewitt of Brighton, H. H. Shrow of Everett, A. [illegible] Ashley of New Bedford. A unique cottage [illegible] is the bungalow of A. H. Cleveland, built entirely by himself.

Boom on in Onset.

Onset is a busy little place, now getting ready for the opening of the season Memorial Day. Painters have been getting the stores and hotels ready and the real estate [illegible] every available cottage is let for the season. Hotel men plan vast improvements to meet the demands of what they expect will be their biggest season. [illegible] Indian name of this village is [illegible], where the old settlers and Indians used to hold their feasts in the form of clambakes. The spot where Wasuota, the Indian chief had his wigwam is located and a land company is selling Summer cottage lots and will soon begin building operations for speculation.

Among the new cottages, ranging from $3,000 to $10,000, in this resort are those of J. E. Kimball of Arlington at Nanumet Heights, H. F. Arnold at Nemasket Park, J. S. Ricketts of Brockton at Nemasket [illegible] Paige of Springfield at Shell [illegible] J. J. Powers of [illegible] and Robert F. Herrick of Milton and a prominent Boston attorney at Indian Neck, J. R. Codman of Brookline [illegible], and Mrs. J. G. Powers of New York City at Plymouth Park, a beautiful home worth $20,000, Dr. B. Allen of Arlington at Nanumet Heights, Isam Mitchell of Brookline on South Boulevard. There are many smaller bungalows at all the beaches, many of which have been built by local people for rent.

Buzzards Bay Activity.

Buzzards Bay by its geographical location and by the healthful climatic conditions there, especially through the Summer, is fast becoming one of the great pleasure resorts of the coast, and presents many advantages for those who seek recreation away from their regular habitations. One of the chief advantages is the train service between that point and Boston. It is possible to do business daily in Boston and the suburbs and return late each afternoon to the cooling breezes of the bay.

The town of Bourne, which includes the beaches of Buzzards Bay village, Monument Beach, Wenaumet, Cataumet, Pocasset and Sagamore Beach is the first and highest town in valuation on the Cape. Here at least fifty cottages have been built last season with an increased valuation of at least $100,000. At Buzzards Bay the summer cottages range anywhere from $1,000 to $15,000 in cost. Among the larger cottages in this town are those of W. L. Carver of Boston, W. P. Taylor of Lynn, W. L. Dawson of South Framingham at Sagamore, Dr. Elisha Flagg of Boston at Buzzards Bay, Jacob Wood of Boston at Wing's Neck, [illegible] Walter F. Chamberlain of Brockton at Monument Beach. For social pleasures at the resorts at the head of the bay are the Stearns Club at Monument Beach, and the Beverly Yacht Club at Wing's Neck, in which many prominent Boston yachtsmen are members. G. B. Dabney, owner of the sonder Beaver, and Robert W. Emmons 2d, owner of the Ribelot, which will sail at Kiel next month in Emperor William's race, are well known summer residents of this place.

Falmouth, which takes in both part of the north and south shores of the "swing" of the Cape, has some of the most beautiful Summer places in this section. This year about fifteen cottages have been built. Among the most expensive ones are those of A. L. Langly of [illegible] at Falmouth Heights, Colonel J. W. Lewis and Sylvester Baker, both of Brockton, at Silver Beach, North Falmouth. At Megansett Beach cottages are popping up on all sides, many being owned by local people and Summer residents from Brockton, Taunton, Fall River and Providence.

Barnstable, which consists of the Summer resorts of Hyannis, Hyannisport, Craigville, Osterville, Cotuit and Centreville, has not been so strongly affected by the boom as the towns on Buzzards' Bay, but at least fifteen Summer places will be built before the close of the season, many of the larger ones being at Hyannisport where there is strong talk of building a large hotel, the scheme to be financiered by Boston parties. A plan is also on foot to build a hospital at Hyannis for the benefit of the many Summer people, as well as the local population in the Summer months. Hotel men at this place look for [illegible]

Mr. Russell has also sold for the estate of Arthur R. Jones the block of two frame dwellings at No. [illegible] street and No. [illegible] Brook street, Brookline, together with [illegible] square feet of land, all assessed on a valuation of $12,000. The purchaser was F. L. Sweet, who bought for investment.

LAND SALE IN THE FENWAY.

Lots to Be Offered by the Boston Water Power Company

The Boston Water Power Company will offer at public auction at the Real Estate Exchange, Monday, [illegible] square feet of its Fenway land. The sale will be managed by John [illegible] of No. 18 Tremont street, who at a similar sale held in January sold [illegible] feet of adjoining land. The lots are well distributed through the Fenway and comprise some of the best in that section.

The terms are substantially the same as those for the [illegible] sale. One-sixth of the purchase price will be accepted in cash and five-sixths in bonds of the company, two hundred dollars per lot being required at time of sale. For the purpose of the sale bonds are given a value of $1,650.00 representing their face value and accrued [illegible] are thus given [illegible] this figure is [illegible] market value of [illegible] that they will be a [illegible] lots at from 60 [illegible] assessed value.

UNIVERSITY PARK SALES.

Land Purchasers Planning to Erect Homes at Once

The feature of the last week's sales at University Park was the number of cash buyers who intend to build immediately, contracts having been let for four new high-class houses. The desirable restrictions of this property are bringing a fine class of buildings, and the company has attractive propositions for those desiring to build immediately for a small amount down.

Many persons intending to build have considered this property. [illegible] street, and great jumps [illegible]

To accommodate persons who are unable to [illegible] during the day, the company has decided to keep its office on the grounds on the corner of Concord avenue and Walden street, Cambridge, open every evening until 8 o'clock, where Mr. Frank, one of the trustees, will show the lots and plans for houses to all interested.

NEW HOMESTEAD TRACT.

North Weymouth Bluffs Attracting Many City People.

North Weymouth Bluffs, which is being developed by [illegible] with offices at No. 637 Old South building, is one of the many improved suburban subdivisions now attracting attention from prospective home owners and investors. The work of development begun last year is being steadily pushed and during the past week several hundred workmen were engaged in completing the streets and sidewalks and installing other municipal improvements. Construction work on a score of new houses has been started, and these will be finished before many weeks. Some of the many recent purchasers have taken out plans for homes, and some of them will be started very shortly. The many attractions at North Weymouth Bluffs, combined with its natural advantages, have served to bring many city dwellers who have found it convenient to build a suburban home there and still be within easy access of the city proper.

PROFITS IN REAL ESTATE AND TESTIMONIALS FROM OUR CUSTOMERS.

Much praise is due to your company for its liberal and sincere way of looking out for the best interests of its customers. My account was held good by them for over six months without extra expense, while I was unable to make my payments. F. B.

In all my business dealings with you I have always found you a concern of your word. You have treated me in a fair and square way, and I have received all that I bargained for. I am well pleased with the lot which I bought from you, and believe that it will advance in value from year to year. JOHN J. C.

INVESTMENT WITHOUT LOSS OR WORRY.

For over a year, while unable to make any payments at all, your company protected my land account without any extra cost to me, and I heartily recommend their manly and honest way of doing business in protecting the interest of every customer. CELINA M.

I have also had other business dealings with you, and believe the gentlemen who are managing your Trust to be honorable and can be depended on to do all that they claim. W. A.

I am entirely satisfied with the results of my investment with you. My dealings with you cover a period of over two years, during which time I have learned that I can trust you, and you have done everything that you agreed to do. I am pleased to know that the lots in the same neighhborhood with mine have been steadily increasing in value. The small cash payment and the liberal terms which you made me when I bought my lot have put me in a position to buy a good piece of real estate that otherwise I might never have been able to buy. Many thanks for your kindness and fair treatment. B. J.

My investmment in your real estate is a very good one, and I am more than satisfied with it. Your method of taking care of your customers when they are out of work or sick is very commendable, because it puts everybody dealing with you in a position to carry out their contract satisfactorily to both parties. P. B.

Just twelve days after I bought my lot I was offered $88 more than it cost me. I was very skeptical at first about buying one of your Charles River Heights lots, as I was afraid I could not sell it again for a long time, but am now fully satisfied and convinced that I made no mistake in buying the lot. I consider I have one of the best lots in your property and am going to hold it for the big rise in prices that will surely come with the completion of the Elevated Station at Forest Hills. R. C.

The diplomas are mellowing on the Tree of Knowledge—the various branches of learning are bending with ripening students—the ranks of the learned will soon be re-enforced with a crop of fresh recruits—a few thousand more fathers will shortly cease to support their sons and transfer that job to the world.

My! But the national brow is increasing in height. It's a mighty poor block nowadays that doesn't number an A. B., a B. S., a Ph. D., or an M. D. among its householders. Great! But, unfortunately, the A. S. S. still seems to hold his own.

The conviction is rapidly gaining strength that one of the best courses at college is the athletic course. Aside from its most beneficent function of strengthening bodies to stand the strain of study, it fulfills another purpose—it teaches men to do things for the glory of the deed—it shows them how to grow strong through trying a little harder each day—it proves that development can only be attained through application—it trains men to play fair and according to the rules—to try their level best—to vie cleanly, and to keep at it until the tape is broken and the whistle is sounded and the last batter is out.

Too many bookish citizens are as great a pest to a nation as too many ignorami. Illiteracy is a curse to any commonwealth, but there is also a danger in a surplus of theorists.

To stuff information into a brain as corn is rammed into a Strassburg goose, is not enough.

The tendency of the college is to supply instead of apply, and therein lies the greatest weakness of the academician.

So long as the majority of instructors are without world or business experience—so long as empiricists (trained by the merely learned, who, in turn, have gained the bulk of their knowledge from books, prepared by simon-pure scholastics) dominate the curriculum, the bearer of a university degree will be handicapped in his lifework until he has acquired through experience that most essential of all distinctions, a degree of common sense.

And it is because he is singularly lacking in practical tendencies that the average college man fails to find an eager community welcoming his entry into service.

The pass-key is not pressed upon him. He must stand in line and take his chance with every other applicant for the same position.

He must prove himself as well as his erudition. He must compete with graduates of the streets—with the self-reliant alumni of the School of Hard Knocks.

He must show that his heart is as jammed with courage as his brain is crammed with data. He must demonstrate his ability to cope with shifting conditions—to think on his feet—to conclude for himself and by himself.

He must not forget that he has been hitherto nurtured on predigested knowledge.

All his ideas and his ideals are so standard that they have been committed to print. He is saturated with precedent, but he has never established a precedent.

He must bring to the scales upon which he will be measured sufficient weight of originality to cope with the shrewdness, the native wit, and the readiness of the auto-trained.

His diploma simply signifies the conventional mold in which his intellect has been shaped. He has been marked and labeled, but not tested.

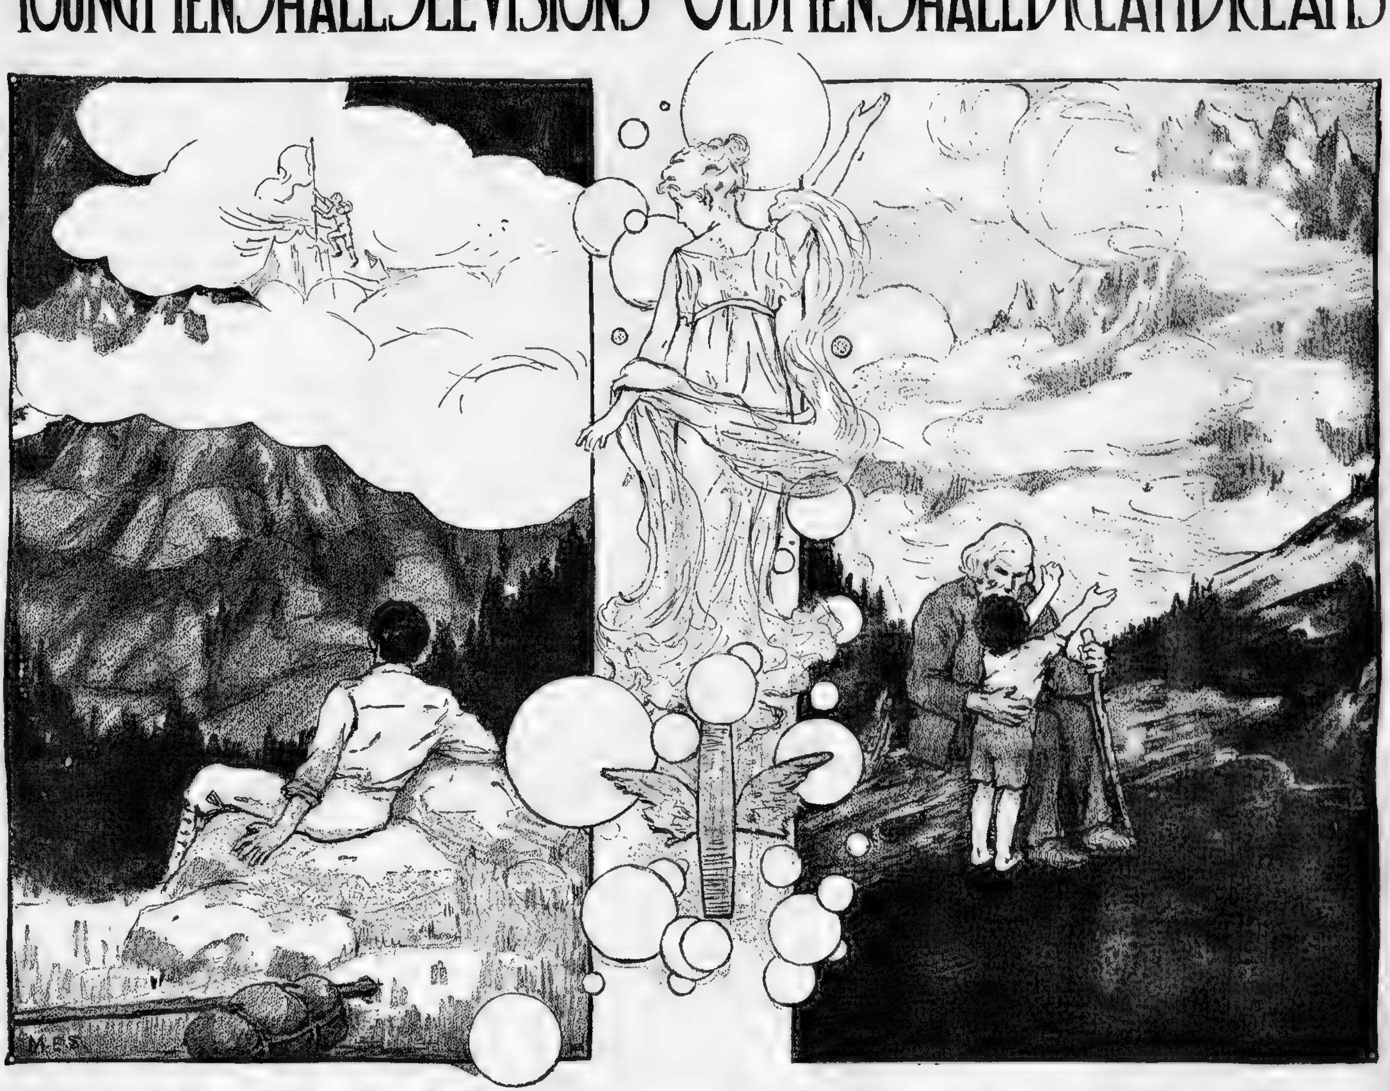
YOUNG MEN SHALL SEE VISIONS—OLD MEN SHALL DREAM DREAMS



For Youth and Physical Power There Are the Joys of Ambition, of Selfish Hopes and Striving, THE SEEING OF VISIONS.

Copyright, 1911, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

THERE are many periods in the lives of human beings, each with its possibilities of happiness and compensation.

Especially distinct and different are the extreme ages of active youth and thoughtful old age. In the life of the man who lives properly there is great joy in youth, but greater joy in age.

Each extreme of life is happy, and the life of youth and of age ought to be as far apart as the valley and the mountain peak.

One of our ablest, most useful men, Thomas A. Edison, indignantly puts away the suggestion that he should begin to rest in old age, stop the hard work and change his life. He declares that life must be all hard work, the same steady work from the day when the brain begins its maturity to the day when it is put away in the grave.

But Edison is wrong.

Man is not put here to be fastened to the plough like a beast of burden, and to pull at the traces all his life. There is one life, one activity, one set of emotions for youth and another and different life for age.

The Bible tells in few and beautiful words the separation of youth and age: "And your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams."

What could be more beautifully expressed.

The life of the young man is in his visions, his hopes of the future, in plans of achievement and success FOR HIMSELF. From his boyhood he sees visions, follows them to success or defeat.

And then comes old age, the day when the old man dreams dreams.

Youth is the age of striving and of selfishness; old age the period of advising unselfishly, of dreaming dreams for the young and for the future that age is not to see.

* * *

In our civilization the trouble is that all is for youth and too little for age.

The man who can lift the load, run swiftly, hit hard and push his fellow down the hill is the man for whom all the plans are made. There is little planning, little place or honor in the world of to-day for the old; little heed is paid to their dreams, there is little appreciation of their kindness and unselfishness.

But it will not always be thus. The day will come when youth will listen with respect to the teachings of the old and look with love and reverence upon the unselfishness of the old. That day will come, and, let us hope, will not long be delayed.

The young man in his full strength, climbing the hill, meeting and overcoming obstacles, adding to the knowledge and possessions of his fellow men, indifferent to pain in the pursuit of his object, is an admirable being animated by a thinking mind.

Far more admirable and beautiful is the old age of peace and of unselfishness. The old man looks upon the grandchild, dreaming dreams for that child's welfare, thinking not of himself, yet deeply and intelligently considering the future in which he is to have no share, guiding and restraining impetuous youth, and wisely stimulating imagination. There is a sight more to be admired than any accomplishment of fiery youth.

So it is with the women that have created the human race, have borne its burdens and shared so little in its honors.

The young woman in all her beauty and power, with her courage in childbirth and her marvellous capacity for devotion, is yet not as beautiful or as noble a specimen of our race as the white-haired grandmother, unselfishly devoted to younger people, happy in the memories of her youth and serene in the peace of old age, unselfish and benevolent and as far in peace, dignity and beauty above the turmoil and passionate eagerness of youth as is the white cloud above the black soil cut into furrows.

* * *

It will be well for the world when human beings shall realize that they live in one life MANY LIVES, when their lives shall be divided properly, in order that in each year the mind and the body may do their best, and give to the Spirit that dwells within the closest relationship with the universe and the sense of fullest accomplishment.

For Old Age, After a Life Well Spent, There Is the Beauty of Dreams, Planning for Others, UNSELFISH HAPPINESS.

The trouble is that we put into one age the duties and the feelings of another. Our children are men and women before they have really been children. And the old are cursed with the anxiety of the struggle which should be borne by vigorous youth alone.

There is little honor for the aged, and our civilization lays upon nine-tenths of all human beings such a load of hard labor and selfish struggle that they cannot grow old in dignity.

The visions of youth are clouded by unworthy, selfish and petty ambitions, and the dreams of age are made hideous by poverty, anxiety and other evils that old age should never know

However, a better day is coming, and coming quickly. For the first time in the history of this earth there are entire great nations, ALL OF WHOM CAN READ AND MAY THINK IF THEY WILL.

Selfishness will die out as thought and intelligence progress. Knowledge is no longer in the possession of a few, keeping the majority in ignorance and in want.

* * *

Already we see in the old age of our richest and most powerful men signs that point to a better future. The very rich give away their money; they do it intelligently, to help human beings on this earth.

In their plans for education, distributing knowledge, combating disease, they dream dreams of a better and happier world. Great fortunes are no longer spent to bribe unseen powers and buy eternal felicity for the individual and not very important soul. The rich man of to-day plans for the happiness of those that he has to leave on this earth, dreams dreams for the earth dwellers.

* * *

Already in an imperfect way we see a realization of what we take to be the meaning of that text from the Bible.

A young man starting out, even in our distorted civilization, sees visions of wealth and power for himself. He has the power and gets the wealth, and in his old age dreams dreams of a better world, and gives back tens of millions to those from whom he took the money and power that he cannot and would not take beyond the grave.

We hope that Mr. Thomas A. Edison, who, like a hero, has served his fellow men as few have done, will change his mind, and decide at least eight or ten years from now to give up the hard work and devote his life from seventy years of age onward to the dreaming of dreams, the contemplation of the marvellous universe that lies around us in the vastness of space, and the wonderful future possibilities of this home-earth, and the intelligent and wonderful race that will one day inhabit it.

WE have all heard and read much of the ancient religions of India. It is the land of the great Vedas, those remarkable works, old 3000 B. C. and containing not only religious ideas for a perfect life, but also facts which all the sciences have since proved true. Electricity, radium, electrons, airships—all seemed to be known to the seers who formulated the Vedas

It is something of a shock to one who has read the Vedas (even though he knows of the decadence of India) to find in that land a score of conflicting creeds, the awful ignorance of women, the unutterable evils of child marriage and enforced widowhood, and the prevailing worship among the masses of [illegible] and phallic emblems

These conditions, with caste prejudices, which divide India into numberless sects, have plunged the once great land into an abyss of superstition and degeneracy, impossible to understand, until seen.

The beautiful ethics of the Vedas are utterly misrepresented by the most powerful of all the sects—the Brahmins, who claim to illustrate and teach them; yet who in their temples, display those emblems and animals as objects of worship, against which the Vedas plainly protest. Buddha, who gave his whole life effort, 5000 B. C., to reviving the beautiful philosophy, and who left the world a religion almost identical in its principles with that which Christ taught later, is to-day worshipped only in name in India by millions of people

For his noble creed they accept the interpretation of priests, and follow the useless forms and mechanical ceremonies laid down for them—forms and ceremonies devoid of all the spirit which was infused into a decadent religion by the great and divine teacher.

As a result of these debased conditions, there has arisen a young school of materialists in India—a school which denies everything spiritual and believes in nothing save human achievements—that most petty and trivial of things

But now comes Light, on the Path, in the organization known as Arya Samaj, a society composed of some of the most virile and brilliant young men, and mature men, of modern India

The Arya Samaj movement is a very recent movement, the first Samaj having been established in Bombay in 1875 A. D.; but it preaches an ancient faith. Swami Dayanand, the revered founder of the Arya Samaj, never claimed credit for teaching a single new doctrine; in fact, he was ever reminding his hearers that the object that he had set before himself and the Arya Samaj was to resuscitate the religion of the old Aryas that had been taught to them in the Vedas. The Arya Samaj, thus, is a new movement; but believes in and preaches the ancient Vedic religion which it is the from this standpoint, an Arya Samajist will repudiate the suggestion that his religion is a variety of what is known as Hinduism.

He maintains that what now passes current as Hinduism is but a corrupt form of the ancient Vedic religion which it is the supreme function of the Arya Samaj to set forth in its primitive purity

The Arya Samaj is a new movement, but it believes in and preaches an ancient faith.

The Arya Samaj is a theistic movement, that believes in one Omnipresent and All-seeing personal God who animates, sustains and controls the universe. To Him alone is worship due.

The Arya Samaj believes in the Vedas (the four Samhitas) as the sole final authority in religion.

According to the Arya Samaj, the human soul has a substantial existence and its life is beginningless and endless.

The highest ideal is the redemption of the inward spirit, mukti or freedom from sin and not a material or social self-seeking beyond the grave, in a distant heaven.

To realize this ideal, the individual depends upon his own effort. The Arya Samaj does not believe in vicarious atonement or salvation through a mediator. The Arya Samaj lays stress on the five daily duties, known as the five Yajnas or great sacrifices.

The Arya Samaj lays stress upon the individual rights and responsibilities. It opens its doors to all, advocating the re-admission into the Vedic Church of those who have left that fold and the admission into it of born Moslems and Christians. It advocates the cause of the Depressed Classes.

The Arya Samaj looks with disfavor upon the present complex caste system and works to bring back the simple arrangement of the past four Varnas only, and these determined by worth and not by birth.

It inculcates a spirit of altruism and self-abnegation, but condemns indiscriminate charity. It inculcates the discipling of the altruistic instinct as emphatically as of the egoistic one.

According to to the Arya Samaj, man's highest aim should be true spiritual self-seeking. This is somewhat different from mere material self-seeking beyond the grave, the company of our dead ones and saints. The highest ideal of the Arya is Mukti, freedom from sin, the inward redemption of the Spirit.

The task is arduous and requires stern discipline of the spirit. One of the cardinal points of the faith is that this inward redemption of the spirit, this sinlessness, this true spiritual self-seeking can be attained only by self-effort. The Law of Karma holds sway in the moral as well as the physical world. To be strong and healthy in body, I must myself assimilate and grow. No other man's stomach can do it for me. Again, I must myself throw away the worthless matter. No other man's excretory system can do it for me. Others can change conditions; further than this the task is mine only. Similarly it is not allowed that any man come between us and our "proper business."

According to the Arya Samaj, our virtue and vice are our inalienable property. No one's virtue can save me! no one's vice can damn me. The Arya Samaj denies that there can be anything like vicarious atonement or salvation through a mediator.

To realize the ideal we must depend upon our own effort. What direction should that effort take? The Arya Samaj prescribes a discipline for the individual. In the first place we must be in daily communion with God. The company of the holy sanctifies us. The performance of Sandhya, morning and evening, is the first duty of an Arya Samajist. I cannot here give an exposition of the Sandhya Mantras. I can only say that the Sandhya begins with a general prayer for prosperous life—prosperous not in the narrow materialistic sense. Further on, the worshipper prays for healthy and strong constitution, vigorous intellect, purity of heart and a long, active and well-spent life. The worshipper meditates upon the nature of the Brahman and finally ends with a prayer that he may be able to surrender himself into the hands of the Lord. The second daily duty of an Arya is the performance of Havan, which, besides ministering to the spiritual needs of the sacrificer, also improves hygienic conditions of life. Other daily duties are reverence for elders, kindness to lower animals, hospitality to strangers, considerate treatment of the waifs and strays.

It is interesting to know that all members of the new sect are deeply concerned in freeing Indian women from the evils of child marriage and in giving widows the privilege of remarriage.

The Arya Samaj teaches that the human soul has always been in existence; its life is beginningless and endless. It does not come into being with this birth, nor does it dissolve with the dissolution or disintegration of its present bodily frame. Our present life is but a span; it is a meeting place of two immensities, an infinitesimal fraction of our total life. The soul finds a temporal manifestation; but it is not the child of time; it "hath for ever."

And it believes in self development, character building and usefulness and unselfishness as preparations for lives to come. It is in India, the wholesome antidote to orthodox Brahmanism and degenerate Buddhism which New Thought is in America to old-fashioned orthodox Christianity with its gloom and terrors. May it spread and prosper in India as "New Thought" prospers here.

Alan Dale Writes of Theatres of Paris and Idols That Fade Away

By ALAN DALE.

PARIS, May 20. One must see the Polaire whilst on [illegible] Paris a darling [illegible] is not a darling until, exhausted, she drops by the wayside, as in London. In Paris, as in New York a vogue [illegible] quickly. It is very lively [illegible] it extinguishes itself, and not an ember remains. So one must see the Polaire whilst one may. She is at the Folies Bergere, largely and vociferously announced in flaming, vivid letters, in a sketch called "Fumeuse d'Opium," which is part and parcel of the usual Springtime "review."

Review Is Old.

One has to plough ones weary way—like the gentleman in Gray's "Elegy"—through two hours of this chowderlike review before one reaches Polaire. It is just as well. It keeps one anticipating, and anticipation is the salt of theatredom. It keeps one hoping for the best, instead of enduring the worst. What a dose of review one does get at the Folies Bergere! And why, why is it that a French review is popularly supposed to be so flamboyantly up to date? I cannot understand why [illegible] at the Folies Bergere is such "odd game" that it wouldn't [illegible] Honestly, I [illegible] as patent as the bills and not nearly as soothing. There is the usual galaxy of raucous-voiced Parisiennes, bleating perverted American chestnuts as they stand around. There is the conventional [illegible], there are the usual "topicalities" to appeal to the low-browed, and there are some gorgeous costumes.

Some of these costumes, shimmering and saucy, tickle the eye, and surprise one at the perpetual ingenuity of sartorial Paris. One maiden does a Spanish dance bared to the waist-line, which doesn't even cause a murmur in Paris, though a similar exhibition in New York a few years ago agitated the police.

But this entire "review" is destined more for the itinerant American and the [illegible] than for the Parisian. It is so staple! There are "interpreters" at the door, who help you to get "soaked" in English, if you prefer it to French. Personally, I like being soaked in French. It adds a little piquancy to the operation.

Polaire doesn't come on till 11 o'clock. Before that you prowl around and let the gaudy scene permeate your pores. The Folies Bergere is always crowded. It has to be, or it would be a punishment. Fortunately [illegible] to look at the show. That is one thing I like about a French music hall—there [illegible]. You can turn from the chastisement on the stage—and prowl. You can sit with your back to the glaring scene and sip a bock. You are not obliged to stuff yourself with the foolish review. They are at least merciful in France. In New York the art of dilatory entertainment has not yet arrived. In New York one is greedy, and always famished. One has the indigestion of amusement.

No Author Named.

Polaire's "turn" lasted for somewhat more than fifteen minutes. It was a melodramatic pantomime, in one act, and a bout of gore. No author's name was attached to "The Opium Smoker." It was just as well. Programs here cost half a franc. For half a franc in pocket one needn't know the name of any author. Oh, joy!

It was a dark scene an opium joint in San Francisco, kept by a Chinese gentleman called Tchang-Li. In one corner, doped, lay a young American called Bob Likins; in another, also doped, reclined Norah. This, of course, was Polaire. She wore a long violet gown, that outlined her "special" waist, of course. Her black hair, in a towsled mass, dangled around her face. She looked as homely as she is always expected to look. Her reputation in that respect was maintained.

Tchang Li and his accomplice are plotting to rob Bob, who, being American, is very rich. (Paris doesn't acknowledge any other brand of American.) Bob has wandered into the joint, and is fine prey. Norah hears their "nefarious plans" and warns Bob. The "young American" is knocked down and kicked by the villains, and the plot thickens. There is slow music, of course. It never lets up. There is nothing so persistent as slow music, so-called.

The two villains exeunt to seek a bag in which they plan to place Bob and then chuck him into the sea. It is very thr-r-rilling. While they are away Norah revives the wounded Bob and helps him to escape. Bob is a typical American—in the French sense. That is to say, he is clean shaved, wears a gray suit and a red flower in the lapel of his coat. All Americans sport flowers in their coats, always.

Dies in Crimson Horror.

Just as Bob is about to escape, the nefarious ones return, and furious with Norah, they bind her hand and foot. Then Tchang Li, with his enormous nails, lacerates her breast. She turns to the audience, all gore and misery, and expires in "the most atrocious sufferings," while Bob, the American, is "torn with conflicting emotion."

Then—curtain. It is all. Very touching. Polaire, who used to do real melodrama at the Grand Guignol, must look upon this as child's play. The meaning of "Fumeuse d'Opium" is explained in the program, though it is quite unnecessary. Polaire, dying in a crimson horror of blood needs no synopsis in [illegible] and the San Francisco opium joint might just as well be some old wine shop in a Paris slum. However, having bought a program, I am making use of it. Why should I waste half a franc?

As soon as Polaire had disappeared—after reviving sufficiently to bow her acknowledgments to a not too startled audience the review sets in again. One doesn't have to stay any longer. Release has come. This time the ploughman (to return to Gray's "Elegy") homeward plods his weary way. The Folies-Bergere review is a dope in itself!

"LIFE A CINCH," SAYS THOMAS A. EDISON

By ADA PATTERSON.

"This earth's a cinch," said Thomas Edison, the wizard worker in electricity, in a recent interview. Mr. Edison ought to know, for he has lived sixty-four splendidly active years upon the earth to which he gives the embracing name. But observe that Mr. Edison, careful scientist that he is, adds a condition. "This earth is a cinch," he says, "if we take it right."

Mr. Edison spoke of "the earth" as all of us allude to "life," as the sum of the conditions that surround us. Life, he concludes, is a good thing and pleasant, and adds the philosopher's proviso, "if we take it right."

"Taking life right" means, first, not being afraid of it. The brave man or woman faces life as a soldier goes to battle. The soldier has no guarantee that he will return from the battle alive. But he hopes he will, and meanwhile is prepared to make a good fight. Every man or woman who succeeds has the spirit of the good soldier. A woman who has learned much wisdom in life's school told me that she never blinked at trouble, but looked at it squarely, for she said, "The trouble that is faced is half conquered." Troubles are much like nettles. Handle them with fearful tips of fingers and you are surely hurt. Grasp and crush them in a firm palm and their sting is half lost.

Don't Expect Too Much.

Taking life right is also not expecting too much of it. We must not mourn too long when we find that it is not a forest of flowers peopled with good fairies. They fare better who regard it as the field on which a good fight is to be fought, or a workshop in which everyone can become a skilled mechanic. Disappointment is the bitterest drop in the cup given us to drink. That bitter essence is missing from the draught if we do ask too much of life. If we expect mere men and women to be angels we have sprinkled a drop of gall in our cup. If we expect the way to success to be without obstacles another drop is instilled in the draught. If we claim exemption from the common lot of mortals, that suffering which is our growing pain, the cup will be bitter indeed

Taking life right includes seeing things in their right proportions. It is the ability to see the smallness of a small thing and the magnitude of a serious problem. Such clear vision scatters the troublesome mirages of life. It prevents a woman staying at home from a merry making because her new gown is not finished. The clear-eyed woman will laugh, wear the old gown, jest about it and enjoy the merrymaking. The clear-eyed man will not minimise a crisis. He will know that it is a crisis, and summoning all his strength to meet it, will triumph over it. The pitiable story of a former financier of San Francisco, who was evicted from his dismantled home, was summarized by the faithful old negro who was his companion in misfortunes. "De kunnel kept on laffin and puttin everything off. He was jes nachally careless."

Make Outloook Wide.

Taking life night means a continuous enlargement of our world. We are taking it wrong if we permit our interests to narrow. We began life in a contracted sphere. At the beginning we are chiefly concerned with the softness of our bed, the comfortable width of our cradles and the plentitude of our food. At life's end we ought to be deeply concerned in securing all these to every member of the human race.

No one takes life right who doesn't make his motto "I shall do instead of being done to." There are persons who look upon life as a plastic thing which they can mould into any form that pleases them. Others think life is a high wind and they poor weather vanes whipped ruthlessly about by blasts from every quarter. The first is an active liver of life, the second a passive endurer of it. The last is the sort that whimpers about being a poor tool of fate. "Fate" is a poor boogaboo that has frightened nations and individuals as stories about the bad men have intimidated unseasonably boisterous children. But a time comes when the sturdy minded child outgrows his horror of the boogie man and we, a generation of grown-ups, should have outgrown our fear of that other boogie man, "Fate." In a very large measure we can control our own fate. Character is the chisel that can shape it practically at our will. It is time to stop whimpering. It is in us, as in Edison, to prove that "this earth is a cinch."

A Successful Wife

In the Adirondacks.

IT was terribly hot hat Summer and we went up to the Adirondacks for a vacation. I thought the open air would be fine for my husband, but the pool and the billiard room kept him indoors all day and all night, and I sat on the piazza and waited for him most of the Summer.

Now and then he would sit on the piazza and read the papers by my side, or he would go to sleep in a long chair while I sewed, and sometimes we took walks in the piney woods.

But I grew to hate that resort, and the smell of the bar, the clicking of the balls, the sound of the music in the ball-room, when I used to be siting up in the hot bedrom with the mosquitoes buzzing and buzzing, waiting for my husband to come upstairs. Why, it all used to make me perfectly crazy, and I used to ask myself what had happened to change me so.

There was one perfectly beautiful girl from Washington, a Miss Pagee, and she was simply crazy about him. I watched them laugh and carry on, and he sent down to New York and got up some books for her, and by that time I had decided that it was certainly all my fault things went as they did between us two, and that I wasn't the proper wife for him, and, as his uncle had said, I had "spoiled his life." Honestly, I guess I should have done something desperate right up there at Paul Smith's if it hadn't been for what happened then.

Hurt to Look at Her

There were times when I could hardly bear to look at her, it hurt me so. They all said she was awfully stylish.

Mr. Kirkland said, "As far as standards go, she is faultlessly beautiful, Sin."

And Mr. Sinclair answered in a way that went all through me, "Well, I expect you should know, Kirk—you're a connoisseur."

She was Mr. Kirkland's kind—what he was used to, and she had travelled widely in Europe, and they could talk about cities and places together. Her aunt and she had the table next to ours in the dining room, and he would call across to her from our table about Paris and Vienna, and they told lots of jokes and laughed a great deal. In her ears she wore diamonds that looked like two big drops of clear water. When she laughed she was sparkling. She was awfully pretty—I suppose there wasn't any doubt about it—but she wasn't my kind.

I often didn't know which way to turn and look at table, because I sat between them and they talked across me, and I was in the way; and, sitting there like that, things used to get small and to fade away; the noise of the plates and the waitresses passing and calling out and hitting my arm, and Miss Pagee's laugh—a soft, affected laugh—it all made me nervous and wild.

I never thought so much about Will Falsworth as I did then, and I kept saying over and over again to myself, "Now, remember that you were in love with a married man! See how it feels!" But it didn't help any.

After dinner my husband would row Miss Pagee out late in the moonlight. From the piazza where I sat in the rocking-chair I could see the boat, with just two dark specks in it, drifting around in the moonlight, and the others would be dancing in the ballroom, but even then I could hear her laugh far out on the lake when the music wasn't too loud.

One night when I was sitting there alone Mr. Sinclair, who was in the woods for a few days, came up on the porch and joined me.

"Where's Kirk?"

I pointed out to the lake.

"Do you mean he has drowned himself?"

He laughed, and I answered, "Oh no, he has just gone out for a while with Miss Pagee."

Mr Sinclair kept me company. He was well and bright, and he said it was "fiendishly hot in town," and that we were "lucky dogs to be up here in this Eden."

To Be Continued Monday.

A Helpless Invalid

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is, it would almost seem, to blame for her own wretchedness. Read what this woman says:

Richmond, Mo. — "When my second daughter was eighteen months old I was pronounced a hopeless invalid by specialists. I had a consultation of doctors and they said I had a severe case of ulceration. I was in bed for ten weeks, had sinking spells, and was pronounced to be in a dangerous condition. My father insisted that we try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and brought me six bottles. I soon began to improve, and before it had all been taken I was as well and strong as ever,—my friends hardly recognized me so great was the change." — Mrs. Woodson Branstetter, Richmond, Mo.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what another woman says:—

Jonesboro, Texas.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for myself and daughter, and consider it unequalled for all female diseases. I would not be without it for anything. I wish every mother in America could be persuaded to use it as there would be less suffering among our sex then. I am always glad to speak a word of praise for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and you are at liberty to use this testimonial."—Mrs. James T. Lawrence, Jonesboro, Texas.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

The testimonials which are constantly being published in the Pinkham advertisements are guaranteed to be absolutely genuine, h[illegible]t, and given without reward in any way whatever.

Are You Fat?

You know you cannot stay fat, don't you? That is, you can not be fat and be in style. The day when a fat woman was tolerated is passed. Nowadays all women must be in proportion or be ridiculous. This does not mean you should become skinny, however. You should not get below the hard flesh line. All you ought to lose is the bulky fat. That done you will find yourself to be a well formed and therefore handsome woman.

Now, how can this be done? By exercising and dieting? Yes, and no. These two means will bring some results, but not easily nor soon. One is very hard work; the other is torture. Besides, neither can be depended on to cause a uniform reduction. They may take off a fleshy shoulder for example, and leave the double chin untouched. What you need, you see, is something pleasant to take that without injury to your health will take the fat off uniformly and quickly, say at the rate of a pound a day or so, until it is all gone where you want it to go.

For this purpose nothing is less expensive safer or simpler than Marmola Prescription Tablets. Inexpensive because one large case costing 75 cents only, will produce results, safe because they cause no wrinkles or stomach trouble but rather improve the health and complexion, simple things and simple, because they do all the work without asking thought or effort on the part of the taker. In short, they are the ANSWER if you are fat and wish to be thinner. If your druggist is of the better kind he will have them. If not, write the licensees, The Marmola Company, 180 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

How to Save Your Hair

People might as well look facts in the face and not be humbugged any longer by dangerous and worthless preparations for the hair.

Dandruff is the direct cause of many cases of baldness, and is also the principal cause of many other ailments of the hair and scalp.

The one thing needed above all others to overcome dandruff and give the hair the gloss of health is cleanliness. You have got to clean the scalp of scales and dandruff, and you have got to keep the pores of your scalp open, before you can hope to have beautiful hair. Just learn this great truth, and follow this advice, and your hair troubles will be a thing of the past. From the sebaceous glands on your head there constantly comes an oily secretion to moisten the scalp and give a gloss to the hair.

Floating in the air are millions of fine particles of dust, dirt and disease germs.

These settle upon the head, mix with the oily secretion, and in a very short time dandruff and scales are formed. These scales stop up the pores, so that the hair roots are not nourished as they should be. Then the hair becomes sick, dies and falls out. Some people allow all this dirt and disease germs to accumulate on their heads for weeks or months without washing the scalp and hair.

Of course, they do not realize what they are doing. Everybody's head and hair ought to be washed at least once a week, no matter what anybody else tells you. It is more or less trouble for a woman to wash her hair so often, but it is trouble worth taking. Don't make the mistake of using common soaps and shampoos.

Common soaps contain too much alkali, and they leave the hair dry and harsh.

Improper soaps and shampoos actually do more harm than good. You should use the one thing which is above suspicion and criticism, and that is Birt's Head Wash. It is made of a Refined Creamy Soap, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid. This formula is so generally recognized as proper that you are invited to ask any physician you know what he thinks about it.

Birt's Head Wash doesn't simply take off the dirt, dandruff, germs and microbes, but it leaves the scalp soft and moist and the hair fine and glossy.

The first time you use Birt's Head Wash you can see an improvement in your hair, and its regular use will help to completely overcome dandruff.

You will be astonished how many impurities will be found in your head and hair, because nothing takes them out like Birt's Head Wash, which is sold in 25c. hygienic tubes. No preparation for the hair ought to be good enough for you unless it is good enough to carry the formula on the package.

BLUSHING BRIDES HOLD SOCIAL STAGE

Many Weddings This Week Will Be Among Most Interesting Functions of Season.

GARDNER-DAVIS NUPTIALS

Bridesmaids Will Include Group of Prettiest and Most Popular Girls in the Younger Set.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

WEDDINGS still continue the centre of interest, and with the ushering in of the month of roses brides and their happy affairs are pre-eminent. The coming week is a decidedly popular one, and almost every day boasts a bride.

The first bride in the long and brilliant procession will be winsome Katherine Fellowes Davis, who on Thursday will become the bride of James Edwin Gardner, Jr., at the First Unitarian Church in Milton, the ceremony to take place at 4 15 p. m. Miss Mary Prince Gardner and Miss Pauline Lamber Davis, sisters of the groom and bride respectively, are to be the maids of honor, while the interesting group of bridesmaids will include Miss Martha Peabody, Miss Ruth Wigglesworth, Miss Charlotte Fellowes Harding and Rachel Brewer of Milton, Gertrude Sturgis of Boston and Annie Tinker of New York. John Norris Thorne of New York, a Harvard classmate of the groom, will be best man, and the ushers will include Nathaniel Fellowes Davis and J. Winthrop Davis, brothers of the bride; Richard Eustis and Henry Durant of Cambridge, Augustus P. Loring, Jr., whose wedding is to take place the 22d, and John Marsh of New York, all Harvard men. A reception at the Davis home, Carmarthen, in East Milton, will follow the ceremony. The young couple will make their future home in Duluth, Minn.

Another bride just added to the ever-lengthening list is Miss Rosalie Channing, second daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Channing of Brookline and Sherborn. Miss Channing was presented some three years ago. Her older sister is Miss Barbara Channing, who is to serve as her sister's maid of honor. The bride's brothers are Walter Channing, Jr., who married Miss Higbee; Henry Morse Channing, whose wife was Miss Katherine Minot, and Hayden Channing of the Norfolk Hunt.

Huntington-Pierce.

Sharing interest with Miss Davis as the initial bride of the month is Miss Sarah Higginson Pierce, whose wedding to Dr. James Lincoln Huntington takes place at the First Parish Church in Brookline on Thursday. The ceremony, which is to be performed by the Rev. Samuel Smith Drury, who was recently married to Cornelia Wolcott, is to take place at 4 in the afternoon. Dr. Huntington is a grandson of the late Bishop Huntington and a son of Mrs. George P. Huntington.

Miss Pierce, who has figured so prominently in all the smart society affairs since her debut, is one of the four attractive daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Pierce. Owing to the illness of the bride's mother the wedding will be a very simple one. The bride will have no attendants. Frederick Dane Huntington, Harvard '12, is to be best man, and the list of ushers will include Dr. Vincent, who makes his home with Dr. Huntington; Dr. Arthur Ruggles, Dr. Charles Day, Dr. Robert Green, Dr. Henry James and Dr. Francis W. Peabody, Richard Hale and Robert Barbour, many of them classmates, Harvard Medical School, '07, with Dr. Huntington. There will be no reception. Dr. and Mrs. Huntington are to make their home in Marlboro street.

The wedding on Saturday of Miss Ruth Lawrence and Lansing P. Reed is naturally of wide interest and even though it divides interest with so many other nuptial events on that same day it promises to be among the most important. The ceremony is to take place at 12 o'clock and will be followed by a reception at the Lawrence residence in Commonwealth avenue.

Miss Lawrence will be attended by her sister, Miss Elinor Lawrence, as maid of honor, and there will be no bridesmaids.

Mr. Reed will have his brother, Edward B. Reed, as best man and the list of ushers includes Dr. William B. Sorer, Charles E. Adams, Percy H. Jennings and Thomas D. Thacher of New York; Russell Cheney of South Manchester, Ct.; Frederick H. Wiggin of New Haven, Henry H. Stebbins, Jr., of Rochester, N. Y., and Augustus Hemenway, Jr., a cousin of Miss Lawrence.

Porter—Cheever.

An interesting out-of-town wedding on the same day will be that of Miss Gertrude Cheever, who has so many relatives and friends in Boston, to Seton Porter, the ceremony to take place in St. John's Church, Far Rockaway, L. I.

Mrs. Charles Morgan, daughter of John E. Cowdin and cousin of the bride, will be the matron of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Barbara Armour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Armour of Princeton, N. J.; Miss Rosamond Burr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Burr, a cousin of Miss Barbara Burr of Marlboro street; Miss Charlotte Harding, the granddaughter of John Bigelow, Miss Theresa Ingersoll, Miss Martha Kobbe, Miss Dorothy Dwight Porter, Miss Gladys Roosevelt and Miss Gertrude Schirmer.

Robert Porter is to be his brother's best man and the ushers will be Eliot C. Cowdin, 2d, and J. Cheever Cowdin, Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., Rene La Montague, Franklin B. Lord and Frederick C. Inman, all of New York; William W. White, Jr., of Providence, R. I., and G. Frederick Parrish of Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Saturday has also been selected by Miss Florence Cobb for her wedding to Dr. Walter Denison Brooks, the ceremony to take place at the First Parish church in Milton at two o'clock. Miss Madeline Brewer one of the leading debutantes of the Winter, is the maid of honor. Dr. Samuel Atkins Eliot, president of the American Unitarian Association is to perform the ceremony.

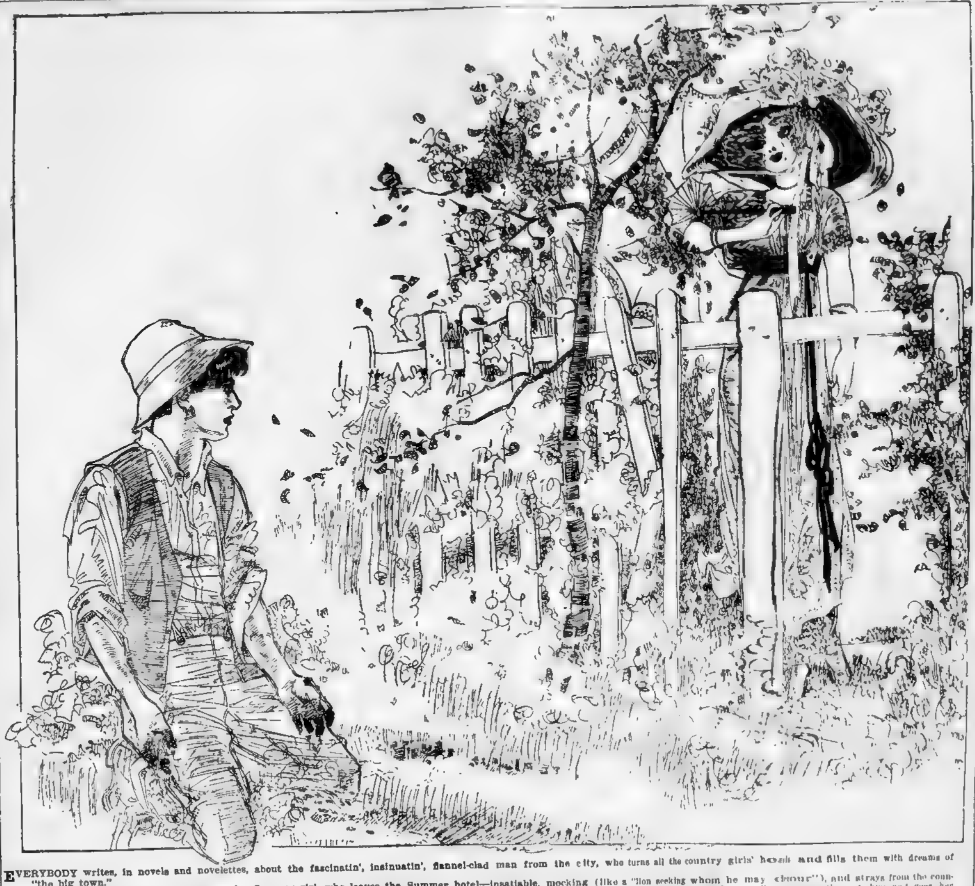
Miss Cobb will have for her bridesmaids her sister, Miss Beatrice Cobb, who made her debut the past Winter, and Miss Hildegarde Cobb, who is still a school girl, Miss Katherine Foster of Charles River Village, Miss Frances Clark, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Clark of Pennsylvania, Miss Rosalie Ellman of New York, and Miss Jessica Bishop of Chicago. Elizabeth Brooks, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Brooks of Cazenovia, N. Y., but formerly of Milton, is to be the flower girl. Philip Wingate Thompson is to be the best man and the ushers, all of them Harvard men, are Messrs. Augustus and Stanley Cobb, brothers of the bride, Gardner Perry, now of New York, Francis Colby of Boston, J. Arthur Brooks and Ralph W. Page of Eagle Springs, N. C. A reception at the Cobb home will follow the ceremony.

The City Girl and the Country Boy

A Contrast

By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association



EVERYBODY writes, in novels and novelettes, about the fascinatin', insinuatin', flannel-clad man from the city, who turns all the country girls' heads and fills them with dreams of "the big town."

But nobody tells about the dream of a Summer girl, who leaves the Summer hotel—insatiable, mocking (like a "lion seeking whom he may devour"), and strays from the country road to turn her perfectly groomed radiance on a simple-hearted, fresh-faced child of the earth—weeding his Dad's hill patch "at a nickel a row"—who smiles at him and goes her pretty way, leaving behind her a hot heart bending above the weeds.

MRS. LEITER COMES BACK TO BEVERLY

Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter is expected to arrive early in the week at her country home in Beverly, which has been renovated and made ready for her occupancy. Mrs. Leiter has been for several weeks at the Hot Springs in Virginia.

Mrs. Henry S. Grew will arrive at her Manchester home, "The Sumacs," on Wednesday. She is now with her son, Edward W. Grew, at his country home in Dover.

Miss Grace S. Parker and Mrs. George Simmons will occupy Van Deusen villa in Stockbridge the coming season. Mrs. Simmons spent the past year in Rome with Mrs. Edward B. Owen.

The Misses Ellen and Ida Mason will shortly close their town house in Walnut street, and leave for their country place at Dublin, N. H. They will remain there about six weeks prior to going to Newport for the rest of the Summer.

Going to Newport.

Mrs. William G. Weld is to close her Commonwealth avenue residence the coming week and go to Newport, where her villa on Bellevue avenue has been made ready for her occupancy.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Reed Anthony closed their Commonwealth avenue home Wednesday and went to their Summer home at Beverly Farms, where they will spend the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander S. Porter, Jr., of Marlboro street, opened their Summer place at Manchester Wednesday.

Mrs. A. Forbes Conant, with her mother and sister, who make their home with her, is to close her Arlington street house the first of June, when she will open her Nahant cottage for the Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Bremer, who have been spending the Winter with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Bigelow of Commonwealth avenue, have opened their Cohasset cottage for the Summer. BABY'S FACE ALL BROKEN OUT AND RED Eczema First Came in Little Pimples; Itched, and Pained Him So Badly Mother Could Not Rest.

Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and Eczema Disappeared.

"I must say I shall never be without a box of Cuticura Ointment, and keep it in the house, for no mother [illegible] the valuation of [illegible] Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap also. But my baby had a very bad face, all broken out and red, and the second application made an improvement, and before I had used half a box my baby's face looked splendid. I told my neighbors about it, and they were taken by surprise at the wonderful work the Cuticura Ointment did, and all said his face is fine. One box cured baby's face and his body which was all broken out with the disease. It first came in little pimples like heat, and then formed one mass, which gradually spread over his face and body, and it caused itching, and pained baby so badly that I could not rest, so I wanted to go to the doctor's, but the Cuticura Ointment was recommended to me, and I am very glad I heard of it, for it saved me a doctor's bill. During the day the heat would make it more painful, but would rest better at night, and since I used the Cuticura Ointment I had better rest. After a few applications the face began to peel, now the eczema has disappeared.

"I highly recommend the Cuticura Ointment and Soap for their wonderful work. I must say mothers should not be without them, for they give quick relief and healing to a suffering child, and the mother who is all worn out for the want of sleep and rest. I highly recommend the Cuticura Ointment for eczema, rash, etc., for a speedy cure, for my child suffered very badly of the pasty disease." (Signed) Mrs. Dora C. [illegible], [illegible] Island, Harford Co., Md., Sept. 28, 1910.

JOSEPHINE GIBSON'S BETROTHAL BROKEN

NEWPORT, R. I., May 27.—Without explanation comes the news that the engagement is broken between Miss Josephine Gibson, sister of Charles Dana Gibson, the black and white artist, and Francesco Attanasia, the Italian painter of Taormina.

Friends of Miss Gibson are most surprised, both at the broken betrothal and at the absence of any cause assigned.

Miss Josephine Gibson comes to Newport during the August tennis seasons from her home on Long Island. She is usually a guest here of her cousin, Mrs. William H. Mayer of Slate Hill Farm. From Newport she ordinarily goes to visit relatives in Bristol, R. I., the DeWolf Perrys.

She has traveled extensively. In one of her tours abroad she met Francisco Attanasia. The Italian painter fell deeply in love with the sister of his American fellow artist. Miss Gibson responded to this sentiment. The engagement was announced last January. It was said that the wedding would take place in the following April or May. April came and went but no wedding. May has nearly gone. Now comes the abrupt announcement of the broken engagement.

The painter was building for his bride elect a beautiful villa at Taormina, facing the sun-kissed sea and with frowning Aetna looming in the background. Miss Gibson was envied such picturesque prospect.

Attanasia is still in Italy. Miss Gibson is said to be in Oakland, Cal., where she was when the engagement was announced four months ago.

Health and Beauty Answers

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

C. S. B.: The secret of good health is really very simple. For that listless, exhausted feeling and to clear up your sallow, pimply skin, you should take a good tonic to rid your system of the impurities in the blood. You will find nothing better than this old-fashioned tonic: Get an ounce of karo[illegible] and one-half pint alcohol at any drug store; mix together, then add one-half [illegible] water to make a full [illegible]. A [illegible] taken before each [illegible] skin of [illegible] back the glow of [illegible] cheeks. You will recover [illegible] and enjoy the feeling [illegible]. As a body builder and [illegible] tonic I have never seen anything to equal this simple home-made remedy.

Mrs. H. T. [illegible]: To give your hair that soft, glossy [illegible] so much admired, use twice a week the following hair tonic: Mix one ounce quinzoin in one-half pint alcohol, then add one-half pint cold water. This tonic promotes the health of the hair and scalp and keeps the hair soft and from getting stringy and matted. It stops the hair falling out and destroys dandruff almost instantly. For an itching scalp you will find it very refreshing.

(b) Yes, your husband will find spurmax lotion very fine for using after shaving.

Clara S.: If you want a smooth, rosy complexion that possesses the charms of youthfulness, you must not use powder on your face. It clogs up the skin pores, enlarges them and ofttimes causes wrinkles. The following recipe is much better than powder as it does not show on the skin or rub off [illegible]. Dissolve four ounces of spurmax in one-half pint hot water; when cool add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply to the skin, rubbing gently until dry. As a skin whitener and complexion beautifier you will find it simply grand. I find it excellent for removing and preventing freckles, skin pimples, roughness, sunburn and chapping in the wind. This lotion will take off the shine to your skin and remove that sallow, greasy look.

T. A. V.: Never shampoo with soap. The alkali in soap is too strong for the hair and will make it coarse, faded and streaky. It is also dangerous to use so-called "dry shampoos" as the powder simply clogs up the pores in the scalp, causing dandruff and falling, split hairs. To make a good, beneficial shampoo that will be absolutely satisfactory, simply dissolve a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. This makes a fine lather that removes thoroughly all dirt and excess oil. After shampooing rinse the hair with clear water. Your hair will dry very quickly and be so soft, fluffy and glossy. This shampoo is used generally by the best class of hairdressers, as it keeps the hair and scalp in such splendid condition and produces a fluffiness that lasts. It is invaluable for removing dandruff and scalp irritation. You can get canthrox at any drug store.

Grace M.: To beautify a complexion that is marred by large pores, roughness, blackheads, freckles and even wrinkles you will find nothing better to use than this excellent greaseless cream jelly which you can prepare at home at small expense: Stir together two teaspoonfuls glycerine, one ounce almozoin and one-half pint cold water and let stand a few hours before using. This cream jelly will clear up your skin, removing all dirt from the pores, and in a short time your complexion will be clear, plump, velvety and unwrinkled. I know of nothing that will freshen up a complexion or that is as good a skin beautifier as this simple preparation.

A. T. X.: The presence of fuzz on the chin is extremely annoying, but if you try a delatone paste you can quickly remove it. With a little delatone, mix some water to form a thick paste and spread on the downy growth. Let remain two or three minutes, then rub off and wash the chin. While delatone costs a dollar an ounce, it seldom is necessary to apply it more than once.

Anna: Faded blonde hair can be restored to its youthful color and softness if you first wash it well and dry, then wash with a marlax tea. To make the tea, steep an ounce of marlax in a pint of water. After washing with the tea, rinse and dry. A few treatments produce the desired shade and give to the hair a silky fluffiness.

Maxine: To keep your eyes bright, sparkling and full of color and expression, simply get an ounce of crystos at any drug store; dissolve it in a pint of cold water and put a few drops in each eye twice daily. This tonic is very soothing and strengthening and will soon remove all signs of weakness, inflammation and make your eyes just as attractive and charming as ever. I find it splendid for treating granulated lids and as an aid to those who wear glasses.

Mrs. T. B.: If your fat does not yield readily to ordinary flesh reducers, try this one which I know has restored many to their former slender figures: Get four ounces of parnotis at your druggist's and dissolve it in one and one-half pints of hot water. When cool, strain and take a tablespoonful of the liquid before each meal. Parnotis is harmless and will not injure your health. I feel sure you will get splendid results from its use and will then recommend it to your friends.

MARGARET ANDREWS, WHO IS RETURNING FROM WORLD TOUR

MISS MARGARET F. ANDREWS

MARGARET ANDREWS CONFIRMED BY POPE

Unusual Honor for Newport Girl Just Coming Home After Trip Around World.

NEWPORT, May 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Andrews and Miss Margaret F. Andrews of Newport and Washington are expected here to-night or to-morrow from abroad. Their arrival depends on the docking time of the White Star liner Baltic, on which they sailed from Liverpool last Saturday.

Friends of Miss Andrews, a charming girl of seventeen, are especially interested in her home-coming because the chief event of the tour of the world she has just made with her parents was her confirmation by the Pope while the family was in Rome during the Winter.

The Andrews villa, Rocky Hall, closed since last Summer, is ready for occupancy. Mr. and Mrs. Andrews and Miss Andrews sailed last December for a tour of the world. They went to the Orient and visited the principal European cities, not forgetting the fascinating shops of London and Paris.

Her devotion to church matters does not interfere with Miss Andrews' natural interest in pretty gowns. She is reported by letters to friends at home to be bringing back a wonderful array of Paris confections.

Mr. Andrews is known as one of the best four-in-hand whips in the cottage colony. Mrs. Andrews was formerly Ethel O. Janney of the Baltimore Janneys. Her sister is Mrs. George A. Huhn of Philadelphia, formerly Mrs. Isaigi of Boston.

Miss Andrews is a tall, athletic girl and an expert rider and driver. She has ridden her gray mare Mimic in the saddle classes of Newport horse shows. She began riding when a little girl. At the age of ten she was thrown from a frightened horse and was taken home unconscious, but was out riding again as soon as she was permitted.

SALEM.

The drama, "An Engaging Position," will be presented by the Unity Chapel Dramatic Club of Danvers. A number of doctors of that town are included in the cast, which adds no little interest to the play. The Salem Cadet Orchestra will furnish the music, and this alone is sufficient to assure one of a delightful evening.

A grand reunion of the St. John's parish at Peabody will be held Monday, May 29. It is hoped that the relatives and friends of the parish who are now living elsewhere are requested to invite them to grace the occasion with their presence, when a genuine welcome will be given them by the committee who has charge of the affair.

Plans for the pop concert and drama in aid of the free bath house, to be held in the Now and Then Hall, Friday, June 9, are progressing finely. The floor space of the hall will be filled with tables which will be at the disposal of the guests, there being no reserved seats.

The annual field meeting of the Historical Society of Peabody will be held July 1, at Elmcroft. Dr. Frank A. Gardner of Salem will give the address and tell the story of the Gardner Farm at West Peabody.

K. OF C. OUTING AT CANOBIE LAKE PARK

Games, Dancing and Theatricals Among Sports Planned for June 17 Fete.

Baseball games between teams representing different councils, track events in which well-known athletes will participate, and theatricals by talented performers will be features of the outing and basket party to be held under the direction of the Knights of Columbus at Canobie Lake Park, Salem, N. H., June 17. Thousands of members of the order and their friends from all parts of the State are going.

Each year it is the custom of the members to hold an outing.

The work of arranging the sports is in charge of a committee of which Charles F. J. McCue of Cambridge is chairman.

Because of the large number of women who are to attend, it has been decided to arrange a number of special games for them. It is understood that one of them will be a "blind man's bluff" tournament in which a number of pretty girls will participate.

To satisfy the demands of the bowling contingent of members who will attend, a game has been arranged and such crack bowlers as Mat Finnegan, the champion of the Knights of Columbus League in 1909, and others will show their prowess by competing with champions of the order from other sections of the State.

There will be dancing in the pavilion, the music for which will be provided by the Canobie Lake orchestra, and "Dom" Keegan and James J. Connolly, the well-known minstrel show instructors, have arranged an excellent programme in the rustic theatre.

Remarkable Meetings in Tremont Temple Next Week of Men and Women Prominent in Great Church Work.

EVERY indication points to the fact that the national convention of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul which opens in this city next Sunday morning and closes the following Wednesday night, will be a remarkable gathering of man and women who are enthusiastic promoters of the cause of charity.

Speakers from many of the large cities of the country will consider various important phases of the charitable and religious work done by the society, while the auxiliary work of Catholic women connected with various socities that work in conjunction with the members of the St. Vincent de Paul will be considered by representative Catholic women at their meetings in Chipman Hall, Tremont Temple, which has been engaged by the committee for the especial convenience of the women. An interesting program for the women has been arranged by the Rt. Rev. D. J. McMahon, spiritual director of the Particular Council of New York City, and supervisor of Catholic charities in that city, as follows:

MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 5.

1. Material Relief and Friendly Visiting.
2. Day Nurseries.
3. Mothers' Meeting.

TUESDAY EVENING, JUNE 6.

1. Addresses on Co-operation by some men.
2. Tuberculosis and Allied Work. Discussion.
3. Relations of Catholic Organizations with Non-sectarian, Private and with Public Charities.

2. Federation of Sewing Circles, or Play Question.
3. Fresh Air Work.

These topics will be considered by various women delegates from different parts of the country and also by women representing various guilds and ladies' associations in the Boston diocese. Among the ladies who are to take part in the work of the women's auxiliaries are the following well-known women of Boston and vicinity: Miss Josephine Bleakie, president of the Cecilian Guild, Mrs. M. M. Cuniff, president of the Guild of the Infant Saviour; Miss Maud Rockwell, president of St. Elizabeth's Guild; Mrs. W. McCarthy, president of the Ladies' Catholic Club; Miss M. Mellyn, president of St. Catherine's Guild; Mrs. McCormick of St. Claire's Guild; Mrs. James Dwight, of the League of Catholic Women, and Mrs. George J. Jennett, representing the Ladies' Charitable Union of St. Columbkille's parish, Brighton.

Headquarters at Bellevue.

The headquarters of the officers and delegates will be at the Hotel Bellevue, Beacon street. A large number of the visiting delegates are due to arrive in Boston next Saturday to be present at the opening of the convention Sunday morning, June 4, which will be celebrated with a solemn high mass in the Cathedral at 10:15. The centre part of the Cathedral will be reserved for the delegates and other members of the society, particularly those in and near Boston, who are expected to be present on that occasion.

The evening meeting, Sunday, June 4, which is open to the public, and to which everyone is invited, has been changed from the Majestic Theatre, where it was announced it would be held, to the Shubert Theatre.

Addresses of welcome will be made by Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald, and there will be speeches by Bishop Anderson, who will represent and speak for Archbishop O'Connell, who has sailed for Europe, and by the presiding officer. An interesting feature of this public meeting will be the singing of a chorus of 150 trained male singers selected from the church choirs of Boston under the direction of James T. Whelan. Walter J. Kugler will officiate at the piano.

The Boston committee has made arrangements to have members of the society at the North and South Terminal railroad stations to meet the visiting delegates and to direct them to their hotels and to give whatever other information the visitors may desire.

Guests of the City.

On Monday afternoon the delegates will be the guests of the city of Boston, by invitation of Mayor Fitzgerald, on a visit to the charitable and correctional institutions in Boston Harbor. This trip will be a very novel one for many of the delegates, especially those from the West, who have never had the pleasure of a sail down Boston Harbor.

A very beautiful metal badge has been especially designed and manufactured to be worn by the delegates. The front side of the badge, which is round and measures one and a quarter inches wide and about one and a half inches long, contains in bas relief a very excellent likeness of St. Vincent de Paul, representing him in a seated position giving comfort and aid to the poor and needy. The reverse side of the badge shows in bas relief a picture of the cross, which is surrounded by the announcement "National Conference, Boston, 1911."

This badge will admit all delegates and members of the society to all of the business sessions, and will also be a valuable souvenir of the Boston convention. The badge to be worn by the Boston members will be tied with red, white and blue ribbon, while those to be worn by the visiting delegates will have in addition to the national colors a strip of yellow ribbon, which will denote the wearer of such a badge as being a visiting member.

ST. MARY'S "DEAROS" TO ENJOY CONCERT

Proceeds of Alumni Event Will Go to Boston Floating Hospital for Name Day.

FORMER residents of the Old North End who attended St. Mary's Church on Endicott street and the "boys" who graduated from St. Mary's parochial school on Cooper street, connected with the church, will turn out in large numbers on the evening of June 16 for the concert and dance in St. Mary's School Hall. The proceeds will be given to the trustees of the Boston Floating Hospital.

The affair will be under the direction of St. Mary's Alumni Choir Association, of which Valentine Markey is president, and it will take the form of a reunion of the "Dearos" who were put through their P's and Q's in the class rooms of St. Mary's School. There are hundreds of them living in all parts of the city, and the reunion will give them an opportunity of again meeting those with whom they spent the formative period of their lives.

The Alumni Choir Association is made up mostly of young men who attended St. Mary's School and has conducted a number of successful charity theatricals for the benefit of the poor of the North and West Ends. Its efforts have elicited the commendation of the Jesuit Fathers attached to St. Mary's Church. Recently the choir raised a large amount for the benefit of a family in Neponset.

The association is the first Catholic body to endeavor to obtain a name day on the floating hospital, and its work in that direction has earned for itself the praise of supporters among the clergy and laity. The patronesses for the concert will be from hospitals in and about Boston.

The concert will be of a varied and pleasing nature, and Miss Katherine Connolly, the musical director of the association, will have charge of the arrangements.

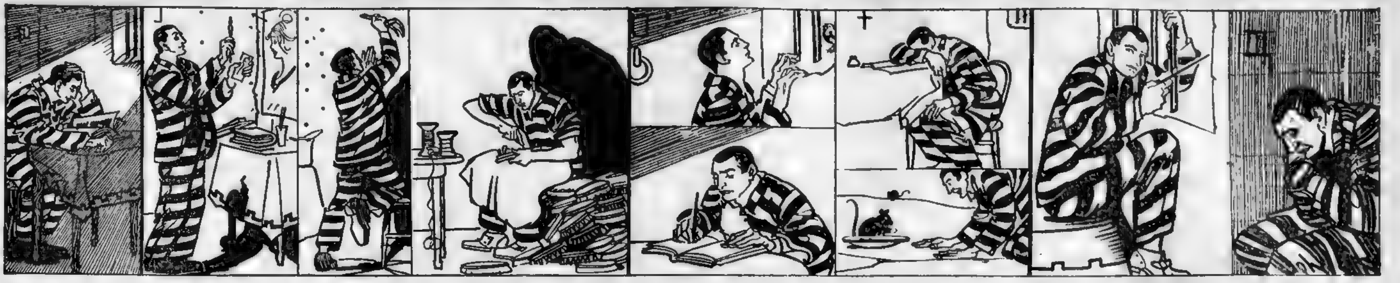
INCIDENTS SHOWING HOW JESSE POMEROY, LIFE-TERMER, HAS OCCUPIED HIS TIME DURING NEARLY FORTY YEARS IN PRISON



Most Remarkable Psychological Incident in Prison Revealed by Life Convict's Epistles to His Devoted Mother, Showing How He Mastered Several Languages Without a Word of Verbal Instruction

THE remarkable letters of Jesse Pomeroy, the Charlestown life prisoner, to his mother, the first instalment of which was printed in last Sunday's AMERICAN, grow more interesting as his years of confinement continue.

The young man's mind may have been saved by continuous study. It is one of the most remarkable psychological incidents of prison life that Pomeroy should have taken up study—not desultory reading, but hard, continuous, persistent study. Those who have tackled Latin and French, even with a teacher, know what learning those languages means.

Pomeroy learned these and several other languages without a word of verbal instruction. His sphere of life was largely confined to books—with the golden hope of freedom ever beckoning to him tantalizingly in the distance.

In the last instalment of his letters he told how he attempted to break out of Charlestown prison. He was sent to the State Prison at Concord. Here he makes another fruitless attempt to saw and file his way to liberty.

MAKES FRIENDS OF RATS

Charlestown, May 12, 1878.

Dear Mother.

It is a long time since I have had the pleasure of writing to you and I am very glad that the three months which must come between two letters have passed. I have noticed that my writing day always seems on Sunday and also that it is always on the twelfth of the month.

I have received fruit from you every week since I saw you in March; also the Youth's Companion and a short note now and then from Miss Morse. Tell her I am much obliged to her for her kindness in writing to me. I have received yours and Charlie's letters every week and am very thankful to you for writing to me.

I have as many as eighty letters in all from you and brother and often when I feel at all homesick or sad I read some of them and feel better after it. They are like beams of sunlight, piercing through and chasing away the darkness and dreariness of my prison cell. They are a great comfort to me.

My health is tolerably good though not so good as I should like to have it. This close confinement is affecting my health severely though I am much better than could be expected. I hope I may be better at Concord.

I am doing very well with my Latin. I am learning the verbs now. I thought I would confine my attention to them for the present because they are the hardest of all the words to learn. I hope to finish them by July. Then, after that I shall learn the other words by October. So you see within six months I shall have learned every word in the language. I have learned about 8,000 at present.

I was very much surprised at not receiving those French books you sent me and I asked Mr. Woods about it; he told me he did not know, but thought it might be because I was going to Concord soon. I see by your letter that the same reason was given to you. I hope there will be no trouble about my receiving them at Concord. I am very grateful to you for getting those books; they will be a great treat to me. Do you know when I shall go to the new prison? If you do let me know.

You ask me in your letter of May 4 to tell you about myself. I have not many things to write about. My life here is divided between reading, eating and sleeping, an animal existence.

As for reading, I have some very interesting books from the library and those you have sent me, and my Bible. I do not sleep or eat much. There are very few visitors in here now, for which I am thankful.

When I feel the time passing slowly I chase rats. They are very mischievous; they are a thievish set. As I sit here near my windows I can see them eating the remains of my dinner. I am trying to pet a few of them, but they are so timid that I think I shall not succeed.

I always memorize thirty or forty verbs a day; that is the task I have set myself. After learning them I consider the rest of the day a holiday. My eyesight is not so clear as it was, but I hope the doctor may do something for it.

I am very sorry to hear that Mr Babbitt is sick. I hope he will get well soon. Give him my respects, and to all our friends. Charles wrote me a very good letter, I think, and I am glad his vacation has benefited him so much. I should like to have gone to N. H. with him. It is many months since I saw a green field or even a tree, or a bird. I am looking forward to the time when I can see you and our friends, but it seems as though the time will never pass. These past six weeks are the longest I have ever known. I send my love to you and all at home.

How did you like that Diary I gave to you last March? I do not think it interested you very much. I hope to keep a better one at Concord. Mr. Weeks was in here a week ago last Wednesday, said he was glad to see me looking so well. I was glad to see him. A few weeks before that a legislative committee came in. Mr. Clark, the sheriff, was with them. He could think of nothing else to talk about them, except his big hands [illegible] "big hands" and "this great strength" in the usual style. I can think of nothing else to write about this time, so I must close, hoping that you are well and comfortable, and busy. Do not worry about me, and believe me, my dear mother, your affectionate son,

JESSE.

IN IRON-LINED CELL.

CONCORD, Dec. 2, 1878.

Dear Mother:

I have the pleasure of informing you that [illegible] to me and that you are allowed to [illegible] receipt of this. I [illegible] very [illegible] for I have not seen you [illegible]. I have missed you very much and your letters, too [illegible]. If I behaved myself I should have enjoyed my privileges as usual.

I am in fair state of health and hope that you and Charles are. I hope that you have not fretted yourself about me. You must remember that fretting does no good. I suppose you were disappointed in not hearing from me last August but the reason why I did not write was because it was known here that I was trying to escape, so they did not let me write. The next day they took away my privileges, books and everything, and kept them three months. My books I received about three weeks ago when one of these officers asked for them for me. My other privileges I received ten days ago.

I should have written to you last week, but by accident my name was not sent up to the guard room. I have behaved myself since I tried to escape and have given no trouble. I suppose you are surprised to hear that I tried to escape and think that I ought not to have tried, but I thought that as I was unjustly imprisoned it was my duty to try it. I was very sure that I could escape and I only regret that I did not, for this prison will do me no good.

I have made the above remarks because I think it is my duty to offer some explanation of my conduct to you. These cells have been strengthened by an iron lining since you were here and they are not so light as they were, but still they are a great deal better than I thought they would be. I hope you will make your mind easy about me; do not think that I am not as comfortable as circumstances will permit. I am well and cheerful and feel better than I have felt for a long time. I have often told you that I would not willingly do anything that would cause you a moment's anxiety on my account. I shall not try to escape again, because I cannot get away; these cells are fixed in such a way that no one can get out of them.

I hope you enjoyed Thanksgiving. I had a good dinner and one of the men here gave me some fruit and other things. If you can, I would like you to subscribe for some paper and send it to me; The Boston Pilot I should like best; it has a great deal of news in it. Bring me a toothbrush when you come to see me. Do you know that I am now nineteen years old? Good-bye, from your son,

IX.
STUDIES PHRENOLOGY.

Concord, June 15, 1879.

Dear Mother

I hope you do not give yourself any uneasiness on my account, though I suppose my behavior during the past year is not such as to please you, or my friends. In fact, dear mother, I am very much afraid that I have been very unwise. These attempts to escape do me no good, they injure me in the estimation of the public and make my situation no pleasanter for me. I have been in this prison nearly three years, and I think that if I had behaved myself it would not have done me any harm but perhaps good.

In making this acknowledgment, however, I wish you to understand that I have never had any disposition to give trouble; I have always tried to do my duty, to obey all rules and to give no trouble whatever. As for my attempting to escape, I can only say that if the State had treated me decently there would have been no need of such attempts. But, as I said before, it does me no good, and I shall try hereafter to keep out of such scrapes.

The Warden says I do not allow him to treat me well. I never knew before that I had anything to do with his treatment of me; he generally treats me just as he pleases. Now if this is so, I will see that my conduct is such that he can find no fault with it hereafter, and thus be not prevented from treating me well in the future. I am not very well at present. I get so little exercise and have been shut up so long a time that my food disagrees with me occasionally.

I suppose you are all very much pleased with that young lady who arrived not long ago. It is with an effort that I can realize that you are "Grandmother"; you must have a picture taken of my niece and send it to me. I employ my time now with my books, have learned about all my French grammar and can translate and read and write Latin, without difficulty. I shall not want any more books for some months to come as I am in no haste to learn other languages until I finish French.

I am very much interested just now in Phrenology and Physiognomy. If I am allowed to have a book about the last named science I shall ask you to get me one in a few months. I do not know whether you can afford it, for it costs five dollars, but perhaps you can purchase a second-hand one for less money. The name is "Physiognomy, or the Science of Character, by S. R. Wells, N. Y." I get books on Phrenology from the library.

I am looking forward to your visit with great impatience. It seems a long time since I saw you or Charles. Write me as often as you can, your letters are very pleasant to me, they have the aroma of Home about them. I have received what papers you sent and those magazines also. Do not worry about me, try and be cheerful.

Can you bring me a looking glass and a cloth for my table when you come Friday? Let the glass be about 4 inches long by 3 wide and the table cloth a colored one if possible. Do not send me anything on the 17th, as it is not now a holiday here. With much love to you and respects to all our friends, I am, your son,

JESSE.

LONGS FOR MOTHER'S PIES.

Concord, Nov 9, 1879.

Dear Mother:

I shall never forget how kind you are to me, nor how you have stood by me, despite my unworthiness, through these years of bitter trial and grief. I feel that I have been very selfish and thoughtless in this matter. I do not doubt it must be harder for you to bear them than it is to me, and my foolish conduct has made matters worse, but I promise that my conduct will be such as no one can take exception to in the future.

We have had quite a large fall of snow during the earlier part of last week, though it has almost disappeared by this time. I think we shall have a cold Winter. I am making progress in my studies; am more interested in them than ever before. I can read French without difficulty and I hope that by perseverance I shall soon be able to speak it fluently.

I am under obligations to the other Mrs. P. for her kindness in buying me that interesting book she presented to me. I hope to show that I appreciate her gift by the good use I make of it.

I have no opportunity to find out the cost of a Spanish dictionary and grammar, but I think if you inquire at any of the second hand book stores (and second hand books will do for me), you can purchase them at a reasonable price. Of course, there is no hurry about these books, as I should not use them if I had them until I had finished these I have now.

I get about thirty or twenty-five cents' worth of fruit, apples and figs; these are about all I can purchase here. I like the present plan better than having fruit sent from Boston. I received that basket of fruit and liked that maple sugar; don't fail to send me some, if you have any.

Thanksgiving! You ask what I would like to have that day. Well, it is difficult to select what I should like best. You may be sure I shall appreciate whatever you send, especially the "Turk." I like cheese, but cake does not agree with me. I am afraid we have a mutual antipathy to each other. I have not forgotten the pies you used to make when I was at home, and I should like a few crackers, pilot bread, I think, it is called. Give my love to Chas. and Inez; thank him for his letter to me and tell him I am glad he [illegible] I should like to have the figures of that election. I suppose there was quite an excitement outside about it. I hear that Long is selected. I thought he would be, as Butler's day is past in this State.

How is the baby? I am cutting out the pictures from my papers to place on the wall of my cell. I have several good pictures and portraits, and my room will look more cheerful with them. I shall keep part of what you send Thanksgiving Day to celebrate the 29th, which is a most important day to me. For a present you can send me a toothbrush.

Give my love to all our friends, write me every week. Your letters are a great cheer to me. Be as cheerful as you can; we shall meet soon. From your affectionate son,

JESSE

SCHOOL DAYS! SCHOOL DAYS!

Concord, Mass., Feb. 8, 1880.

Dear Mother

I think I will send you this letter as a birthday present; yours comes on the 14th, I think, and I wish you many returns of them. Many thanks for that picture you sent, I think it a very fair likeness.

I believe I told you when here last December that I had gone to work again. Well, I have worked all the time since then and I like it better than idleness. I shall work as long as I am allowed, for it benefits my health, makes things pleasanter for me and I am getting better than I was before I had it. I can do a full day's work (3,000 holes) very easily. In fact, I do 100 or 200 holes more. This is much more than I ever did in the old prison. For this labor the contractor gives me some fruit every week. As usual he tried to cheat me out of that, but I went to the warden and I guess everything will be alright hereafter. Don't send me any more money for fruit. There is $2.50 to my credit now, and I shall not have need of more.

My condition in this prison is much better than it was in the old one, but I should be better off if I was not closely confined. Some day I hope the authorities will be disposed to treat me well. What do you think of my writing? Is there much improvement? You could not have given me a more acceptable gift than the Compendium. I am still at work on the F. Dic. the least agreeable part of the language. But I am determined to conquer and shall stick to it and in time I shall finish it as I did Latin.

You are allowed to send me a dinner on the 22nd and I want you to send me a good one, as it is the last I shall have till July. Send me as much as you can and don't imagine anything you send will disagree with me. You will send the box on Saturday the 21st, but probably as the 22nd comes on Sunday it will be kept back till the next day, so send nothing that will spoil before that time. If by any accident you don't send it on Saturday I shall be allowed to have it if it comes the day after the 22nd, but don't make any mistake about it.

How deep was the fall of snow last week in Boston? From my window it appears to be about 8 inches here; but a great part of this I think is drift. We have had a rather mild Winter till lately. The Governor was here a few weeks ago, and I asked him for the privilege of going to chapel, but my sentence stands in the way. I hope you will see him soon, he spoke very kindly to me, and said he was glad to see me at work. The chaplain is to see me oftener. Tell Chas. that I remember Sinclair and the fun we used to have. I am glad to hear he is doing well. If Charles hears of any of our schoolmates tell him to write me about it. What is [illegible]? He says Inez's father sent some as a New Year's gift. Write me often and believe me, dear mother, your affectionate son

HEARS SPRING BIRDS

State Prison May 9, '80.

Dear Mother

Give my best thanks to Charlie for his letter and tell him to write as often as he has time. Is he going to have a vacation this year? If he goes to N. H. tell him to write me all about his farm life, etc. I would like to go with him. I often think of the good time we had when we were down in Maine. Do you know how they are doing now, and what has become of the boys I used to play with when there? I remember they were very fond of fishing and bathing. Chas. and I could beat them at base ball.

We have had splendid weather during the past week, the grass is growing fast, birds singing, and this makes me feel better than I felt during the Winter. If I was allowed, I would fix up my cell, have a plant, hang up pictures, etc., to help make me more contented. The Warden promised me that I should have the means of hanging up my pictures, but for reasons best known to himself he has neglected to keep his promise.

I am making good progress in my F. Dict. I learn about two pages every day. I can read French now almost as easily as English. I think I can buy what books I want this year with the money you sent me for fruit, some months ago. I will find out about it. There is no hurry about the Journal, send it when you can. I wish I was allowed to earn something for myself, then I would buy what books or papers I needed without so much expense to you, though I know you are willing to do all you can for me. I make at least six dollars' worth of brushes every day. The chaplain came to see me a few weeks ago, said he was glad to see me at work, thought it would be better for me than idleness.

I have plenty of reading matter now. What with my books, papers and what I get from the other men, my spare time is fully occupied. Your letters are a great comfort to me. I could never have lived so long a time in confinement without your love and constant effort to sustain and strengthen me. I do not know when the end will come or what it will be, but I constantly endeavor to take the brightest view of it. If I did not do this I should be worse off than I am now.

Give my love to Chas. and Inez and Mabel. I suppose she has grown considerably since last September. Do you think there is any improvement in my writing? I practice all I can with the "Ped" Inez sent me, or was it you? I should like to have seen that concert Chas. wrote about. I have never been to one of them. I have been practicing drawing lately and I find I make [illegible] I will have some pictures [illegible] when you come. I am doing well; write me every week, and I should like to hear from Inez. ELEVEN DAYS IN DARKNESS

Dear Mother

I have at last obtained permission to write to you. You could have heard from me Fast Day, but the officer neglected to give me the postal which was ordered for me. I have not heard from you since the last week of October. My privileges have been suspended since the 22d of [illegible] and [illegible] last week they were restored in part.

I am sorry I cannot tell you that you can come to see me. I asked the warden what I should say to you about my privileges, and he answered, "Say all are restored except visits." I asked him why he excepted visits and he replied "for good reasons." These are his very words. I do not see why he should not let you visit me, as it is seven months since I have seen you. I hope you will not fret about me.

I regret that attempt [illegible] I see that I would be better off today if it had not occurred. [illegible] I cannot see you I will tell you how it occurred. You remember I promised you two years ago I would try to keep still and give no further trouble. I tried to do well, took work and got along well until about this time last year. I did my best to behave, but they would not treat me well. I was cheated out of the fruit I earned by my work, they refused to let me have pictures in my cell and I became discontented again.

There was a convict confined near me and I made his acquaintance and found out after a while that he had a case knife with him, also a few files. He was going out soon and he gave me those things on condition that I would not use them while he was here. I obtained permission to paint my cell about this time and kept some paint. I commenced work on the 3rd of Sept and was [illegible] 21 [illegible] I was put [illegible] 11 days [illegible] books [illegible] days ago [illegible] all the time [illegible] and spirits. I [illegible] of you constantly.

I hope you are well. [illegible] long letter, [illegible] been all th[illegible] to Chas. Inez and [illegible]

We have a new [illegible] He comes to see us [illegible] all like him. My [illegible] last Friday. I got [illegible] week before that. I hope [illegible] attention to those lies [illegible] been published about me since [illegible] I am told a piece was p[illegible] December, saying the [illegible] was trying to [illegible] the Arch and [illegible] which I said I [illegible] This is a lie [illegible] I was [illegible] at [illegible] night [illegible] warden did not see [illegible] of Nov. That piece was [illegible] misrepresentation from [illegible] end and it was published [illegible] the Governor and [illegible] here soon after, but I did [illegible] of it until January.

It is hardly necessary [illegible] the cat story. It is a [illegible] the other one.

I shall devote myself [illegible] hereafter. I am [illegible] the new [illegible] you gave [illegible]

I missed my box on [illegible] did you send anything [illegible] the 30th of last month [illegible] holiday, but I do not [illegible] we can have a box on the [illegible] Perhaps the best way [illegible] for me to send out and buy [illegible] I have some money in [illegible] I don't know [illegible] but probably in [illegible] write [illegible] me my [illegible] from [illegible] want to [illegible] How is [illegible] in two [illegible] sent out and bought some fruit yesterday.

Now don't fret. I will keep still and I hope I shall see you soon. Ever yours,

WHO CAN "BILLY" BROKAW BE GOING TO MARRY NOW?

For Every Yacht a Love Affair--and Here He's Bought the Valhalla, Biggest of Her Kind, with a Hundred Fierce-Eyed Crew, Hotchkiss Cannon and Loads of Ammunition

W. GOULD BROKAW, of New York, millionaire yachtsman, professional husband and chronic lover, has just bought a new yacht—the Valhalla. He bought the Valhalla from the Earl of Crawford, who got it from Boni de Castellane, because Anna Gould became dreadfully jealous on it. Thus the Valhalla gets back again to some one with a Gould in his name. The Valhalla is the biggest boat Mr. Brokaw ever bought. It is the only steam yacht afloat which is a full rigged, three masted ship, and it will cost Mr. Brokaw $150,000 a year to keep up!

But Mr. Brokaw has also equipped himself with a crew of one hundred men, has set up fore and aft Hotchkiss rapid-firing guns and has loaded one of the holds with ammunition!

"Who on earth can Billy Brokaw be going to marry NOW?" asked society as soon as it heard the news. "It must be a Princess at least; perhaps a Queen—perhaps a Queen of Monte Carlo courted by Kings and such"—for the Valhalla was last reported off that garden of gilded marguerites.

And well might they ask that question, me lads, for with our gallant captain now but turned forty-one, new yachts, new love affairs and new troubles have always gone hand in hand. What ho mates! A pannikin of grog and bid the bos'n pipe to leeward while the yarn is spun.

It is twenty years agone since the new skipper of the Valhalla fell in love with the beautiful Coralie Coudert, a niece of the late Frederic R. Coudert, the well-known lawyer. She was a rare blonde lass and Brokaw was a lad then to turn any girl's head. He was a dashing polo player, he kept a string of race horses, but his keenest pleasure was in spending money. Withal he was tall, well knit and good looking. While courting Miss Coudert he bought the Amorita, a slim-bodied schooner. It was a good name. A year passed and yachtsmen said he was tiring of his yacht, his "little love." Mrs. Brokaw said he was tiring of her! She returned to her father's home and sued for a divorve. She got it. Excursions, alarums and alimony! Brokaw sold his Amorita!

Next! In sailed the two justly famous Poillon sisters, recently returned from a sojourn at the Isle of Blackwell. One of them said he had promised to marry her They bothered him almost to murder and suicide. Some thousands of dollars quieted them.

Mr. Brokaw, to forget, bought the big steam yacht the Incas. Promptly he fell in love with Miss Clare Howard, of Washington, and became engaged to her. Her parents broke the engagement Mr. Brokaw sold the Incas. Yes, lads, our captain's heart was well nigh broken, but avast! There's a lass for Jack in every port!

Came a flight to North Carolina, a trip to Mexico, a return to Long Island and the acquiring of a great country place worth some millions.

Love beckoned. Love to Mr. Brokaw always appeared as a fish-tailed Cupid Mr. Brokaw bought another yacht. He called it the Sybarita. Promptly he married Miss Mary Blair, a daughter of James A. Blair, a stock broker. They mooned hourly on the Sybarita, a stunning yawl—a tidy craft indeed, lads, but not well calked for honeymooning. They had numerous guests. Among them was the Marquis de Hermosa. Mrs. Brokaw was not kind to the Marquis. He complained to Billy. Billy complained to his wife. She complained to father. The Marquis left the yacht at Saunderstown R. I., stopping on the shore to make faces at the "Sibby" and to turn a somersault in Owen Wister's pet flower garden. The Marquis was such an original nobleman.

Queer, is it not? how symbolic are the names of the yachts? Amorita—meaning Little Love. Sybarita—ease and luxury! And now the Valhalla—hall of the gods but Mr. Brokaw not being well up on mythology probably interprets it goddesses?

But if this Rule of Three runs through Mr. Brokaw's fortune what effect will the history of the Valhalla, as lively as Mr Brokaw's own, have upon him? It was built by an Englishman of fortune, a Mr Laycock, whose ambition was to train boys to be sailors. He took one hundred apprentices at a time and thus ran his vessel economically—for there was then no Seamens' Union—and philanthropically, a real Carnegie combination. When Lord Dunraven left these shores shrieking loudly with the pain of his unfortunate yachting experiences, he sailed on the Valhalla.

Then the De Castellanes bought her Anna Gould sunk millions in her She became a floating palace of pleasure and extravagance. Tiberius's golden barge might have called her sister! Fickle Boni! He paid too much attention to one of his fair guests. Countess Anna objected. Quarrels! Fights! Withdrawal of the Gould sinews of Valhallaing! The Earl of Crawford bought her, raced her, sold her to Billy Brokaw.

What next? Who CAN Billy Brokaw be going to marry now?

Yet still—mysterious ship! Why these hundred low-browed, fierce-eyed sea dogs? Why the death dealing Hotchkissers? Why has the Valhalla, whose decks have echoed to the popping of thousands of Bacchic corks, been turned into an engine of destruction; its glistening white decks once daintily dimpled by the French heels of the Castellane beauties to-day bristling with cannon, small arms, the pomp and panoply of war?

A wireless lifts its arms in air. The pale blue satin cabin, once sacred to Count Boni, is Brokaw's stronghold. Padlocks, squirt guns, call bells and a bulldog are there. (Call Steam Boat Steve, the Star Fish Sleuth, to the fo'castle tops'l for if there is dirty work going on he will unearth it!)

Can it be, asks society, that Billy fears the Poillon sisters are about to grapple him again? Or the first Mrs. Brokaw, now a real widow, or the second Mrs. Brokaw, still a widow by the grace of the law court? Can it be that Mr. Brokaw is arming against another feminine onslaught or is he arming to onslaught the feminine?

Mr. Brokaw armed before he started on his way home. There are many stopping places. First he stopped at the beautiful bay of Monaco, flags flying, Hotchkissers pointed at the rocky shores. Consternation in the palace of the Prince of Monaco. "Whence comes this formidible warship? What country send an attacking party to my home? Whence this blare of martial music?" "It is bold W. Gould Brokaw, the wrecker of hearts," responded his Prime Minister. "He comes to pay tribute to the beauties of Monaco."

Sunset; colors lowered; a sailor wigwags the Casino. The Prince watches eagerly. "On shore there! This is the yacht Valhalla, W. K. Brokaw owner. Send aboard your liveliest and loveliest ladies. Also the Prince and any of his friends. Rival and royal yachts keep off!"

But he did not disarm. And so the enigma remains. Ah, a thought! The coast of Morocco is close by. Here is the mystery of the East, its enigmatic tempting harems with their bevies of hidden loveliness. Is there some Sultana word of whose charms has come to romantic Mr. Brokaw? Alarm fills the heart of the Sultan of Morocco

"What," he asks his secretary of war, "what can we do with this wrecker of hearts, passing our shores in his warship eager for conquest?" "Send out the Morocco navy, sire," replies the secretary. A cordon of Moorish fishermen are flung along the coast. "Throw your nets around the Valhalla's propeller. Stop her and then let the reserves throw their nets over the invader," are their orders. What chance will the gallant William have against the wiles of these subtle warriors? Ha, Ha, they little know of the Hotchkissers, and the hundred fierce-eyed crew! Poor Sultan! Poor Moroccan beauties!

Yet it is possible that no invasion of Morocco is intended. The Brokaw warship then remains a mystery. Yet stay, perhaps the adventurer has heard that a fleet of enraged process servers are waiting for him off Jamaica Bay. Perhaps he is intending to bombard Newport and avenge ancient slights. Perhaps, oh horrors! the venerated head of Frederick Townsend Martin, the leader of New York society, has been elected to adorn the Valhalla's bowsprit!

(Out upon you, Octopus Ole, the Viking Vidocq, you have failed us in our extremity! What can these warlike preparations signify?)

Yet rumors from abroad tell of an elaborate, secret code of signals prepared by the intrepid captain and commander.

One—Three sharp raps on a cocktail glass means—"Sheer off, gun swabs, no process servers allowed."

Two—Six whiskey bottles flung through the sixth fore porthole means—"Prepare to repel boarders. The Poillon sisters have grappled us!"

Three—Twelve champagne corks popping consecutively means—"Change the course. Wives' lawyers putting out from shore."

Five—Seven rings of smoke from three five dollar cigars, floating northeast from the bridge means—"Coast clear. Steam straight ahead."

Six—A strong smell of burning money means—"Down with the alimonists. Let the ex-wives work!"

Avast!

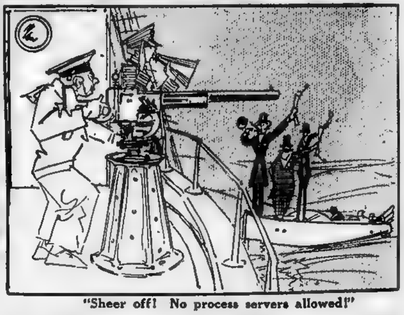
"The band will play—'There'll be a hot time in the old town to-night.'"



"Sheer off! No process servers allowed!"

How to Make the Candy the Harem Ladies Like

THE Arabians and Turks were the first people in the world to make candy. They are still the greatest of all candy eaters.

Americans have been accused of eating more sweets than the people of any other nation, but the harem ladies of the Orient eat twice as much as we do.

Two cups of fine sugar, half a cup of water, and half a very shallow teaspoonful of cream of tartar. These ingredients are melted in a sauce pan, poreclain lined, and then boiled for six minutes, stirring constantly. It is then poured out on a shallow oiled dish or platter and partially cooled. Then while still warm, it is stirred steadily with a wooden spoon until it grows creamy and white. It is then turned upon a molding board, dusted thickly with confectioners' sugar and kneaded like bread until it is smooth.

It is then placed in a deep bowl and set aside to "ripen" for twenty-four hours, after which time it is ready to use and the Turks and other Orientals use it as a foundation for carrying all manner of candied and dried fruits, nuts, citron, dates, figs, rasins, cherries and currants.

They also eat a great deal of it just as it is—a thick, creamy paste. They also mix with it gelatine that has been boiled for five minutes in a little water in the proportion of two parts gelatine and one part fondant. They cut this in squares and dress it with powdered sugar, and we are all familiar with this Turkish paste, for we have the same thing copied from the Orientals.

They also make a clearer paste with jelly in it which is in great favor with the Harem women, and which is now being copied by the American confectioners and called "jelly cubes."

To make this the Orientals take any clear, well-made, sweet fruit jelly—quince being preferable to any other on account of the delicacy of its flavor—and boil it down until it becomes stiff, to it is then added some gelatine, in the proportion of one tablespoonful of the granulated gelatine to a quart of the jelly before boiling down. The gelatine is dissolved in a little water and boiled for five minutes. It is well blended into the thickened jelly and then spread out to the thickness of an inch on an oiled pan or dish, and when it is quite cool it is cut into cubes and dusted thoroughly with powdered sugar and set in a cool, airy place to harden.

The Oriental fudge is the genesis of our fudge, the delight of the school girl's heart, but the Oriental fudge never has chocolate in it.

This is the way it is made

One cup of sugar, half a cup of creamy milk, a quarter of a cupy of honey and the white of an egg.

The milk and sugar are placed over the fire in a porcelain lined sauce pan, brought to the boiling point and permitted to boil two minutes. Then the honey is added and the whole is again boiled till it can be made into a soft ball Have the white of egg stifily beaten and pour half of the boiling mass over it. Return the other half to the fire and cook until it makes a hard ball when tested, then pour into the first half and heat the whole together until it stiffens into a shallow pan, and when cooled sufficiently cut in cubes.

The Turks add nuts and died or crystallised fruits to this fudge foundation and thus vary it greatly.

Marshmallow paste was first made by the Turks.

For example, they make some fruit and nut puffs that are delicious, and to make them they use a dozen marshmallows two cups of sugar, half a cup of honey, a cup of water, the whites of two eggs, half a cup of candied cherries, half a cup of crystallised pineapple and a cup of nut meats.

The sugar and water are placed over the fire and melted, then the honey is added and boiled without stirring till, when tested, it makes a firm ball. The chopped marshmallows are then added just as it is removed from the fire, and the whole is let stand covered for five minutes that the marshmallows may melt and blend into the whole. It is then stirred gently to mix thoroughly and then poured slowly over the stiffly whipped whites of the eggs, beating swiftly all the time.

When the mass commences to really harden the fruit and nuts are added, and it is cooled and then cut into cubes and duste with poweree sugar.

"MY WEEK AS A MRS. BELMONT FARMERETTE"

Priscilla, the Prize Pig with Rheumatism, Bifurcated Overalls and Sensitive Cows Convince One Ardent "Votes for Women" That the Suffragette Farm Is Not Her Forte.

MRS. OLIVER BELMONT'S Suffrage Farm at Hempstead is now several months old. There twenty girls clad in blue overalls and wide-brimmed hats are learning the importance of being farmers.

In spite of the sad fact that the only thing the farm has produced to date is a crippled pig, the project is bound to succeed

They will make mistakes, all farmers do; but these mistakes will not seriously affect the great cause.

At Mrs. Belmont's farm each "Farmerette" is required to keep a diary of daily events. Here are some pages from the diary of "One Who Was."

The Prize Farmerette Pig That Had Rheumatism.

By ONE WHO WAS

It's eight o'clock, and all's well. The cat's in the pantry, the pig is in the lake, the cow's in the hammock; but what difference does that make!

Oh, I wish those dippy frogs would stop croaking They sound so foolish. Somehow they make me think of the "Insurging Reformers," always croaking.

Now Mrs. Belmont, she's different. She's always looking on the bright side of things. This is her farm, you know. She asked twenty of us girls to come down to Hempstead and be farmers. I was tired of running a shirtwaist machine and living in a five by nine room. And maybe I didn't grab the chance!

Here I have a room with pink roses on the walls. A big window opening on a garden and a bathtub that I share with one other girl. Luxuries are getting real necessary to me. I am getting used to seeing Mrs Belmont at close quarters, and, say, she certainly is a nice, common person. I like her. I wonder if the vote will give me such a splendid country place as this is!

Oh! I'm tired to-night! This being a Suffragette farmer is not all beer and skittles.

My steady—he's in the navy—says there's a rum motto hung in the fo'castle of every battleship: "Six days shalt thou work and do all that thou art able. On the seventh shalt thou scrub the decks and holystone the cable."

Well, that's the way it is with farmers. I used to sing: "Oh, a farmer's life is the life for me!" But, say, I'm just as glad to see Sunday on the calendar as I was when I was in the factory. Vote getting via farming is some work!

Gee, I'm tired. There's taps. Guess I'll turn in Monday—8 P. M.—This back to the land isn't what Bolton Hall, Maud Malone and Mrs. Mackay claim. You can't do anything but work! Peas and potatoes are fine, but they don't grow in market baskets or peddlers' carts. You have to hoe 'em and sow 'em and cuddle 'em.

Mrs. Belmont believes that the way to a man's vote is through his stomach. She says in her evening heart-to-heart talks.

"Let me feed the brutes, and I care not who talks to them."

Now, there's the milk question. Milk comes from cows. It doesn't grow in tin cans or glass bottles. And cows have to be milked. And, do you know, cows are awfully like humans, especially men! If you don't handle 'em just so, they kick.

Oh, dear, it's nine o'clock. It's so quiet I can hear the leaves fall. What I'd give to hear a hurdy-gurdy and to see the lights of Second avenue. Oh, these frogs! They're at it again!

Tuesday—Milked the cow at 4 a. m. She didn't kick this time. But she certainly does look queer whenever I get on the right side. The right is the wrong, it seems, with a cow. She makes me tired She reminds me of the New York Senators at a Suffrage hearing—bored but tolerant.

But there's more to this vote-getting than cows and chickens. There's pigs! Now, pigs is pigs, but they're also prizes and pork. There's the gong! Time to go to hear Mrs. Belmont talk on votes for cows—no, I mean votes for pigs.

Say, she's just great, all right; but I never saw her milk a cow. And she doesn't know a thing about pigs

Wednesday—Up at five o'clock; spent two hours nursing a sick pig. No, the pig is not our emblem, neither is it our mascot. But, knowing how the men talk about us, Mrs. Belmont says we must be kind to all living creatures—and that means men and pigs. Will two hours' care of Priscilla qualify me to vote intelligently on the tariff?

We are to have a Suffrage bee Saturday night. Priscilla is to be given as a prize to the woman making the best speech There is a mystery about Priscilla. She seems one born to suffer I can't find out what the trouble is She hesitates in walking, but she has never worn a hobble skirt. Mrs. Belmont says she is a perfectly good pig Priscilla, I mean

I wonder how many chops she will make We have steaks or chops every day. I wonder if it hurts the cows? I am only in the milking class Next week I hope to learn all about steaks

Thursday—It's wash day home Here our washing is all done for us. Good thing, too Spent the morning pinning up lettuce heads. No, you don't use hairpins You use wooden slivers, and pin the leaves all up, and that makes the head. And the more head the more money you get. There it is again Even the lettuces have human traits

I never knew how nice and pretty lettuce was! The kind we have here is not a bit like the kind I got from Tony the peddler. This is better

But say, I like city ice cream better! They make ice cream here with fresh strawberries, but somehow it lacks flavor and "body." It isn't in it with the kind they sell at Coney. Oh, you Coney! Will I ever see you again?

Te hee, te hee! That's one on me all right, all right! They don't get fresh steaks from the cow every day! They come from the butcher shop, just as they do home

There's one thing makes me unhappy. I do want to vote, But I don't want to wear breeches "Overalls" is the country name for 'em

Somehow they don't "go in" with my Cuban-heeled slippers! And, anyway, what's the use! No one would ever think I was a man. I look like a woman, and I want woman's clothes

But, no; we have to wear overalls! Will we have to wear them after we get the vote? Oh, dear!

Let me see Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday—five days since I last saw Sixth avenue and Fourteenth street, Five days away from the city!

"Milked the cow at 4 a. m.—She certainly does look queer when I get on the wrong side."

Friday—Up at five o'clock Told me to drop Priscilla and the cow and go and hoe up the potatoes. There is no pleasing some women, any more than men! After I'd hoed up about a hundred hills, the "forelady" came along and went off into hysterics. And after I'd gathered the plants all in a heap, too! She came to finally, and explained that I should have just loosened the dirt around the plants so as to make 'em grow quicker

Friday night—let me see; oh, the girls home are all going to the moving pictures. Such luck! Here, we're going to dance on the lawn! Surest thing you know! The grass is all nice and green, it looks as if some one had painted it. Isn't a bit like the grass in Hamilton Fish Park We are to dance and have ice cream. Then there'll be a talk on "What Women Should Know In Order to Vote." Huh! Do they have to know more than men do?

Saturday—"Six days shalt thou work"—that rum motto sings in my head all the time! Got a letter from Terry. Ship's in port. I'm here at Hempstead Do I want to Vote? Yes, more than ever. But I don't want to get back to the land to get it. I want to get back to the city, to lights and noise, and—and—Terry.

This morning I played goose girl. There's a book here called that. I didn't like the job. Geese are silly things! Worse than pigs

Say, Priscilla is up and out. After getting through with the geese, I gave her a bath, combed her hide, put a blue ribbon on her neck and there she was, all ready to be awarded

Later—The bee came off at eight o'clock. A female native from hereabouts won Priscilla. Poor piggy, she squealed. She doesn't believe in Woman Suffrage. Isn't she just like a man!

Sunday noon, East Sixteenth street, near Second avenue—I don't want to vote. I don't want to be a farmer. It is all off! After the "bee" was over and the female native received Prissy, she led her around to show her off. Prissy limped badly. A man picked her up and said

"She's crippled; she was born crippled; she will always be crippled"

There was an awful row. But I knew the man was right. Was he not a man? Are not men always right?

There it was! One man in one minute had done what twenty women in twenty days had utterly failed to do. Prissy was crippled with rheumatism.

I left Hempstead on the milk train. Thank heavens there were no cows on it! Only milk.

For three hours I have been expelling country air and "Votes for Women" from my lungs and inhaling damp, muggy East Side air and odors of old food

But I'm happy, happy, HAPPY!

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, illustrating it with sketches and photographs of her own original models.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street, New York City.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

EVERONE seems to be looking quite her best just now in the short and strangely cut coat and skirt costumes, whose absolute simplicity is positively daring

With these collarless and often untrimmed suits the question of neckwear is, of course, of vital importance, and nothing gives a more suitable and smart finish than the new side frills of finely kilted V-lace edged lawn, or else of plissé net of either the plain or spotted variety, the first mentioned fabric being, however, in my opinion preferable. These are obtainable separately, so that they can be attached at will, and instantly, to any lingerie shirt, whether this be made with a high neckband or a down-turned collar, though, of course, in the latter case it is essential that any trimming of lace or embroidery should be closely, even if not exactly, matched by the frill.

On the whole, therefore, I would advocate the simultaneous acquisition of those two dainty additions, as then their effect will be doubled and the corresponding increase in cost made up for. Fine crochet lace is often used for the making of the band (it measures from, say, six to ten inches in length) to which the pleated fabric is attached, whole insertions of similar lace will also be used, the final edging being of Valenciennes. The latest and loveliest of the down-turned collars are in their turn being made in double form, the upper softness of embroidered and lace bordered lawn forming a series of deep scallops while the under one will just curve to a tapering point

Lace jabots are also much favored by fashion, these absolutely demanding, however, the permanent addition of a high neckband of the same lace, the connecting link between the two being provided by a flatly looped bow of black velvet centred with gleaming circlet or buckle of paste. Or else a big and beautiful cameo with figure in the centre, its Wedgewood blue and white coloring showing up well against the soft black velvet A jabot which can boast of this distinctive and decorative adornment being, I may tell you, a very wise choice on your part. For, later in the season, it will be the correct and charming wear with those most up-to-date hats or toques whose draperies of supple straw or silken ribbon will most certainly be held in place by a cameo ornamen Look out for this new millinerial trimming and, having been thus forewarned, try to arrange to be among the first to display it.

Another neckwear novelty of which you may like to hear is designed for those who—rightly or wrongly—prefer to give some definite touch of color to a white shirt This consists of a neckband of folded satin ribbon, bordered at [illegible] with gold tissue, and further finished off in the front with a flatly pleated bow—for all the world like those which adorn the "pump" shoe, beloved by all Americans, and now almost equally favored by Englishwomen. On this bow there are set three or four little buttons of dark mother-of-pearl, rimmed round with some special color—say, ruby red—or else the buttons will be in colored and black enamel—cerise or royal blue is exceedingly effective in this connection—in which case a fold of satin to match will take the place of that bordering of gold tissue.

And now do you want an introduction to the newest and smartest scarfs? If so—and I think it is probable—let me tell you that one for daytime wearing is of soft black or colored satin lined with chiffon and all along its soft and supple length at either side—cut in a series of deep scallops, to which a certain firmness as well as finish is given by double rouleaux of the same satin. Then, holding it in at either end is a big doubly-looped bow, made of the satin (cut on the cross) so that, you see, there is real durability as well as much smartness in the scheme.

Then, with satin again as the chosen fabric for its making, the widest and silkiest of Russia braid is introduced as a trimming, first banding in the stole midway in its graceful career, and then bordering the widening ends, its novelty being further proclaimed by an applique design in Paisley or Indian patterned ninon. White or black chiffon is generally used for its lining, but it would be quite permissible—and indeed pretty—to then make further use of the patterned ninon.

The other scarf, whose acquaintance I want you to make—and cultivate—is the destined and delightful companion of evening gowns, its fabric being a filmy lisse in white or some delicate color. All along its three-yard length, it is sewn with countless beads a first broad band of the pretty things being perhaps in white—if the background be of pale blue—while the other half of the scarf is covered with little golden beads. Again on a white scarf white porcelain and glittering silver beads will be similarly contrasted, while then if I can do its charms justice you will surely love, as I do, another and lovely affair, which seems to have caught the shimmer of moonbeams For its lisse is of the deeply beautiful blue of a Summer sky at night and half of it is showered with myriads of tiny jet beads, while from the other there shimmer out an equal number of tiny points of steel and silver, the whole thing in fact being a treasure trove for the woman who wishes her possessions to be artistic, as well as fashionable triumphs.

"THIS SOUL DESTROYING POISON OF THE EAST!"

The Tragic Flood of Broken Homes and Hearts, Disgrace and Suicide That Follows the Broadening Stream of Morbidly Alluring Oriental "Philosophies" Into Our Country.

Ruth St. Denis in a Hindu Religious Dance Which Typifies the Sensual Allurement of the Orient; and, Below, Mrs. Jack Gouraud, the Society Leader, Who Worships Buddha and the Gods of the East.

"Foolish young girls are fascinated b ythese occult philosophies with their sensuous, mystical allurements and drawn on, as it were by the eye of a venomous serpent, to ruin and death."

IT is startling to realize that in many a commonplace flat—in Harlem or the West Side of Chicago—occult rites are being celebrated as shocking as the ancient worship of Moloch and Baal.

A long series of recent occurrences has proved that Oriental occultism in various forms has many followers in the United States. It is well that the dangers of these degrading but often fascinating practices should be understood. Hindu occultism is leprous.

The newspapers have just told how Dr. William R. C. Latson, a brilliant New York physician, was found mysteriously killed in his apartment in Riverside Drive. No sooner was he dead than a pretty young Russian woman, Alta Marhevka, tried to commit suicide. He was her "guru," as a man who exercises functions miscalled "priestly" is termed in Hindu occultism. They had been united by occult rites and practices. She wished to die, in order to join him and continue those practices.

A few weeks ago Evelyn Arthur See was arrested in Chicago, charged with abducting Mildred Bridges, Mona Rees and other young women. The police accused him of conducting extraordinary orgies at his establishment, No. 2542 Racine avenue.

He called his sect "the Inner Thought Circle of Absolute Life," and he was "the Revealer of Absolute Life." In other words, he was a "guru."

Still more instructive was the case of Pierre A. Bernard, otherwise known as "Oom the Omnipotent," who was arrested in New York, charged with abducting Gertrude Leo, aged nineteen. The fact that he was eventually released for lack of prosecuting witnesses does not make his form of religious "occultism" any less dangerous to the community.

This particular "guru" was surprised by the police as he sat on a crystal ball, while men and women, scantily attired, paraded round him chanting rhythmically: "Oom! Oom! Oom!"

Now, Bernard, otherwise "Oom," was a guru of the Order of Tantriks, to which nearly all the American devotees of Hindu occultism belong. It is said that this order has over 100,000 followers scattered throughout the United States.

The order has an official mouthpiece called the International Journal of the Tantrik Order, which is sold only to those desiring to become initiates. The members are unwilling to reveal their numbers or places of "worship," but they insist that, in spite of what is known about "Oom" they are pursuing "the ultimate truth."

The great need of the order in this country is for "Nautch girls," who are sacred to the service of the cult. Gertrude Leo was destined to be a Nautch girl.

The Tantriks are reputed to be the most wonderful practitioners of "black magic" in the world. They can cause bodily or mental suffering, as they desire. Their mysteries must not be divulged to the "profane," whom they term "beasts," and also "kantaka," meaning "thorns."

The Tantrik Order is divided into seven degrees, which are illustrated by weird symbolic pictures in The International Journal of the Tantrik Order. In the first degree the initiates practise conjuring and jugglery. The second degree is the study of occultism, a step beyond conjuring.

The third degree is devoted to the "Kaula rite," or woman worship. It is this degree to which Pierre Bernard belongs, and it was the "Kaula rite" which was practised in his flat in West Seventy-fourth street. The third degree is the most popular in America, and few if any Americans progress beyond it.

The fourth degree is the study of all philosophies, but chiefly the transcendental ones. The fifth degree consists in assuming strange postures, such as the Hindoo fakirs assume.

The sixth degree, known as "savasadhana," seems the most ghastly of any of them. The initiate sits on a corpse in the dark of the moon and evokes elemental beings to revivify the dead. He pours food and drink into the body and the initiate believes that it returns to life temporarily.

The seventh degree is so high and terrible that the Tantriks say it is death to reveal anything about it.

The "Kaula rites" are said to have features in common with the worship of Baal and Moloch by the ancient Assyrians, the Eleusinian mysteries and the Bacchanalia of classical times. They certainly have one feature which is present in most primitive religions.

An enormous number of Hindus are Tantriks. It is said that there are 54,000,000 in the Province of Bengal alone, and 180,000,000 throughout India, or 75 per cent of the entire population. Among the high-caste Brahmins great numbers are Vachamarins, or followers of the third degree.

The growth of the Tantriks in America may be traced to the large numbers of swamis and gurus from India, who have come to this country in recent years and have received much attention from people always on the lookout for the curious and occult. Many of them came here when the Congress of Religions was held in 1893.

The order is directed in America by five Tantrik priests or gurus, who are styled primates. One of them is Bernard and the others are known as Norton, Delois, Tuell and Mamati. The order is said to include many distinguished Oriental scholars belonging to our universities, as well as persons of Bernard's stamp.

Their rites are extraordinarily complicated. Mystical ceremonies, gestures, postures, invocations, ejaculations and chants are indulged in. The cries are called "mantras," monosyllabic words of force to evoke or control the "elementals,' who are invisible creatures of a low order of development. Although woman is the principal object of the adoration, music dancing and banquets of flesh and fish are enjoined in the Tantrik ritual. The ceremony culminates in an embrace between the priest and the Nautch girl.

"Our emotional longings are not to be crushed, but we must lend brain, heart and muscle to secure their eternal gratification," says a Tantrik authority.

Sir Monier Williams, the great English Oriental scholar, says: "The Tantrik maintain that their creed is the greatest of all religions, because to indulge the appetites and passions with the mind fixed in union with the Supreme Being is believed to be the highest of all pious achievements.

"The Nautch girls are familiar to most persons who have travelled in India. They are the sacred attendants in certain temples and their dances are designed to honor the religion they practise. They are selected on account of their beauty, health and activity, and it is esteemed a proud distinction for parents, even of the highest caste, to have their daughters chosen for this calling."

Some of the American Tantriks would persuade American parents that it is an honor to have their daughters chosen as Nautch girls and it is sad to say that they sometimes succeed.

The Nautch girls are trained from infancy in vocal and instrumental music, but of all their arts dancing is most highly cultivated, since mystic posture and gesticulation play such a prominent part in their ritual. Gestures, twistings, swayings, motions full of dramatic action and sensuous allurements are indulged in until the exulted devotee finds herself in a state of joy and frenzy. Her performance, poetical, skilful and seductive, plunges her fellow worshippers into similar exultation of sense and emotion.

The climax of this form of worship is reached in the Kaula rite," when a favored Nautch girl is selected as "Sakti," the incarnation of the female principle.

An American dancer, Miss Ruth St. Denis, has achieved great success by representing some of the dances of the Nautch girls on the stage. These dances give us an idea of the most fascinating type of Nautch girl as she may be seen in India.

The sixth degree of the Tantrik Order, called Savasadanha, is also calculated to excite the curiosity of the profane. In this the initiate invokes the Deity through the spirits of the dead. In order to do this he sits for hours in the darkest time of the moon over the corpse of a person who has died an unnatural death, keeping near him food and wine of which he partakes. He utters certain incantations which call up elementals or lower beings. During the invocation it is expected that the corpse will open its mouth, being temporarily revivified by the elemental evoked. To appease this creature food and wine are poured into the corpse's mouth, lest the elemental destroy the mediator.

"Shame, Sorrow, Death Follow These Fools!"

By MRS. REBECCA COHEN.

(Sister of Alta Marhevka.)

THIS great sorrow that has come upon my sister and all of us is wholly due to the nonsense that bad man taught her. I used to say to her 'Ida, tell me of this new religion of yours,' but she would say 'Oh, sister, you would not understand. It is too high for you. Be satisfied as you are.'

Then I said to her: "But, Ida, what of this man who teaches you the strange religion?" And she would answer "Sister, he is a nice, kind man, and a great man." She told me she was satisfied. She said "I do not earn much, but I can get along, and I am very happy." I used to plead with her to come back to the old home and the old religion, but she would say: "No, Sister, you cannot understand, but one can never go back."

But this new religion seems to me to be one from the devil. For it made her leave her people. It made her take a name not theirs, as though she was ashamed of her family. When I went to see her in the hospital the day after she had tried to kill herself she was mean to me. She said: "If you want to help me go away." I said: "Papa is downstairs. Don't you want to see him?" But she said: "No, I don't."

It made the wicked man she calls her master and her "god man" end his life. It made her try to end hers. That is a poor religion. It is the religion of a coward.

It turns a woman away from the paths in which she is happiest and most useful. My sister is twenty. When I was that age I was a happy wife and my little girl was six months old. I felt that I was doing what Jehovah wants all women to do: be a wife and mother and homekeeper. That is what my religion taught me. And the religion of my sister, what has it taught her? She is broken in health, disgraced and brokenhearted. My father and I have begged her to come back to us. Our homes are hers. We will try to make her happy. But instead she will go to another, the home of a stranger, of the same belief as herself. And she will go on "living her life" which sounds to her like freedom, but to us humble folk, whom she has abandoned, like wickedness.

Every woman needs a religion. But it is far better for her if it be the religion of her fathers.

"Why I Believe in My 'God-Man'"

By ALTA MARHEVKA.

MY god-man's teachings were responsible for the manner of his passing from this plane to another. His death was entirely consistent with his doctrines. He believed that when we reach such a physical or financial state that we are no longer useful on this plane, we should toss off the manner of our life here as we fling away an old cloak, and begin again on another plane, whether lower, because of our mistakes here, or higher, because of our triumphs.

This god man's religion was esoteric and eclectic. By that I mean that its manifestations were chiefly those of the spirit, a growth that was inward, and they were eclectic because he had chosen the best truths from many religions and systems of philosophy.

Summed up, his teachings were these: The success and happiness of our lives here are not governed by outward circumstances but by our view of those circumstances, heaven and hell are onlp points of view; that the greatest happiness is found in the growth of mind and character; that each individual must live according to the light that is revealed to him; that we may not lay down any laws that others must follow, for they must learn as we do by experiments with right and wrong; that we live many hundred lives, and that the passing is only a change from one state to another.

These teachings and all of the minor doctrines growing out of them were sound and helpful. I have no regret that I embraced them. They have made me a finer, nobler woman. I have suffered, but then I have left narrowness behind.

My act in trying to end my life on this plane was not warranted by my master's teachings. He had lived and learned for twice as many years as mine on this plane. He felt that he had finished his work here. Mine is but just begun. Many possibilities of work and usefulness stretch before me. I should have been strong enough to go on and fulfill them. But I was selfish. I thought only of myself and my loneliness without him. The master would not have approved of this. I mean to go on and prove worthy of his leadership and his teachings. I shall try to forget all that has hurt and remember only what has helped. And some time on another plane, when we have both progressed, we will, I am sure, meet again and I shall be more worthy of him than I am to-day.

HOW SOME WOMEN SUCCEED

How Colorado's Lady Legislators, Win Their Way

Denver, May 20.

COLORADO is a "Suffragette" State. Four women have been elected members of its Legislature They have not been idle, either. How do they look, how do they act, speak and vote, and what sort of success are they having in moulding the laws of the State to suit the ideals of its women?—these are questions natural to both men and women all over the country.

Mrs. Representative Riddle—from Eastern Colorado in the dry farming section—is a large bony woman whose immense vitality strikes one as her chief asset Having no children of her own, she adopted a family of six, who are now fine, self-supporting men and women

"I'm for the farmer's wife," says Mrs. Riddle, "and I am going to do all I can for those women who seem to be forgotten by the men who make the laws

"Suppose," she says, her eyes ablaze, "suppose now that you were a woman on a homestead or farm, and you had a drunken, worthless husband, or one too lazy to take care of your children. Suppose you went out to work to keep those children from want, and when you came back you found the old cuss had just walked out. Well, how would you feel about the law when you found that it had allowed him to sell everything? Wouldn't you want protection?

Mrs Louise U. Jones, who is trying to provide against the foolish spending of family funds, is the antithesis of Mrs. Riddle She is short and fat, with a little mouth which must have been like a rosebud when she was twenty She was left with two small children to support years ago, and has given them a good education

Across from Mrs. Jones is the desk of Mrs Kerwin, a tall, attenuated woman in a blue dress and spectacles that push behind her ears into gray streaked hair.

She is, and has been for some time supporting an invalid husband and two children. There is not a bit of animosity in her attitude toward men, but she wants a law defining the intent and meaning of the phrase, "The Head of the Family"—not that she may be the "boss," but that she may have the same privileges in regard to taxation that a man in her position may have.

The fourth woman legislator of Colorado, and the one best known outside the State House, is Mrs. Alma Lafferty. This is her second term of office

Mrs Lafferty has an aggressive tone and bearing which instantly claim attention. "Every bill that I have been personally interested in," she says, "has gone through the House. Some of them have stuck in the Senate, though.

"This Senatorial election is of absorbing interest," she said with a heavy frown, and then in the same breath:

"Say, have you had any of Mrs. Riddle's pickles? Mrs. Riddle is the best cook in Colorado and she has the recipe for these pickles. I'll tell you the secret—alum. I suppose you didn't think you'd hear anything like that in this place did you? Well you needn't laugh. It just shows that it does not hurt a woman as a housekeeper to be here and help make laws to control her home Why, I am a better housekeeper than I ever was. And just watch that man from Boulder eat Mrs. Riddle's pickles! That's the way to reach them!"

THE world is gradually being educated to the fact that the most wonderful living scientist is Madame Curie.

This quiet, gray woman of forty-five has put science on a new basis. She has upset the laws of gravitation and the conservation of energy. Her discoveries have been more destructive of orthodox ideas than Gallileo's thory that the world revolved.

And she has succeeded simply by unceasing hard work and the avoidance of money, honors and distinctions. No man ever had so little vanity. She would hate to read this article. Praise is positively distasteful to her

Madame Sklodowska Curie is a Pole, as her quaint Christian name indicates. Her family had suffered from the cruel oppression of Russia. She was born with the stamp of suffering on her brain and body. At seventeen she came to Paris, practically penniless, to study chemistry. She often went without food in order to carry on her studies.

At twenty she met Pierre Curie, a young French professor of chemistry. He realized that here was the only human being who could fully comprehend his ideas. They were married. It was perhaps the most ideal union ever known. Together they discovered radium, that amazing substance which has upset all accepted ideas of the nature of matter and promises to provide a cure for the most incurable diseases.

They led a perfect scientific life. They lived only for work. They never spoke to anybody unless they were obliged to. They lived in a little house with a garden surrounded by a high wall and in one of the cheapest, most out-of-the-way suburbs of Paris. The neighborhood was a resort of Apaches, but the two scientists dressed so poorly that the ruffians never disturbed them.

They went to and fro on bicycles between this house and their laboratory at the university. This was their life. They had one child—a girl

Mrs. Willie E. Carter, the "Circus Set" Society Queen, Who Has Filed Her Claim to the Coming Season's Throne by Appearing in Green Tights at a Fashionable Philadelphia Hotel.

Conquering a "Circus Set"

HOW charming, versatile and vivacious Mrs. Willie E. Carter, once a belle of Baltimore, now a queen of Newport's Circus Set, won her sovereignty will be quite as absorbing a narrative to many as that of Mme. Curie's conquest of radium and the world of chemistry. Society, after all, follows closely the formulae of chemical action. Certain social elements compounded in one way produce divorce, in another scandal, in another marriage—just as chemical elements compounded in one way produce disintegration, in another explosions, in another combinations.

Before her marriage she was Lucille Polk, of Baltimore, the prettiest blonde who ever rode to hounds in the Green Spring Valley. She was one of the three graces of the Oriole City, the other two were Louise Morris and Edith Johns.

The "Three Graces" were leading spirits in Baltimore's "Brass Band"—an aggregation of that city's gayest society folk. Harry Lehr was another prominent member. When Lucille, its greatest beauty, married William Edwards Carter, the Philadelphia multimillionaire sportsman, and joined the Philadelphia set, the band wore mourning for thirty days. It was real mourning, too, bands of crepe on their left arms

Philadelphia society was a bit nervous when the Baltimore belle joined its ranks, for her fame had preceeded her. One stunt especially startled them.

It had happened the week before the wedding was celebrated. All the members of the "Brass Band" gave parties in honor of the bride. Miss Lota Robinson, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish's closest chum and the leader of the B. B., gave a very late supper dance. It was morning, the sun was rising when the party broke up. A dozen nearby neighbors decided to walk home Harry Lehr, always on the outlook for fun, elected himself pilot; it became a game of follow the leader They climbed steps, pulled door bells and ran races.

As they crossed Monument Square the leader gave a rebel yell and raced through the big fountain near the monument. Who dared follow? Were they all stumped? No! The bride-to-be, all in dainty evening costume, picked up her fluffy lace skirts and waded in'

Shortly after her marriage, Mrs. Carter persuaded her husband to build a handsome place at Bryn Mawr. She planned as her first move to Circus Set queendom to become the leader of the "Main Line" set. She succeeded. The Carter estate is one of the show places of that region of beautiful homes. As soon as the house was completed she sent out cards for a large house-warming. As each woman guest arrived she was hurried to a far-off dressing room, here she removed her wraps and was given a large blonde wig and a black silk mask. The husbands, of those who had them, did not know their own wives. The wives knew their husbands, however, and that was how the trouble began!

After that party was over six wives went home to their parents and four husbands threatened divorce It went down in history as the "trouble-dance" It was all a harmless prank on Mrs. Carter's part and no one blamed her because certain husbands and wives were indiscreet!

Then she went to Newport. Mr. Carter was well known in Newport. He was one of the cleverest polo players on the Philadelphia team. Newport did not at once accept Mrs. Carter. She did not care.

One day the Queen City got its shock. Mr. William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., appeared on his big steam yacht the Valiant. He sent out cards for a large luncheon, various well-known matrons preened their feathers and made ready to act as hostess, for Mr. Vanderbilt at that time had not re-married. When the guests arrived they were received by their host and Mrs. Carter! Newport accepted the situation with rather ill grace. The party was a huge success. Mrs. Carter had won her entrance.

At this moment Reggie Vanderbilt comes into the scene. He had polo grounds made at Sandy Point Farms, far from the madding crowd. When they were in fine form Mrs. Reggie invited the Carters to visit her. One morning there were shrieks of delight heard from the field. Mrs. Carter, wearing her favorite divided skirt habit and mounted on Alfred Vanderbilt's little Brown Jug, was playing the game with great spirit.

In the Summer of 1903 she persuaded Mr. Carter to buy Quarterfoil, a charming old mansion in Narragansett avenue in Newport. She opened her season with a large baby party. Every guest had to attend dressed as a baby. "No one over five years will be admitted" was engraved on the cards. Mrs. Carter, dressed as a Norwegian baby, Mrs. Fish came shyly in dressed as a baby "Folly" It was a wonderful party! There were half a dozen long clothes babies, bottles and all.

This was the Summer that the Duchess of Marlborough visited Newport. Also the Russian Grand Duke Boris. There were sumptuous entertainments given. Each hostess tried to outdo the other. Mrs Carter was the only newcomer to succeed in capturing both celebrities. She gave dinners for both. It was she who had the champagne served in silver slippers. The Grand Duke, always eager to praise beauty, declared Mrs. Carter to be the most beautiful blonde he had ever seen!

Mrs. Carter yearned for fresh fields to conquer. Also she was clever enough not to let Newport grow used to her! With Quarterfoil done over and ready

She produced pure radium, which had previously been known only in the form of salts. She conducted, and still conducts, the principal laboratory for the production of radium.

She believes that radium will eventually cure cancer and give sight to the blind. For the present she leaves these problems to the medical profession. She is now engaged in researches into the nature of the elektron, which she believes to be the original elementary form of all matter.

Honors came to her unsought and were generally refused. The decoration of the Legion of Honor was offered her by the Government, an exceedingly rare honor for women, but she refused it, because it was not given exclusively to scientific workers. She declined all honors from unscientific bodies. She refused all invitations from fashionable society.

She was appointed professor of chemistry at the University of Paris, the first woman to hold a chair there

She was proposed for membership in the scientific section of the Institute of France, but was rejected, although admitted to be the first scientist of the land, solely because of her sex. Her rejection threatens to destroy or revolutionise the ancient Institute.

Incidentally, she has imparted her scientific knowledge to her young daughter. She wished to enter this daughter in the State College, which is strongest in science, but the College declined to receive a girl. Thus the favorite pupil of the greatest scientist in France is excluded from a scientific college.

Madame Maeterlinck, Who Tells How She Became a Successful Wife.

"How I Became a Successful Wife Under the Most Difficult Circumstances."

OFTEN women have been warned against marrying poets. Popular prejudice places men of genius at the top of the category of bad husbands. The root of the trouble is called "artistic temperament," and it works both ways.

It separated Eames, the grand opera diva, and her painter husband, Julian Storey. It cut short the honeymoon of Robert Chanler, painter, and Cavalieri, opera soprano. Julia Marlowe and Robert Taber, E. H. Sothern and Virginia Harned—scores of popular stage favorites in recent years have rushed to the divorce courts to save themselves from each other's "artistic temperament."

Of all geniuses, poets are supposed to be the worst balanced in their attitude toward the necessary details of actual life—accordingly, if you would be a successful wife, 'ware all poets.

Yet one of the most notedly successful wives of these times is an artistic temperament of the stage wedded to the most sublimated poetic temperament of the century—Georgette Leblanc and Maurice Maeterlinck. After half a dozen years of domestic and artistic life together this extraordinary married pair is still inseparable.

Who would have imagined that Georgette Leblanc, ten years ago the most triumphant of stage sirens, with her vivacious beauty and her deep, rich voice—a favorite Carmen; the heroine of many heart conquests, who tried to stab the messenger who brought the news that her latest victim, the English boy, Edwin Marsh, had escaped from her enchantments—who would have imagined that this siren, of whom experienced boulevardiers were wary, could become the ideal mate for that innocent, timid, provincial, mystic genius who had earned with his pen the title of the "Belgian Shakespeare?"

His friends—all the literary world—wondered. Some asked "why?" Instead of presenting arguments, the poet presented his wife. After a year or two one argument silenced all others. Georgette was a successful wife. The great poet was entirely happy and contented.

Moreover, as a poet and dramatist he had broadened wonderfully. He had become less of the timid provinical who, when first he met Georgette Leblanc behind the scenes to receive expressions of her admiration, could not find a word to say. He had found his mate and reached his full manly stature.

She could well afford to give her whole heart and mind to the Belgian poet, for their marriage rehabilitated her at a time when she was in grave danger of complete submergence. Perhaps this accounts for her extraordinary versatility as a wife, housekeeper and companion while still pursuing her career as an actress

Maeterlinck's philosophical masterpiece is his "Life of the Bee." He kept bees, studied them unwearyingly, and was fond of their honey. Mme. Maeterlinck—already a competent cook—invented a whole series of dishes of which honey is a principal ingredient. Since their marriage she has seen that the poet's stomach has had no cause of complaint, thus disarming his "artistic temperament" at once in the most effectual way.

Then she constituted herself the Maeterlinck barometer, to be sure always of his change of mood. Perceiving the mood, she never neglected to adapt herself to it. Once he said to a friend: "She is the other half of my soul."

When he wants to be quiet and studious in the country, that suits her exactly. When study and solitude pall and he shows signs of restlessness, she realizes that a trip to Paris for a grand frolic is due. and he gets it without any trouble with the details.

She manages all his business affairs, relieving him of every task disturbing to his poetic serenity. When his plays are in rehearsal he does not have to go near the stage, which he hates; she is manager and stage manager.

In London, when "The Blue Bird" was in rehearsal, the poet used sometimes to stroll into the lobby of the theatre, smoking a cigarette, and hardly glancing at the busy stage where his wife was up to her eyes in production details. If some worrying functionary seized the occasion to ask him for special instructions, he would glance at him with mild surprise and say:

"Oh, you must see Madame—that is Madame's affair."

Mme. Maeterlinck has furnished for this page "Ten Commandments for Successful Wives," which seem to have worked quite well in her own case.

Wives! What Do You Think of These?

Madame Maeterlinck's Ten Commandments for Wives.

I.—Remember always that the true wife is the inseparable half of the only complete human unit, in which two small and imperfect individualities have become merged in a large and perfect One.

II.—Each half of the wedded Whole retains special functions; yours are to discern, to anticipate, to yield, to cheer, to soothe—and thus to strengthen.

III.—Never trust to hirelings the essentials of your husband's physical wellbeing: understand, and frequently practice, the art of selecting and preparing his food

IV.—Be sure each day that his garments are whole and clean and suited to the season.

V.—Constitute yourself an infallible barometer whereby to forecast and render harmless those electrical disturbances peculiar to the married state.

VI.—Be to your husband's dark moods the subtle, unsuspected antidote; to his joyous mood the companion Spirit of Joy.

VII.—Save your caresses until you perceive that his dinner has been without a flaw: kisses to a hungry man are like froth to a parched tongue.

VIII.—Your tongue for assent; for argument use only your eyes.

IX.—When your husband has an attack of gout, depreciate the art of dancing.

X.—If you would convince your husband that you are a better actress than Bernhardt, a better dancer than Pavlowa, prove to him that you are a better cook than M. Escoffier.

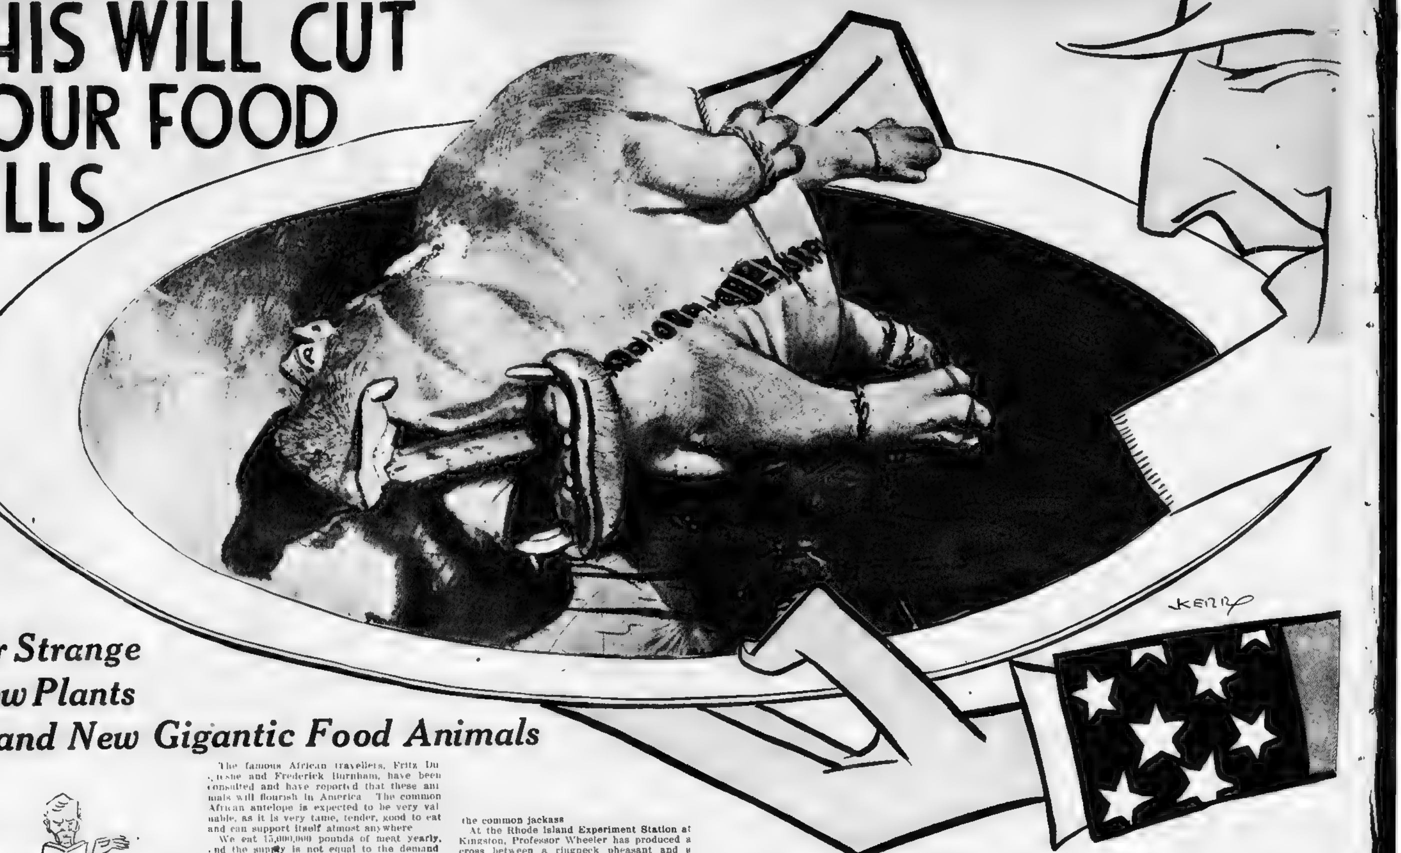
THIS WILL CUT YOUR FOOD BILLS



Our Strange New Plants and New Gigantic Food Animals

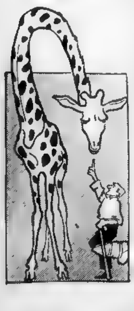
"The 'Clamster,' a cross between the oyster and the clam."

THE population is growing faster than the food supply. Prices are rising beyond the reach of the average wage-earner Trusts are combining with nature to make food dearer

Science must come to the help of man, or we shall die of starvation This is just what science is doing

The Hon. Willet M Hays, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, believes we must change our food supply to make it support more people. He has started a number of experiments in this direction which have already produced useful results

Representative Broussard, of Louisiana agrees with the Assistant Secretary, and has introduced a bill in Congress appropriating $250,000 to import and breed on Government lands foreign animals suitable for food



"'You're my meat,' says the rheumatic to the giraffe."

The Secretary of Agriculture will be empowered to import and breed hippopotamus, antilope, camel, eland, giraffe yak, African buffalo springbok, trebok duiker, koodoo and [illegible]

The famous African travellers, Fritz Duquesne and Frederick Burnham, have been consulted and have reported that these animals will flourish in America The common African antelope is expected to be very valuable, as it is very tame, tender, good to eat and can support itself almost anywhere

We eat 15,000,000 pounds of meat yearly, and the supply is not equal to the demand We depend practically altogether on the bullock, sheep, swine and chicken. That is why the supply is insufficient. To remedy this we must have recourse to animals that sustain themselves more cheaply and live where the present food creatures cannot

Because we are so attached to beef and mutton, vast regions of the South yield us no meat. Introduce the hippopotamus and you change that state of affairs. The hippopotami will be placed in the vast bayous of Mississippi and Louisiana. These swamps raise the very water plants of which the hippopotamus is most fond. The plants are a pest, stopping navigation and killing the fish

The hippopotamus will feed on the plants and keep the rivers clear, as it does in Africa One of these plants, the wild hyacinth, yields forty tons to the acre. The War Department has vainly tried to clear it out of Southern rivers, but the hippopotamus will do it

One hippopotamus yields about four tons of meat That ought to jar the Beef Trust. Its flesh has a mingled flavor of pork and beef; it is very tender and much relished in Africa

The African buffalo will live and flourish in American swamps that are now useless such as the Dismal Swamp of Virginia. The leather made from its hide is said to be the [illegible] and strongest known to commerce

The eland will do much to satisfy the American appetite for meat. It weighs on the average 1,500 pounds, lives on very little in the desert and is a welcome meat on the dinner table

The white rhinoceros will thrive in our deserts. It is a valuable meat creature. The giraffe will also live in the desert and be particularly valuable as food for rheumatic persons, as its flesh contains no uric acid

In some cases new species of food animals will be produced by crossing American animals with imported ones. The Indian buffalo has been crossed with the native cow in Texas, thus producing a hybrid which is proof against that deadly pest of Texas cattle, the tick

The African zebra has been crossed with the Western donkey, producing a hybrid called the zebrule, which is extremely useful in arid regions as a beast of burden The zebrule has enormous pulling power and is even more handy than the common jackass

At the Rhode Island Experiment Station at Kingston, Professor Wheeler has produced a cross between a ringneck pheasant and a yellow bantam. This bird is as meaty and good to eat as the pheasant and as hardy as any chicken

The Department of Agriculture is engaged in increasing the nutritive power of various grains A new wheat has been obtained which yields 18 per cent. more to the acre than any previously known kind This means to each farmer who uses it a gain of $2 per acre

By crossing the common sweet orange of the South and the Japanese trifoliate orange a fruit called "citrange" has been produced which will grow as far north as North Carolina

A new variety of fig has been discovered in California which possesses the peculiarity of being adapted to a rainy climate. It is called the Rixford As the fruit ripens a drop of gum closes the mouth, protecting it against insects and rain

The fruit of the walnut and the oak tree have been crossed, giving use to a nut called the "walcorn." The tree which bears it has the hardiness of the oak, while the fruit is as palatable as the walnut.

The sand cherry, which grows wild in South Dakota, has been trained to bear good cherries, plums, nectarines and peaches

Why We Have "Spring Fever"

SPRING fever has been variously described as "a sort of restlessness" or "a feeling of recklessness and adventure" Nobody however, has ever offered a satisfactory explanation of what causes it

According to the London Lancet, however, it is but the natural expression of a definite physiological state which recurs annually at this time of year and which originated in our cave-dwelling days

Man, to our knowledge, has never actually hibernated, that is to say, gone into a state of torpidity during the winter months, as certain animals do.

He has had to seek his food the year round or pay forfeit with his life. Before the introduction of artificial light, which was but a matter of yesterday in the history of the human race, it is probable that for long ages he must have lain in a kind of slumbrous lassitude during the dark winter days and long nights, waiting for the sun's brief reign to enable him to seek his food.

During this period of the year all his functions would be depressed; his blood pressure would be low. Only when the sun strengthened and the days lengthened would there be a rise in blood pressure, and this, we think, may be, in some measure at least, an explanation of the "restlessness" so many of us feel at this season of the year.

Although the poets delight in describing Spring as a fickle and sportive young maid. there is at least no mistaking Nature's seriousness in her arrangements for wooing and wedding. The fierce and unconquerable note of the nightingale, the madness of the March hare, all bear witness to Nature's intensity of purpose in one direction—reproduction.

Spring fever affects different people in different ways. Some assert that they experience an added piquancy in life and a general quickening of perception. Others, again, feel an unwonted depression. To the majority, however, the Spring season is certainly felt as giving fresh buoyancy and a feeling of hopefulness in life.

Whatever the symptoms, the cause must be sought in characteristics acquired by men in the days when the world was young.

Forcing Hens, Cows and Lands to Double Their Yield

From an Interview with

Willet M. Hays,

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture

"FOOD supply in this country will become before long a much more serious problem than it is to-day When, sixty years from now, there are two-hundred million people in the United States, the fight for sustenance will become much more fierce; and, in order to meet the emergency, we shall be obliged to make the most of various ingenious expedients, the foremost of which is the breeding of better animals and better plants.

"Already we have taken this matter up very seriously, and some remarkable results have been achieved Indeed, the wealth of the world and the pleasure of living have been greatly augmented by the scientific improvement of plants and animals, though as yet only a start has been made toward accomplishing all that is possible in this direction.

"It is a question, primarily, of making an acre of land produce a maximum of output Such output may take the form of grain or vegetables, or the acre may support a cow that yields a certain quantity of butter What we are trying to get, among other things, is a cow that will yield twice as much butter as the ordinary cow of to-day. From such an average cow the farmer obtains hardly more than 125 pounds of butter in a twelvemonth, but before long we shall breed cows which from the same area of land, will deliver 250 pounds, and some that will give 300 pounds

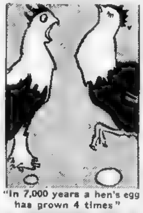
"The Federal and State governments, at the present time, are co-operating with groups of farmers to produce families of high-yield cows which will turn out a much greater quantity of milk from an acre of grass and a ton of meal. In addition, the best milking strains of cattle are being crossed with the best beef producing strains, in order that the farmer's cow in days to come may be not only a first-rate milker, but highly desirable also from the viewpoint of the butcher.

"The average hen lays 125 eggs in a twelvemonth. It is too few. We want a hen that can be counted on to lay 200 eggs per annum, and we shall get her before very long. The Department of Agriculture is pursuing experiments which have for their object the production not only of a greater number of eggs per hen, but of larger and heavier eggs, of uniform color—this last being an important matter from a market point of view

"Already there appears an occasional pullet which lays 240, or even 254, eggs a year, illustrating possibilities in this line. We want breeds of chickens which will do nearly, if not quite, as well. In 7,000 years, during which the fowl has been domesticated, the size of its eggs has been multiplied by four, through the simple process of picking out the biggest ones for hatching. We are going ahead with the same idea, systematically applied. But, not content with this, we are trying to improve the chicken itself as a market bird by increasing the weight of the flesh on its breast and thighs. The chickens of the future will have bigger drumsticks and more white meat than those of to-day.

"There is not the slightest doubt that half a century from now the people of this country will eat much less meat than they do at the present time, and will depend for food to a far greater extent upon vegetables and cereals. It is always more expensive to raise plants to feed animals and to consume the output in the shape of meat than it is to grow grain or garden truck, which is exactly the reason why meat to-day costs more than corn or potatoes. Thus it inevitably comes about, as a region becomes densely populated, that comparatively little flesh is eaten

"Russia raises 30 bushels an acre to our 15.



"In 7,000 years a hen's egg has grown 4 times"

"Cows will give twice their yield in butter fats."

"Hence the enormous importance of the efforts which science is making to augment the crop power of land—or, in other words, to make a given area yield a larger output whether of wheat or corn or other plant food stuff. Corn, of course, is already our great crop, but means are being taken to augment it through scientific breeding. With this end in view, co-operative associations of farmers in various States—Illinois being a leader—are doing systematic work of the kind under direction of the agricultural experiment stations Ears of highest yield are carefully selected for seed, and even the kernels are subjected to analysis, in order to ascertain the percentages of nitrogen, oil, etc., they contain.

"Our corn yields, on an average, about twenty-five bushels to the acre. We shall get fifty bushels in the future by planting improved varieties. The farmers themselves do not realize the fact that for centuries they have been conducting with maize the most extensive breeding experiment ever carried on, and by selection have greatly increased the output of the cornfields. The individual plant is so large that each ear is taken in the hand in husking out the crop, and thus, season after season, the agriculturist has been able to choose the best-yielding plants out of immense fields. Thus the average ear of corn to-day is much bigger than it was half a century ago. But, by the help of scientific breeding, we shall, with this important cereal, go far ahead of anything hitherto accomplished.

"Our wheat crop is already gigantic, but is much less than it ought to be. How far this is true may be judged from the fact that the output of this cereal in the United States averages only about fifteen bushels to the acre, whereas in Europe it is over thirty bushels. This seems surprising, but it is explained chiefly by the fact that we are planting, in a dry and warm climate, varieties which were originally bred for the moist and cool climates of the Old World. What we need is an entirely new set of varieties of wheat

"With this idea in view, some of the States are already breeding wheats specially adapted to their own climatic and soil conditions. At the Minnesota Experiment Station, where work of the kind was first taken up, hundreds of varieties were obtained from all parts of the world, and, ten of these being chosen, little patches of them were planted From each patch, when ripe, ten stalks of heaviest yield were selected, the result being one hundred picked 'mother plants,' which furnished seed for the next season. All but thirty of these mother plants were thrown out later, and the selection went on and on, until finally the best of the survivors were subjected to milling and baking tests. Then, and not until then, were the wheats distributed among a few farmers, who raised them and sold them for seed to anybody who wanted to buy.

"Ten years were occupied in this work, but the result was the production of a new variety of wheat yielding 25 per cent. more of the grain to the acre than could be obtained from ordinary wheat.

"Only within the last few years has it come to be realized that plant life is, to a wonderful extent, subject to man's control. He is almost able to act the part of a creator in the vegetable world, so greatly is it in his power to modify species by artificial selection and by cross-breeding"

Embarrasing and Ruinous Order of Plain Queen Mary That Ladies Who Come to Court Must Throw Away Their Hobble Skirts and Their "Beautiful Make-Ups"

"Little dabs of powder,
Little pots of paint,
Make a fine complexion
Out of one that ain't."

London, May 17.

QUEEN MARY of England may never have heard this charming quatrain, but she knows all about dabs of powder, and pots of paint, and just a few days ago ordered their abolition!

No longer will the "Courts," as their majesties' receptions are called, resemble paint shops and beauty parlors. Paint of all kinds lip, cheek and fingernail paint—must go. Beauty unadorned is to adorn all future courts and the great coronation festivities.

Natural complexions which have not seen the light of day for years will now be on public view.

But paint and powder are not the only things outlawed! Hobble skirts must go, clinging, slinky skirts must go, elbow sleeves must go, Dutch necks must go, large hats must go, false hair must go! Dear, oh, dear, what is the world a coming to? English women of fashion and the American millionairesses will begin to look respectable once more. And all the world knows that for several years no dame of fashion would dare look respectable.

There is a tragic side to these orders from Queen Mary. It is sad enough to think of the time-worn complexion soon to be exposed to vulgar gaze. But think of all the waste of that powder and paint! Probably fifty gallons of perfectly good face paint will be consigned to the limpid waters of the Thames. Thirteen tons of smokeless powder will be carried out to sea and lost.

The lip salve will be carried beyond the three-mile limit and there thrown overboard in small quantities or dangerous accidents and wrecks might occur. Careful statisticians compute that, placed in one pile, the lip salve to be discarded would rival the Singer Building.

Eyebrow pencils and false eye lashes must go. These first aids to beauty will also find a watery grave.

But oh, the tragedy of the false hair! What poet will write the epic of the rat, the puff, and the braid? Will Alfred Austin? Will Rudyard Kipling? False hair must be discreetly dealt with. It can't be drowned. It is not pleasant to have it burned. Queen Mary in ordering its abolition does not state how it can be disposed of. It might be exported to America. Or returned to China whence it came.

With these cruel orders emanating from Buckingham Palace the real cause of the open break between the Dowager Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary is discovered. Alexandra has long been noted as the most perfectly made-up woman in England. Her complexion, her headdress, her lips are the most perfect examples of the beauty doctor's art. Alexandra naturally assumes that Queen Mary's orders are partly aimed at her, and the episode has helped to increase the well-known ill feeling between the two Queens.

"Attend the coronation in my own complexion!" says Queen Alexandra. "Never!"

The Dowager Queen is not the only resentful woman in England, but none of the others dare show their resentment openly. There are noble duchesses who are shrinking from the public gaze. They feel so undressed! There is the exquisite Countess of Suffolk, whose wonderful complexion was the envy of every smart woman of Paris and London. To-day she is displaying her coloring unaided. There is the Duchess of Westminster, one of the most delicately tinted noblewomen of all England, who is suffering in silence.

Officials of the court, crusty white-whiskered old Britishers, scan each woman, debutante or veteran, as she comes to court. A dab of rouge, a dainty touch of eyebrow paint, an artistic puff or curl of false hair and the poor thing is driven away from court, publicly humiliated before the whole world. Such are the Queen's orders.

It was bad enough when the royal mandate as to the courts appeared. But there was worse to come. Every smart Londoner, every rich American goes to the Ascot races. Now at Ascot there is the royal enclosure, where the King and Queen hold sway. To be asked within that enclosure is the desire of every woman's heart. Such gowns as are made to order for that event! Millions are spent annually and dressmakers are busy for weeks preparing for it.

Queen Mary, bourgeoise in taste and temperament, will govern that enclosure as carefully as the courts themselves. "Will you come into my parlor?" she says. "Well, then, don't wear large hats, false hair, hobble skirts, elbow sleeves or Dutch necks!" B-r-r-rh! Hear the wails! Hear the groans! This mandate means that nine out of every ten women in London will have to have new gowns made or stay at home.

More than a million dollars was tied up in hobble skirts, in big picture hats, in elbow sleeves. This money, which might build and endow a hospital, is all wasted. Thousand-dollar gowns especially designed for Ascot are now ruins. Hundred-dollar hats are reposing on dust heaps.

Think of poor little Lady Decies. The best part of her trousseau put out of action at one blow! It was worse than the appendicitis which she endured so bravely. All her life Vivien Gould has worn collarless gowns. She has never worn a high collar in her life. She hates them. But she will now wear them.

Fifty thousand dollars gone to the bad. What will George Gould say when he receives a batch of bills for a second trousseau?

There are others in as deep despair. There is Lady Granard, the former Beatrice Mills, who, in her Newport days, was the most slavish follower of fashion's foibles. She has been hit indeed. Twenty-eight costumes, thirty-five hats—all discarded. Another $50,000 wasted! Will Ogden Mills with his millions feel happy in seeing this criminal waste? Lady Granard's American friends are not sorry for her. They feel that she has been too exclusive since her marriage. They say that she will not entertain any one who does not wear a title. They feel that they are avenged now that the Queen will entertain no one who wears a hobble.

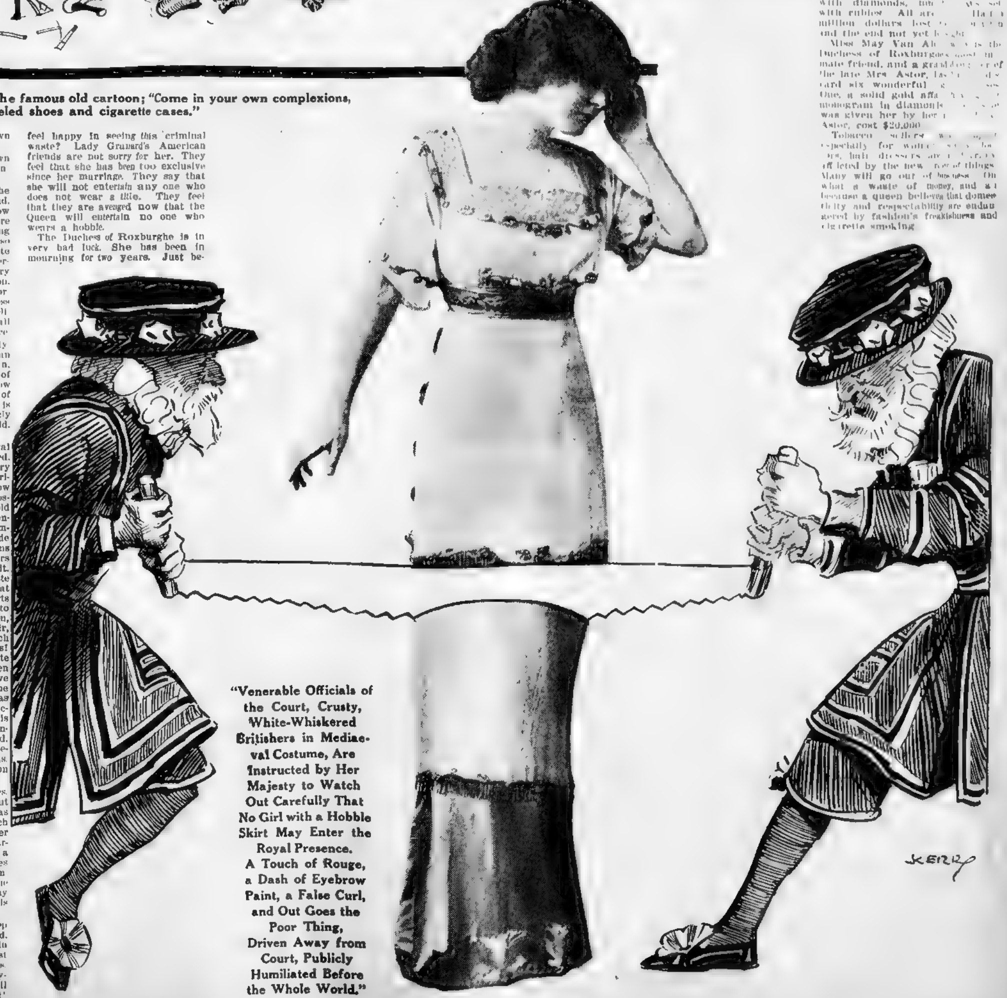
The Duchess of Roxburghe is in very bad luck. She has been in mourning for two years. Just before the season opened she ordered an entire new wardrobe. Thirty evening gowns, thirty afternoon gowns, thirty morning gowns, with hats to match. The whole outfit is on the royal blacklist. Eighty thousand dollars lost. Really this is too much! Even the noble Duke who believes that the Queen can do no wrong, is sore. He would like to spend that eighty thousand on improvements for Floors Castle.

Queen Mary is a very busy person these merry Spring days. London began to [illegible] four hours passed [illegible] gestions" from B[illegible]. But Her Ma[illegible]. Having purified [illegible] certain extent [illegible]. And she sniffed a w[illegible] smoke.

Ah! Americ[illegible]! No [illegible] smoker can enter my pres[illegible] the clank, clank of metal [illegible] royal blacksmith invading Mayfair? No, indeed. That clank, clank comes from the silver cig[illegible] gold cigarette cases w[illegible] en are throwing [illegible] out of sight. [illegible] set with diamonds, [illegible] set with rubies. All are [illegible]. Half a million dollars lost [illegible] and the end not yet [illegible].

Miss May Van Al[illegible] is the Duchess of Roxburghe's most in[illegible]mate friend, and a granddaughter of the late Mrs. Astor, las[illegible] card six wonderful [illegible]. One, a solid gold affa[illegible] monogram in diamonds [illegible] was given her by her [illegible] Astor, cost $20,000.

Tobacco sellers [illegible] especially for women [illegible], hair dressers are [illegible] affected by the new [illegible] of things. Many will go out of business. Oh what a waste of money, and all because a queen believes that domesticity and respectability are endangered by fashion's freakishness and cigarette smoking.



"Venerable Officials of the Court, Crusty, White-Whiskered Britishers in Mediaeval Costume, Are Instructed by Her Majesty to Watch Out Carefully That No Girl with a Hobble Skirt May Enter the Royal Presence. A Touch of Rouge, a Dash of Eyebrow Paint, a False Curl, and Out Goes the Poor Thing, Driven Away from Court, Publicly Humiliated Before the Whole World."

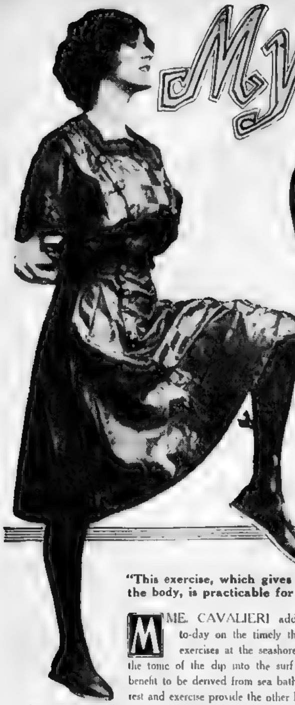
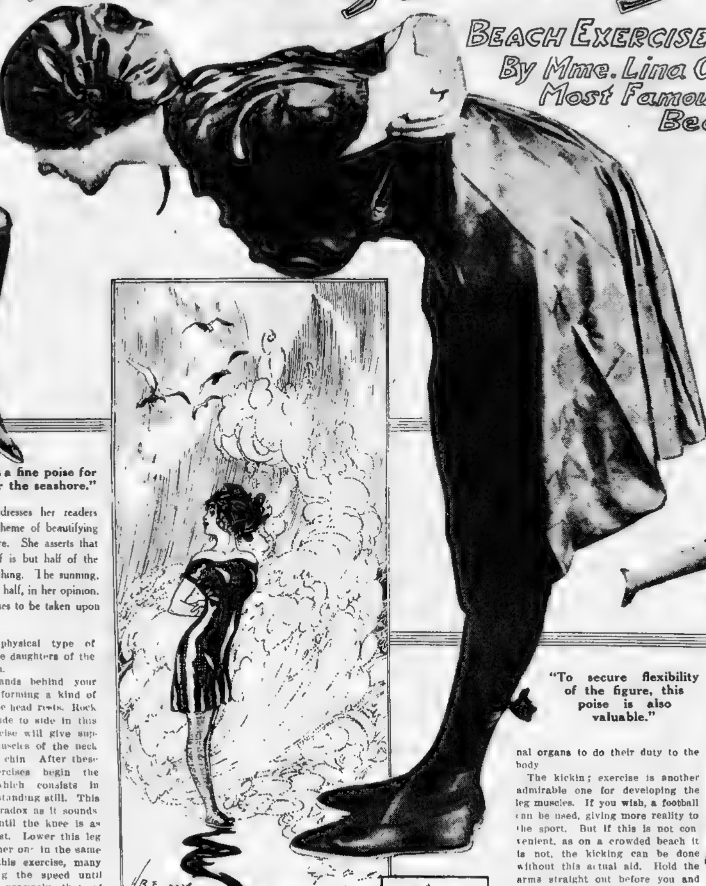
My Secrets of Beauty—No. 126.

BEACH EXERCISES FOR WOMEN

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.



"This exercise, which gives a fine poise for the body, is practicable for the seashore."



Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

MME. CAVALIERI addresses her readers to-day on the timely theme of beautifying exercises at the seashore. She asserts that the tonic of the dip into the surf is but half of the benefit to be derived from sea bathing. The sunning, rest and exercise provide the other half, in her opinion.

Mme. Cavalieri describes a half dozen valuable exercises to be taken upon the sand after the bath

THE dip into the surf is but half the value to be derived from sea bathing. The sunning, exercise and rest in the sand represent the other half. Some constitutions are too delicate to withstand the shock of the cold salt water. These may derive much benefit from exercise on the sand, even though they follow the advice of the old song and "don't go near the water."

If you are spending your vacation, or a part of it, by the seashore and dread the plunge into the cold water, especially if your physician has advised you to avoid sea bathing, you may content yourself with your tub, and, putting on your bathing suit, take a sun and sand bath on the beach. Or, if you are a sea bather, you may take the same exercise after coming out of the water by way of drying yourself.

The exercise which I am about to describe is a favorite one among Scandinavian women, and travellers know that nowhere in the world is there a finer physical type of women than these daughters of the valiant Norsemen.

Clasp your hands behind your head, the palms forming a kind of bowl, in which the head rests. Rock the head from side to side in this bowl. The exercise will give suppleness to the muscles of the neck and poise to the chin. After these preliminary exercises begin the regular one, which consists in marching while standing still. This is not such a paradox as it sounds. Raise one leg until the knee is as high as the waist. Lower this leg and raise the other one in the same way. Repeat this exercise, many times, increasing the speed until the motion is precisely that of soldiers marching to double-quick time. Fancy you hear martial music and perform your high-stepping to that imagined accompaniment. This exercise will give suppleness to the entire body and will especially develop the seldom-used muscles of the abdomen. It will stimulate the liver and other internal organs to do their duty to the body.

"To secure flexibility of the figure, this poise is also valuable."

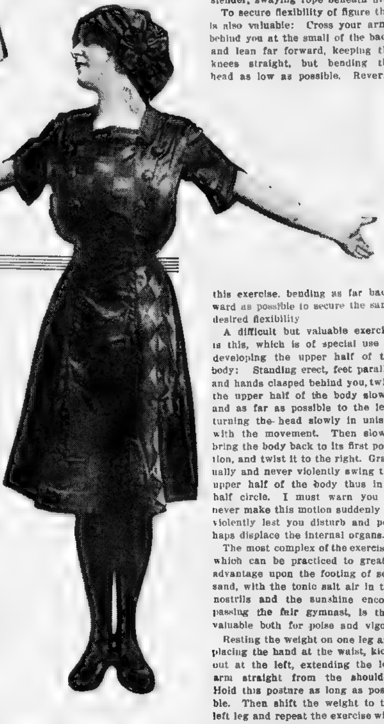
The kicking exercise is another admirable one for developing the leg muscles. If you wish, a football can be used, giving more reality to the sport. But if this is not convenient, as on a crowded beach it is not, the kicking can be done without this actual aid. Hold the arms straight out before you and bring the palms together, as though you were clapping your hands. Then swing one leg slowly up as high as the waist. Swing it back into position and repeat the movement with the other leg. Alternate. This is another exercise for development of grace and vigor.

A third, which has the same purpose, is more difficult. It is the same movement, but backward. Bring the arms behind the back by a long, sweeping motion, the backs of the hands meeting. Then kick with the right leg, raising the foot as far as you can without losing your balance. Swing the left leg upward in the same way. Then alternate. This is a good abdominal exercise.

A fourth exercise which gives fine poise to the body is also practicable for the seashore. Bend the knee of the right leg. Spread the hands and thrust the arms forward, the hands upward and on a level with the shoulders. Draw the arms backward and shift the weight to the other leg. Bend the knee of that leg and thrust the hands forward as before, drawing them back by a slow, rhythmical motion. This often wonderfully promotes grace.

A seashore exercise that gives flexibility to both pairs of limbs is that of stretching the arms straight from the shoulders at the sides and walking with the trapeze step—that is, walking with one foot thrust over another, then reversing, as a tightrope performer walks on the slender, swaying rope beneath him.

To secure flexibility of figure this is also valuable: Cross your arms behind you at the small of the back and lean far forward, keeping the knees straight, but bending the head as low as possible. Reverse this exercise, bending as far backward as possible to secure the same desired flexibility.



"Bring the arms behind the back by a long, sweeping motion."

A difficult but valuable exercise is this, which is of special use in developing the upper half of the body: Standing erect, feet parallel and hands clasped behind you, twist the upper half of the body slowly and as far as possible to the left, turning the head slowly in unison with the movement. Then slowly bring the body back to its first position, and twist it to the right. Gradually and never violently swing the upper half of the body thus in a half circle. I must warn you to never make this motion suddenly or violently lest you disturb and perhaps displace the internal organs.

The most complex of the exercises which can be practiced to greater advantage upon the footing of soft sand, with the tonic salt air in the nostrils and the sunshine encompassing the fair gymnast, is this, valuable both for poise and vigor:

Resting the weight on one leg and placing the hand at the waist, kick out at the left, extending the left arm straight from the shoulder. Hold this posture as long as possible. Then shift the weight to the left leg and repeat the exercise with the right, reversing and repeating, stopping short of weariness, for in beauty development at least, all exercises should stop short of fatigue.

The Romantic Folly of Marrying a Sickly Man

IT is undoubtedly the maternal instinct in woman that so often inclines her heart to listen to the selfish plea of the delicate man.

She is so sorry for him—and pity, in the case of anything feminine, assuredly is "akin to love!"

She wants to soothe the sufferer's fevered brow, to make up to him for all the manly joys and pastimes that he is debarred from. It is precisely the same feeling that prompts her to pick up a wailing child, but the fact passes unrecognized, and by a soft-hearted lassie her sensations are mistaken for love—and alas, alas, for all the misery that follows!

It is quite a stage in an unformed girl's career when positive ill-health attracts her in the opposite sex. A hectic flush renders any male person interesting, and a family history of consumption singles out an acquaintance for distinction.

For some strange reason happy youth positively revels in gloom. Sweet seventeen vaguely dreams of ministering to some fascinating invalid's needs, of hearing his faltering tones proclaim her a very Florence Nightingale, of a ring slipped on a finger from an apparently dying bed, and then of marvellous recovery, all due to love and her!

If a kind fate protects her footsteps, and brings no interesting invalid across her path, the phase will be but a passing one, maybe, and healthy, vigorous manhood attain the chance of winning her affections.

It is indeed the saddest of all fates—that of a young girl who ties herself in the springtime of her youth to a delicate husband.

To begin with, he is almost of necessity always unworthy.

No high-minded, conscientious man would for a moment dream of sacrificing a girl's life in such a fashion. And this even if he is in a position to provide for her future. For the monster of utter selfishness who can marry knowing his own precarious hold on a livelihood, as well as on life, no language can be too severe.

A great love, it is true, brings compensation for almost everything in its train, but, as has been said, the girl or woman who marries a delicate man as a rule feels merely a motherly pity and affection for him, and such a spurious feeling is not within miles of being strong enough to outlive the daily, hourly trials of the delicate man's wife.

Indeed, there are no compensations in her lot. The saintly sufferer of her imagination of whom she dreamed has no existence in reality. Ill-health is a cruel and ugly thing, more often than not rendering those who suffer it a burden to all with whom they come in contact.

Cold, self-centred, absolutely selfish, the pathetic belief of young things that those near the shadow must be touched by some of the radiant glory of angel wings has little enough foundation, in fact. And if an angelic invalid is sometimes discovered, never, never, is it a man!

When a girl finds herself drifting toward matrimony with a man who her own observation, as well as the warnings of her friends, tells her is hopelessly delicate, let her take herself to task, and sternly force herself to view the future as it will be—beyond the romantic present, wherein she plays sweetheart-nurse.

What of the years ahead when employers get tired of constant pleas of sickness—as the kindest must sometime get tired? What fresh employer is likely to desire the services of a semi-invalid? What of the little home, whose sole support is that same invalid—of the little delicate children who, maybe, fill it to overflowing?

Perhaps written down in cold black and white all this sounds a heartless invitation to leave a delicate lover to live out his life in loneliness, simply because his sweetheart is too cowardly to face the future by his side.

But it is no such thing. Both men and women doomed to serious invalidism know in their hearts that they have no right to marry. In doing so they betray, not love, but deepest selfishness.

If, therefore, a girl finds herself being wooed by a man troubled with chronic ill-health, or whose family consists almost entirely of invalids, she may know at once he is unworthy of any nice woman's love, and she would do well to avoid him—not because of his affliction altogether, but because his selfish desire is greater than his love. Such a man could make no girl really happy.

No warning is more needed—none that should more constantly be sounded in the ears of romantic girldom—than: Don't marry an invalid. Life worth living is only possible with a healthy man!

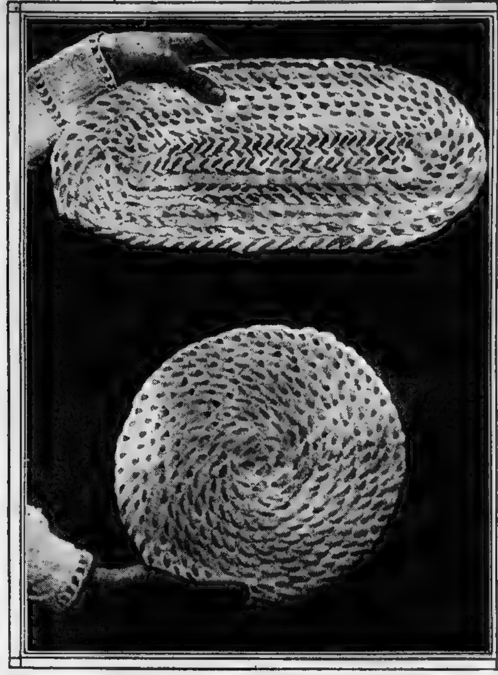
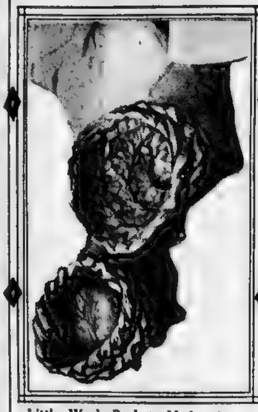
What You Can Do with Corn Husks No.1

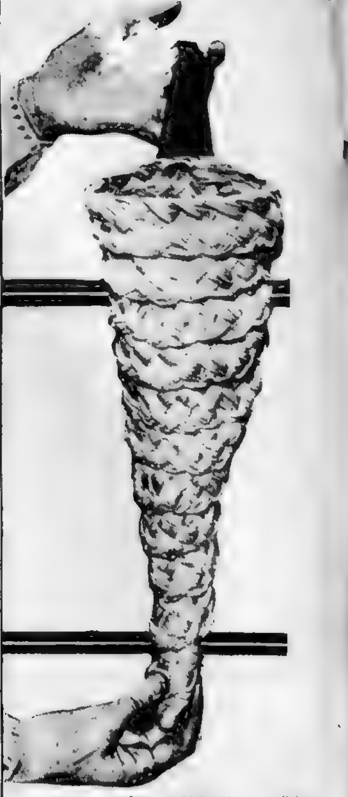


Two Styles of Table Mats in Tasteful Designs—Among the Useful Articles Which Earned for Aunt Hulda Eccliston $300 in One Year.



Little Work Baskets Made of Corn Husks.

Aunt Hulda Eccliston Braiding Corn Husks for Basket-Making—She Is Wearing a Corn Husk Hat Made by Herself.



One of Aunt Hulda's Cornucopias of Braided Corn Husks

By Aunt Hulda Eccliston

WELL, yes—write it down just as I tell it to you. I don't mind other folks having a chance in this world, and I guess it won't hurt me any to give 'em a hint of what can be done with corn husks.

Right here in this little Connecticut village, last year, I made more than $300—just coined the money out of mats and baskets and automobile hats and other things I braided and sewed from nothing but corn husks I got for the asking.

I guess I'm the inventor of this industry. They say that necessity is the mother of invention. Well, that was my case. I was in terrible straits after John died. I was left with nothing but the farm of ten acres.

I'm fifty years old, so I couldn't do very much heavy farming, and I was too far from the station to make eggs or garden stuff pay. I raised enough to eat myself, and I had a roof over my head, but taxes and the expense of my clothes had to be got somewhere.

I got awful blue and discouraged and used to cry some, and then one day a lady from the city came along. She was in an automobile, and she stopped to ask the way and get a drink of water from my well, that has a tall sweep and which always attracts city folks' notice.

Well, she was a lovely lady. She looked at me closely and saw that I had been crying, and she sat down and says to me:

"Now, what's the matter?" she says, with her voice soft with sympathy. It made me cry more, and then she says, after I had told her all my troubles:

"Now, I am not going to give you any money. I know you are too proud to take it; but I am going to help you to help yourself. I'm going to send you a book, and I want you should read it, and I think you will know how to work out your own salvation then."

So she went away, and in a day or two the book came from New York. It was all about learning to look within ourselves for the means of making ourselves successful or great. First off I thought it didn't mean anything at all. I couldn't make head nor tail of it, and I says:

"I guess this is too deep for Aunt Huldy;" but I took it up again and read it through, and I began to get an idea what was meant. Then I went right back over it all again, kind of studying it, and by the time I had read it four times it all seemed plain as day, and I felt all buoyed up and sure that I could do anything.

It said in the book one mustn't run away from things, but just face it out; we are where we are meant to be till we earn the right to be somewhere else, and that there was always the means right at hand to help the first step.

So I just set down and thought what is there right here that I can use to make money. I was sitting on the door stone, just about sun set, and there was an old corn husk mat on the stone that John braided out of husks one Winter when he had the rheumatism and couldn't get out.

I thought: Now, that was made out of something that we usually throw away; and then, like a flash, the whole idea came to me to make other things of corn husks, to use every bit of the husks and make them pay. I had just husked a lot of sweet corn for drying that morning, and the husks were out back of the barn, where I'd throwed them away. I clipped it out there after them and filled my apron with them and put them on the kitchen floor. I went back two or three times after 'em.

Then I got my supper and cleared it away, and sat right down, all eager to work. I made a mat to start with, to practice. I braided the corn husks just as you would braid rags for a rug or braid your hair. All the while I was at work I was thinking. I thought that I could make all sizes of braids, big and little, and the little fine ones, made out of the delicate inner husks that are almost white, could be made into fine table mats and hats and such things.

The next day, after tending to my chores and doing a little baking, I went to the neighbors and got all the corn husks they had, both of field corn and sweet corn, and then I set to work again, and I made all sorts of things—all kinds of baskets, hats, cornucopias, square boxes with covers to them, things for holding a ball of twine, jardiniere covers, table mats, big and little floor rugs, round and square and oblong; automobile bonnets and caps, waste baskets, and so forth.

I was always thinking of some new thing to make, and I did enjoy making them, for it wasn't hard work—just setting and plaiting the clean husks and sewing them with strong white linen thread into different shapes and forms.

Then I colored some of the husks after they were braided. I used just common dye powders, and they looked lovely. I dyed them after they were braided. Then I set to thinking how to sell 'em after I'd got a lot made.

Well, I got another inspiration. I saw how I could sell all the corn husk things I could make. It worked even better than I thought it would—— Goodness! My bread's burning. Next time you call I'll tell you about the sellin' part.

The Extravagance of the Newest Fashions in Funerals

By a Reformed Undertaker.

WHILE organized charity is preaching to the poor man, and rightly, that one of his rankest extravagances is in the matter of coffins, the rich, who organize the same charity, are soaring higher than ever in this particular item of funeral expense. As the rich, by proxy, preach, "Let the habiliments of the dead at the time of burial correspond with their surroundings during life," so they are actually practising it.

The burial casket in which the late Russell Sage lies in Oakwood Cemetery, Troy, cost $6,000—or, say, ten times what, not so long ago, was regarded as an extravagant price by even the well-to-do. The wood was polished vermilion worth a dollar a foot, and so scarce that if twenty-nine more caskets like it had been demanded at the same time there would not have been enough in stock in the whole country to more than supply them.

Yet there was no show about it; it was simple and dignified, and to the untrained eye would not have suggested one thousand dollars—let alone six. It had plain sides and top, with rounded corners, slightly ornamented with a conventional three-part design, and a simple moulding at top and bottom.

One single detail, however, accounted for just half the cost—a copper lining of the finest workmanship. Other expensive details were the full bevel plate glass, the lining of the very richest corded silk obtainable, and extension handles of antique copper with mahogany bars. In this case there was, of course, no real extravagance. Mrs. Sage simply wanted the best, and she procured it in the best of taste.

Those who do not care for vermilion have a choice of other tremendously expensive woods. African or San Domingo mahogany, either in natural finish or with marquetry panels on sides or ends, is among the top-notchers; so are teakwood and silver-gray maple, with natural finish. All of the finest hardwoods are, in fact, available if you have the money to pay for them. The vermilion is especially liked for its warm, reddish hue. It, and some of the other hardwoods undoubtedly leave a good impression as compared with the cloth-covered casket.

Teakwood, hitherto mostly favored for a ship's deck, is new to the casketmaker's trade, but has been found desirable for its lasting qualities, as well as the admirable effect when polished. The attractive silver gray maple is also new. Satin wood, cypress, walnut, birch, and Flemish weathered and quartered oak are other choices. Eight hundred dollars is about the price of the cheapest. For a teakwood casket one pays easily a thousand dollars.

The late John S. Newmeyer, of Dawson, Pa., had a bronze casket, one of the "state" kind. With his abundant means he thought he could afford it. He also liked the idea of the body of Paul Jones being preserved in alcohol, so he made similar provisions for himself. The casket was flooded with alcohol, and the lid put on and sealed. Then a hole was bored in the lid and the rest of the fluid poured in. All told, ninety gallons of alcohol were used.

Whether in costly wood or costlier bronze, burial caskets have of late followed the impulse of other branches of decorative art. In general the tendency is toward the antique, and in some of the more elaborate designs the carvings are from adaptations of noted architectural decorations of the ancient Greeks. In the case of the most elaborate ones, where the carving alone represents four months' time of the highest skilled labor, art has gone so far that a dead European king can have nothing over a dead American millionaire in the way of a burial casket in this age of going the limit.

The cloth covered casket allows less scope, but it can run away with expense far beyond the dreams of the multitude who can't get beyond a black one at a hundred dollars or a gray one at a hundred and fifty. It is easy enough to pay from one to two thousand dollars.

The casket in which the late H. H. Rogers was buried was an exceedingly costly one, though the two chief items of expense were hidden by the very best black broadcloth that could be imported. The casket proper was made of extra heavy mahogany, and there was a copper lining, with a full length bevel plate glass, and the extension handles were special oxidized ones.

For one thing, other colors are less sombre. Any shade of broadcloth or of velvet or plush, plain or embossed, may be had. This is less to favor the family's taste than to follow out one of the most extraordinary ideas of modern undertaking—the actual catering to known preference of the deceased. Perhaps he or she had a liking for a certain color. Well, there you are, in the precise shade. Failing any deciding factor in that direction, the up-to-date undertaker will politely suggest that these are times when it is as well to buy burial caskets as carefully as upholstered sofas. You think that you will order a purple casket.

"Um," says Mr. Undertaker, "I've just looked over the room in which the body is to be placed, and, really—well, I wouldn't advise having a purple casket in a room where the whole color scheme is red." Couldn't he suggest this or that instead? Then he will go on to say that modish folk are getting in the way of considering those things now. True, a house funeral is all over in a matter of minutes, but so long as your drawing room is finished in white mahogany, let him give you a casket of the same material. Then there will be, oh such harmony! No matter what the woodwork is he will match it in wood, and no matter what the color of the fabric of the hangings and wall covering you can be guaranteed against any clashing. "Consider the fittings of your funeral room in every instance," is his great injunction.

Time was, too, when "burial shroud" was in everybody's vocabulary. Nowadays ships have shrouds, but people no longer have them. One is not only buried in one's clothes nowadays, but in one's best "bib and tucker."

The shrouds that the old-time undertaker always kept on hand are now supplanted by "burial robes," whose fashions change just as frequently as they do in the garments of everyday wear. The undertaker's display looks as if he were catering to the quick instead of the dead. As a matter of fact, his stock does come in handy for the quick—sometimes.

The cry of the undertaker nowadays is that as you dress in life, so must you dress in death, and as a consequence his stock must be absolutely up-to-date.

The shroud for women, which was the last to go, went out with extension of the glass casket top to full length. Then came the drop-side and couch caskets, that gave every reason for indulgence in dress display, the occupant being so arranged as to appear to be lying on a sofa. Down to the very footgear, everything now must be perfection.

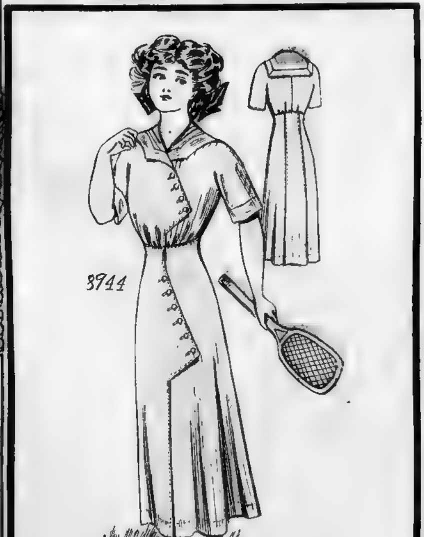
Nº 8944·Summer·Costume·For·Misses·And·Women·—



·Two·Desirable Models Easily· Made At Home By The Home Dressmaker

NO. 8944.—COSTUME FOR MISSES AND WOMEN.

STRIPED gingham in white and lavender, with facings of lavender is here shown. The sailor collar forms a most effective finish for this charming waist. The fronts are cut with a side closing, and the skirt front corresponds. The pattern is cut in five sizes—14, 15, 16, 17 and 18 years. It requires 5 yards of 44-inch material for the 16-year size.

The pattern has also been made up in sizes for ladies, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure.

NO. 8975.—A UNIQUE IDEA IN BEACH ATTIRE.

FOR the woman who is averse to walking to the beach in a knee-length skirt this design will at once appeal, for she may wear this garment without any feeling of discomfort or annoyance, and enjoy the bathing with as much freedom as if she wore a scant bathing suit.

The garment here shown comprises a coat or robe adjusted over bloomers, that are held in place by a "skeleton" underwaist, which may be finished with a shield front or in low-neck style. On going into the water the robe is drawn up by means of a cord or drawstring concealed under the trimming at the hips, thus transforming the garment into a short skirt and blouse, the surplus length being tucked under the cord. On leaving the water the cord is released and the garment falls back into place as a coat or robe.

The pattern is cut in three sizes—small, medium and large. It requires 7¼ yards of 44-inch material for the medium size.

To obtain either of these two desirable patterns, fill in the accompanying coupon and mail, with 10 cents in silver or stamps, to
